PREFACE.

I SHOULD willingly have ſaved the Reader and myſelf the Trouble of a Preface, if it had not been neceſſary to give him ſome Information, relating as well to the Life of Dr. Pocock, as the preſent Edition of his Theological Works.

WITH reſpect to the former of theſe, I am to acquaint him, that Dr. Pocock's Life was begun to be written forty Years ago, by the Reverend and Learned Mr. Humphrey Smith, Vicar of Townſtoll, and St. Saviour's, Dartmouth, in the County of Devon. At whoſe Inſtance he firſt undertook the Work, I know not; but he was greatly encouraged and aſſiſted therein, by the Doctor's eldeſt Son, the Reverend Mr. Edward Pocock, Rector of Minall near Marlborough, in Wiltſhire, and Prebendary of Sarum: No Pains were ſpared by either of them to procure Materials for the Deſign. Mr. Pocock made all the neceſſary Searches at Oxford, and tranſmitted the Reſult of them, together with the Papers in his own Cuſtody, that concerned the Work, to Mr. Smith; he, on the other Hand, wrote to all Dr. Pocock's ſurviving Friends, particularly to Dr. Wallis, Archbiſhop Marſh, Mr. Locke, Dr. Huntington, Dr. Smith, Dr. Mill, Dr. Hickman, Dr. Francis Atterbury, Dr. Lancaſter, Dean Aldrich, &c. deſiring from them ſuch Notices, as they could recollect about him, and what Letters they had of his in their Poſſeſſion. Some Intelligence came in this Way; but to the great Diſcouragement of Mr. Smith, it was found, that the greateſt Part of the Letters, which had paſſed between Dr. Pocock and the Learned, both at home and abroad, for full ſixty Years, was entirely given for loſt. It ſeems, thoſe Papers, in order to their Publication, had, ſoon after Dr. Pocock's Death, been put into the Hands of Dr. Arthur Charlett, then Fellow of Trinity in Oxford, and afterwards Maſter of Univerſity-College; and to him Mr. Pocock applied, to get them for the Uſe of Mr. Smith, as ſoon as he underſtood the Deſign he had to write his Father's Life; but after long Search among his Papers, Dr. Charlett, not finding them, concluded, they were irretrievably loſt in the Removal of his Books and Papers from Trinity to Univerſity-College. Such, however, was Mr. Smith's Zeal for preſerving the Memory of Dr. Pocock, that he reſolved to attempt his Hiſtory upon the Strength of thoſe imperfect Memoirs, that could be come at. With this Reſolution he began, and drew up the Doctor's Story, fairly written, and ſcored for the Preſs, down to the Reſtoration, and left behind him a foul Copy of the ſame, continued for three Years further; but here he ſtopt, either diſcouraged by Want of ſufficient Lights, or by ill Health, and probably by both.

I FEAR the World will be but too ſenſible of its Loſs, through the Change of Hands employed about the Life of our Author. Mr. Smith was excellently qualified for the Undertaking, and, had he been ſupplied with the Papers, which ſince his Time have come to light, would have finiſhed the Life with greater Advantage, than it can now reaſonably pretend to.

IT was once, therefore, my Intention to have obliged the Publick with what my Predeceſſor in the Work had prepared, diſtinct, and to have thrown all the neceſſary Additions and Alterations into Notes at the Bottom of each Page; but the Bulk and Number of them ſoon convinced me, that ſuch a Method would cauſe too great an Interruption to the Thread of the Hiſtory, and that whatever Diſadvantage it might be to Mr. Smith's Performance, there was a Neceſſity to work up all together. Beſides, where authentick Information failed him, he was compelled to proceed upon Conjectures, which the Papers, ſince found, diſcover to have been, in ſome Inſtances, wide of the Mark; and I was by no Means fond of pointing out and correcting the Errors into which that worthy Gentleman fell, through a Misfortune, as unavoidable, as it was piteous. However, to make Satisfaction for any Injury, that may have been done to Mr. Smith's Part in the Narrative, by a Mixture with mine, I declare myſelf content, that whatever ſhines in our joint Work be placed to his Account, and that all of a different Character be deemed mine.

I FURTHER think it a Debt to the Memory of this worthy Perſon, that he, who took ſo much Pains to tranſmit to Poſterity the Hiſtory of Dr. Pocock, ſhould himſelf be known to the World by more Circumſtances, than merely thoſe of his Name and Preferments. But beſides this, I have a particular Reaſon for laying before the World a ſhort Account of Mr. Smith's Life, which is, that ſome Things in his MS. Life reſt wholly on his Veracity, the Vouchers and Authorities for them having died with him. It is fitting, therefore, that Strangers to the Character of this Gentleman ſhould know how reſponſible a one it was.

Mr. Humphrey Smith was born in the Pariſh of Chew Stoke, in the County of Somerſet, and there baptized the 12th Day of January, 1654: His Father was Mr. Jaſper Smith, a worthy and loyal Gentleman of that Place, who underwent Impriſonment, and Sequeſtration of his whole Eſtate, in thoſe Times, for his Zeal and Activity in the King's Service. He was put to School in his native Place, under the Care of the Reverend Mr. Robert Paine, from whom he went to the Univerſity of Oxford, about the Year 1671, being admitted of Queen's-College, where he ſtaid, till he had taken the Degree of Bachelor of Arts; after this, he took Holy Orders from the Hands of Dr. Peter Mew, then Biſhop of Bath and Wells, and ſerved as a Curate in the Neighbourhood of Wells, till the Year 1680; at which Time he was preſented, by the Dean and Chapter of that Church, to the Vicarage of Long-Sutton, in the ſame Dioceſe, and ſome Time during his Incumbency there, commenced Maſter of Arts. In the Year 1685, he was by the Mayor and Magiſtrates of Clifton Dartmouth Hardnes, in Devonſhire, preſented to the Vicarage of Townſtoll and St. Saviour's, Dartmouth, of which they were Patrons, through the Recommendation of his Countryman and intimate Friend, Mr. Burſcough, then Vicar of Totneſs, and afterwards Archdeacon of Barnſtaple. Not long after his Induction, the Mayor and Magiſtrates of the Place freely granted Mr. Smith a Leaſe of the Impropriate Tithes of Townſtoll, belonging to them, without any Reſerve to themſelves, to continue in force during his Incumbency; for the like Term, and in the ſame generous Manner, they granted a Leaſe likewiſe to Mr. Smith's Succeſſor, Mr. Pritchard: The preſent worthy Incumbent, Mr. Henry Holdſworth[a], having a Grant of the like Leaſe for ſixty Years, if he ſhould ſo long continue Vicar; A rare Inſtance of Generoſity in Lay Impropriators, for which that Corporation deſerves the higheſt Honour and Eſteem from thoſe, who love the eſtabliſhed Religion! But to return.

Mr. Smith was ſcarce fixed in his new Settlement, when he was attacked by two zealous and eminent Teachers of the Separation, Mr. Flavel and Mr. Carey, the former being of the Preſbyterian, and the latter of the Anabaptiſt Perſuaſion: Thoſe Gentlemen ſeemed to have promiſed themſelves an eaſy Conqueſt over a Perſon, ſo much younger, and more unexperienced than themſelves; but after the Exchange of ſeveral Letters with each of them, in their reſpective Ways, they were convinced of their Miſtake, in thinking, that he had Zeal without Knowledge. They found him wiſe above his Years, of ſolid Learning and ſound Judgment: Inſomuch, that they are credibly reported, both of them, to have confeſſed their Surprize, at the ready and ingenious Anſwers they received from him. Upon this they forbore to aſſault him any more openly, endeavouring to diſcredit him by ſly Inſinuations, and invidious Reflections upon his Preaching.

He had delivered two Funeral Sermons in the Years 1687 and 1689, at which great Offence was taken, and Clamours raiſed by the Friends of the Separation: Some Miſreports concerning the former of theſe Diſcourſes, he had Reaſon to believe, were partly owing to one of the Teachers above-mentioned. Out of Regard, therefore, to his own injured Reputation, he wrote three Letters to that Gentleman, and being able to draw only ſome doubtful Anſwers to the two firſt, and none at all to the laſt, he was in the End obliged to print both the Sermons together, and gave the Reaſons for their Publication in the Preface.

Some Years after, the like ungenerous Treatment obliged Mr. Smith to print two other Sermons, preached at his own Pariſh Church the Sunday before the Election of Burgeſſes to ſerve in Parliament for that Corporation, in the Year 1698: Theſe Sermons, in which he recommended Steadineſs in Religion, and Zeal for the Intereſt of the eſtabliſhed Church, underwent ſo much Cenſure from thoſe, who were diſaffected, or very cooly affected to it, that he was obliged to make them publick; and to theſe he added a Letter to a Friend, (Mr. Archdeacon Burſcough) in which he endeavoured to refute thoſe, who ignorantly, or elſe maliciouſly affirm, that the only Difference between the Church and the Meeting-houſe is, that of a few Ceremonies.

In the Year 1701, he put to the Preſs a Treatiſe, giving an Account of the Nature and Guilt of Schiſm, being a Defence of Mr. Burſcough's Diſcourſe on that Subject: To which he added ſome Paſſages out of Mr. Flavel's Fountain of Life opened, recommending to the Conſideration of thoſe, who ſhould have the Care of the new Edition of his Works, that they may either reconcile them to the Holy Scriptures, or elſe expunge them.

These important Services to the eſtabliſhed Church recommended Mr. Smith to the Notice of his Biſhop, Sir Jonathan Trelawney, and to the Eſteem of his Brethren of the Clergy in that large Dioceſe: Of this the former gave a handſome Teſtimony, by collating him to a Prebend in the Cathedral of Exeter, in September of the Year 1703; and the latter, by chuſing him one of their Repreſentatives in Convocation, though he did not very long ſurvive the Honour hereby done him.

[a] This Gentleman, at the Deſire of his Brother, and my very good Friend, Dr. Holdſworth, of Chalfont, St. Peter's, in Buckinghamſhire, ſupplied me with theſe Particulars concerning Mr. Smith.

His

His laſt publick Work, was a Sermon preach'd at Totneſs, at the Viſitation of the Archdeacon of that Place, May 17, 1708, and printed, at his, and the Clergy's joint Requeſt. The Title of it was, The divine Authority and Uſefulneſs of Church Cenſures aſſerted.

From this Time, a conſumptive Diſorder increaſing upon him, he died, Nov. 17, 1708.

By his laſt Will, he left an Eſtate of his in Truſt, after the Deceaſe of his Widow, for raiſing 1000 Pounds towards the Augmentation of ſmall Benefices; and by a Schedule annexed thereto, he ordered, that all the Papers he had received from Mr. Edward Pocock, ſhould be returned to him, and with them, ſo much of Dr. Pocock's Life, as had been already written by him; which was accordingly performed, ſave that ſome of the Papers being loſt, or miſlaid, never came to hand.

AFTER this, the Deſign, for want of ſufficient Materials, lay dormant many Years; and that it ever was reſumed, is owing to the Care and Goodneſs of a worthy Gentlemen, Thomas Rawlins, Eſq; of Popphills in Warwickſhire, Nephew and Executor to Dr. Charlett, who, among his Unkle's Papers, after his Deceaſe, found the Letters before-mentioned, and moſt obligingly communicated them to the Reverend Mr. John Pocock, Grandſon to the great Profeſſor, and Rector of Minall near Marlborough, in Wilts, who preſſed me to fill up and compleat what Mr. Smith had ſo happily begun. Thus much for the Life.

AS to the preſent Edition of Dr. Pocock's Theological Works, a very learned and eminent Perſon, whom I conſulted about the Life, propos'd to me, to re-publiſh his Commentaries, and Porta Moſis, which were become exceeding ſcarce, and conſequently very dear; and as that Gentleman's Advice, with me, has always had the Force of a Command, I readily complied with it; and having obtained the Conſent of Mr. Pocock, the Proprietor of the ſeveral Copies, I, without Loſs of Time, ſet about it.

MY Propoſals for printing the Work, through the Aſſiſtance of my Friends in London, the two Univerſities, and elſewhere, in a competent Time, brought in Subſcriptions enough to encourage the putting it to the Preſs. But I ſhould be chargeable with Ingratitude, if I did not, in an eſpecial Manner, own the high Obligations I have to the Right Honourable the Lord Bruce, to whoſe powerful Sollicitations, I owe the greateſt Part of my illuſtrious Subſcribers; nor muſt I neglect this Opportunity of acknowledging the many other Honours and Courteſies, which that noble Lord has for ſeveral Years heaped upon me.

MY next Concern was to get a proper Perſon to correct the Preſs. The Diſtance of my Habitation at that Time from it, and in ſome Reſpects, my own Inſufficiency, gave me no ſmall Uneaſineſs. But here I was happily, and I may ſay providentially, relieved by the uncommon Generoſity of the very Learned and Reverend Mr. Hunt, Chaplain to the Right Honourable the Earl of Macclesfield, and now a worthy Succeſſor to our Profeſſor in the Arabick Chair at Oxford. This Gentleman, then unknown to me, hearing of my Diſtreſs, out of his great Humanity, juſt Regard to the Memory of our Author, and Zeal for promoting ſacred Knowledge, voluntarily offered his gratuitous Help, which he hath, with unwearied Patience and Chearfulneſs, afforded us throughout the Impreſſion. And if this Edition ſhall appear incomparably more correct than the former, as I doubt not but it will, the World knows to whom it is principally indebted for that Advantage.

THE Reader is further to know, that the Arabick Types were kindly ſupplied by The Society for Promoting Chriſtian Knowledge, through an Application made to them, by the Reverend and Learned Mr. Arthur Bedford, of Hoxton.

MR. Hunt had not proceeded far in correcting the Preſs, before he found the Errors in the former Edition of the Commentaries, eſpecially in the Notes, and Marks of Reference, ſo very numerous, as greatly retarded the Work. Of this he juſtly made his Complaints to me, and finding upon Enquiry, that moſt of the original Copy of the Commentaries had been preſerved in the Author's own Hand-writing, it was the eaſier to correct them, though collating ſo large a Work, was no ſmall Expence of Time and Pains to me. Some Parts, however, of Micah were miſſing in the Original, to which Accident it muſt be imputed, that one or two of the Notes and References in that Commentary, are leſs correct than the reſt. Of this, however, I am confident, that by the Help of the original Papers, I corrected more than a thouſand Errors, chiefly in the Notes; and Mr. Hunt aſſures me, that he amended more than twice that Number in the Text. We cannot ſay from what the Incorrectneſs of the former Edition proceeded, but moſt probably it was owing to the Negligence of the Perſon, whom Dr. Pocock truſted with correcting after the Preſs. Thus the Work proceeded with all the Expedition which the Nature of it would admit of, and had been publiſhed much ſooner, if I could have been more forward with the Life of the Author; which I moſt certainly had been, but for my unforeſeen Removal to Town, and the Engagements I came under in conſequence of that Change. Not expecting any extraordinary Interruption, I reſerved the Life to the laſt, in Hopes that Time would bring in more Materials, which has protracted the Delivery of the Books, and for which I heartily beg Pardon of the Publick. All I can ſay for myſelf is, that the Delay has not been affected, and that I have ſpared no Pains to perfect the Edition, as far as it was in my Power. The compiling of a new general Index, was a Taſk equally laborious and illiberal; and the accommodating that, and the other Indexes, to the Difference of Pages in the new Impreſſion, was both tedious and unpleaſant; but all that I ſhall eſteem as nothing, if the World will but accept my good Intentions, and forgive all Failings.

IT may ſeem ſtrange to ſome, that the Works of ſo learned and famous a Writer as Dr. Pocock, at leaſt his Theological ones, were never jointly printed before; but ſuch may pleaſe to know, that Sebaſtian Petzoldus, Librarian extraordinary to the Elector of Brandenburg, in the Year 1700, was preparing an Edition of all Dr. Pocock's Works in Folio, at Amſterdam, of which Notice was given in the Works of the Learned, for the Month of February, that Year; but of this Deſign, and of the Cauſes of its Miſcarriage, I can ſay no more. All that has been actually done, in whole, or in part, towards a Republication of our Author's Works, is, that a ſecond Edition of his Commentaries on Micah and Malachi, was printed at the Theatre in Oxford, the Year after his Death; and in the Year 1695, was printed at Leipſic, a Latin Tranſlation of his Commentary upon Joel, to which, beſides what belongs to that Commentary, is prefix'd, the Preface to Micah.

I HAVE now nothing more to add, but my humble Thanks to thoſe worthy Friends of mine, who aſſiſted in procuring Subſcriptions to this Work. They are too numerous to be particularly mentioned, and too deſerving utterly to be paſſed over in Silence.

Of the Reverend and Moſt Learned

Dr. EDWARD POCOCK.

SECTION I.

DR. Pocock was born on the eighth Day of November, in the Year of our Lord 1604. He was the Son of Mr. Edward Pocock, Bachelor of Divinity, ſome Time Fellow of St. Mary Magdalen-College in Oxford, but then Vicar of Chievely in Berks. It happened, that the Place of his Birth, was that, wherein he was to ſpend the greateſt Part of his Life. For his Father having been lately preſented to the Vicarage before mentioned, could not yet order his Affairs to ſettle upon it, but was forced, it ſeems, for ſome Time, to leave his Family in Oxford; and there, within the Pariſh of St. Peter's in the Weſt, this his eldeſt Son Edward was born.

HIS Infancy diſcovered ſuch promiſing Parts, as eaſily drew his Parents to dedicate him to Religion and Learning: And for that Purpoſe he was early ſent to the Free-School at Tame in Oxfordſhire. The School-maſter there, to whoſe Care he was committed, was Mr. Richard Butcher, Bachelor of Law, a Man of great Accuracy in Grammatical Learning, whoſe Skill and Induſtry the Doctor, even in his old Age, would often very gratefully remember. The Diligence of that worthy Perſon, meeting with an extraordinary Capacity in this his Scholar, was bleſſed with a more than common Succeſs: For he was no ſooner come to the Age of fourteen Years, but he was thought fit for the Univerſity; and accordingly, being brought to Oxford, he was entered in Magdalen-Hall: And after two Years Stay in that Place, his Merits recommended him, upon a ſtrict Examination, to a Scholar's Place in Corpus-Chriſti College, to which he was admitted, Dec. 11, 1620.

BY all our Enquiries we cannot learn who was his Tutor in the Hall, but are aſſured, by a late Writer [a], that Mr. Gamaliel Chaſe, Bachelor of Divinity, and Fellow of Corpus-Chriſti, was his Tutor in that College. Of whom the ſame Author [b] gives this Character. 'He was 'a Man of great Piety, and of deep and ſound Learning; inſomuch that he was juſtly inti-'tled to the Character of a great Man.' Afterwards, as we learn from the ſame Hand, he became Rector of Wambrook in Dorſetſhire, and Vicar of Warcomb in Devon, both which he loſt, in the Grand Rebellion, for his Adherence to the King and the Church. At the ſame Time, his temporal Eſtate of 100*l. per Annum*, was ſequeſtered, his Wife and ſeven Children expoſed to the greateſt Neceſſities, and his Goods, not excepting his Books and Papers, entirely carried away, and himſelf impriſoned. He ſurvived the Reſtoration many Years, was reſtored to both his Preferments, and died not till about the Year 1680. It is not to be wondered at, if, under ſuch Direction, Mr. Pocock imbibed thoſe Sentiments of Religion and Loyalty, which diſtinguiſhed him in the future Conduct of his Life; and ſtill leſs, that he made a very conſiderable Progreſs in his Studies. He ſoon appeared eminent in all thoſe Parts of Learning, which are commonly taught in Univerſities. To thoſe Arts and Sciences, which the ordinary Diſcipline obliged him to be acquainted with, he added the Knowledge of the beſt Writers, both Greek and Roman. For in ſome Papers, written by him when very young, there are ſuch Obſervations out of Quintilian, Cicero, Plutarch, Plato, and other Authors, as ſpeak a great deal of Skill and Judgment. And there are too, in the ſame Papers, the Marks of a mighty Induſtry: For it being ſometimes his Cuſtom, to note the Time, when he began the Peruſal of any Treatiſe, it thereby appears, that the reading and conſidering that whole Dialogue de Oratoribus, by ſome aſcribed to Tacitus, but commonly printed with Quintilian's Works, was the Buſineſs only of one Day.

ON Nov. 28, 1622. being but very little more than eighteen Years old, he was admitted to the Degree of Bachelor of Arts. And, having already made a conſiderable Progreſs in the ordinary Paths of Learning, he began in a ſhort Time to betake himſelf to ſome of the more retired, and untrodden Walks of it; applying his Mind, with great Diligence, to the Study of the Eaſtern Languages. For which, he had the Advantage of a ſkilful Director, in Matthias Paſor, a German, the Son of George Paſor, a learned Profeſſor at Herborn, the Author of the Greek Lexicon to the New Teſtament. This Matthias Paſor, having been Profeſſor of Mathematicks in the Univerſity of Heidelberg, whence he was driven by the late Troubles which befel the Palatinate, [c] came to Oxford, and there being incorporated Maſter of Arts, as he had ſtood at Heidelberg [d], for his Maintenance, he not only taught in a private Chamber, the Sciences he had profeſſed in his own Country; but alſo the Oriental Tongues, reading for ſome Time an Arabick Lecture twice a Week publickly in the Divinity School, upon the Encouragement of a Penſion collected from his Auditors. Dr. Pocock would, upon all Occaſions, expreſs a great Regard to the Memory of this Perſon, whom he was wont frequently to commend, as for a very learned, ſo likewiſe for a very honeſt and good Man. He was Scholar to him for Languages, at the ſame Time that the late [e] Lord Radnor was for Mathematicks.

THE Statutes of the College requiring ſome Delay, he did not take the Degree of Maſter of Arts till March 28, 1626. And ſoon after that, I ſuppoſe it was, that being arriv'd at as great a Height in Oriental Learning, as Mr. Paſor could lead him to, he applied himſelf for farther Inſtruction to Mr. William Bedwell, Vicar of Tottenham High-Croſs, near London: A Perſon, to whom the Praiſe of being the firſt who conſiderably promoted the Study of the Arabick Language in Europe, may perhaps more juſtly belong, than to Thomas Erpenius, who commonly has it. This Mr. Bedwell had made a vaſt Progreſs in the Knowledge of that Tongue, before Erpenius had any Name in the World for Skill in it. And as the latter ſpent ſome Time in England, about the Year 1606, he was obliged to the former for many Directions, which he received from him in that Sort of Learning. Beſides ſeveral Books, which Mr. Bedwell publiſhed relating to it, he employed himſelf many Years in preparing an Arabick Lexicon in three Volumes; and, was at the Pains of a Voyage into Holland, to peruſe the Papers of Joſeph Scaliger, who had made a Collection, as he declar'd himſelf [f], of twenty thouſand Words in that Language. But being, as [g] Iſaac Caſaubon complained of him, ſlow in his Proceeding, doubtleſs out of a Deſire that the great Work he was engaged in, ſhould be as perfect as might be; at length, Golius's Undertaking of the ſame Kind, who had furniſhed himſelf to the beſt Advantage from the Eaſt, made the Publication of it uſeleſs.

MR. Pocock profited much under the Inſtructions of this learned Man; and, the Advances he made in ſeveral uncommon Sorts of Literature, could not but meet with Encouragement from that learned Society, whereof he was a Member; who, as a Proof of their juſt Regard for him, admitted him Probationer Fellow, July 24, 1628. And now the Statutes of the College providing that he ſhould ſpeedily enter into holy Orders, it was high Time for him to add the Study of Theology to his former Acquirements, which were only preparatory for it. And this, I cannot doubt but he betook himſelf to, in the Method, which had been, ſome Years before, recommended to the Univerſity of Oxford, by that learned and judicious Prince, King James I. [h] namely, not by inſiſting on modern Compendiums and Tracts of Divinity, but by applying himſelf chiefly to Fathers and Councils, Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians and other antient Writers, together with the ſacred Text, the Word of God. For tho' he perus'd the Books of ſome late Writers in Divinity, it was not, I find, to form his Notions in Matters of Religion, according to their Conceptions and Opinions, but to take their Direction about ſeveral Pieces of Antiquity, in order to a general Knowledge of their Nature and Excellency, and to diſtinguiſh the genuine, from ſuch as are of doubtful Original, or manifeſtly ſpurious. This, in particular, I learn from ſome Papers begun to be written by him, Sept. 7, 1629, was the Uſe he made of a Treatiſe of ſome Account, then reprinted at Oxford, namely, Ger. Voſſius's Theſes Theologicæ, out of which he collected ſeveral Things of this Nature, and of no other.

BUT amidſt his Theological Studies, it was impoſſible for him to lay aſide all Regard for thoſe Eaſtern Languages, to which his Mind was ſo addicted, and on which he had beſtowed ſo much Time and Pains. He therefore, about this Time, purſued a Deſign, wherein both were join'd together, and that was, the fitting for the Preſs thoſe Parts of the Syriack Verſion of the New Teſtament, which had never yet been publiſhed. Ignatius, the Jacobite Patriarch of Antioch, had, in the laſt Age, ſent Moſes Meridinæus, a Prieſt of Meſopotamia, into the Weſt, to get that Verſion printed, in order to the carrying back a ſufficient Number of Copies, for the Uſe of his Churches. And this Work, by the Care and Diligence of Albertus Widmanſtadius, was very well performed at Vienna, A. D. 1555. But the Syriack New Teſtament, thus brought out of the Eaſt, and followed in that Impreſſion, wanted the ſecond Epiſtle of St. Peter, the ſecond and third Epiſtles of St. John, the Epiſtle of St. Jude, and the [e] This noble Perſon was Son and Heir to Richard Robarts, the firſt Lord Robarts of Truro, ſo created, Jan. 16, 21 Jac. 1. to whom he ſucceeded, and was afterwards created Viſcount Bodmyn and Earl of Radnor, July 23, 23 Car. 2. whole Book of the Revelation: Becauſe, as a learned Man [i] conjectures, thoſe Parts of Holy Scripture, tho' extant amongſt them, were not yet received into the Canon, by thoſe Oriental Churches. This Defect no Body took Care to ſupply, till that very learned Perſon, Ludovicus de Dieu, on the Encouragement and with the Aſſiſtance of Daniel Heinſius, ſet about the Revelation; being furniſhed with a Copy of it, which had been given with many other Manuſcripts, to the Univerſity of Leyden, by the famous Joſeph Scaliger. That Verſion of the Apocalypſe was printed at Leyden, in the Year 1627. but ſtill the four Epiſtles were wanting, and thoſe Mr. Pocock undertakes, being deſirous that the whole New Teſtament might at length be publiſhed in that Language, which was the Vulgar Tongue of our Bleſſed Saviour himſelf and his holy Apoſtles. A very fair Manuſcript for this Purpoſe he had met with in that vaſt Treaſure of Learning, the Bodleian Library; containing thoſe Epiſtles, together with ſome other Parts of the New Teſtament. Out of this Manuſcript, following the Example of de Dieu, he tranſcribed thoſe Epiſtles in the Syriack Character; the ſame he likewiſe ſet down in Hebrew Letters, adding the Points, not according to the Ordinary, but the Syriack Rules, as they had been delivered by thoſe learned Maronites, Amira and Sionita. He alſo made a new Tranſlation of theſe Epiſtles, out of Syriack into Latin, comparing it with that of Etzelius, and ſhewing, upon all conſiderable Occaſions, the Reaſon of his Diſſent from him. Moreover, he added the Original Greek, concluding the Whole with a good Number of learned and uſeful Notes.

THIS Work was finiſhed by him, when he was yet but four and twenty Years old; and, tho' he performed it with the utmoſt Care and Exactneſs, yet ſo great was his Modeſty and Diſtruſt of himſelf, that he could not be perſuaded to think it fit for Publication, till after it had lain by him about a Year, when he ſuffered it to be printed upon the following Occaſion.

GERARD John Voſſius, at this Time a Profeſſor at Leyden, being of great Fame throughout the World for his extraordinary Learning, had a particular Reſpect paid him by ſome of the Nobility, and many learned Men of the Engliſh Nation [k]. He had publiſhed ſeveral excellent Books, particularly his Pelagian Hiſtory: Wherein, as he had expreſſed more Temper and Moderation, than ſome of his Countrymen, ſo he manifeſted a juſt Eſteem for Eccleſiaſtical Antiquity, which no Church in the World had a truer Regard for, than that of England. Being on theſe Accounts much valued by his Friends in this Nation, he had ſome Time ſince been earneſtly preſſed to accept of a Profeſſor's Place, with a very honourable Salary, in the Univerſity of Cambridge; and now, was invited by a Meſſage from his Majeſty King Charles I. to a Prebend in the Church of Canterbury. The firſt of theſe Offers he had refuſed, as not agreeing with his Circumſtances, which would not admit of a Remove from his own Country: But the latter he readily cloſed with, having been aſſured that Reſidence would not be expected from him. To be inſtalled in this Prebend, he comes into England; and there making a Viſit to the Univerſity of Oxford, where he was receiv'd with all the Marks of a very great Eſteem, he ſpent much of his Time, during his Stay, in viewing the Manuſcripts, and other Rarities of the publick Library. Amongſt other Things, he took particular Notice of the Syriack Manuſcript of the Epiſtles, which gave Occaſion to Mr. John Rouſe, the chief Librarian, to acquaint him with Mr. Pocock's Performance. Voſſius, being extremely pleaſed with what he thus heard, deſir'd to ſee both the Author and the Work. And, after much Diſcourſe with him, and a diligent Examination of that, he made it his earneſt Requeſt, that what ſo well deſerved to ſee the Light, ſhould no longer be kept in Darkneſs.

MR. Pocock was overcome by the Perſuaſions of a Man, againſt whoſe Judgment he could have no Exception. And being alſo further encouraged by the Promiſe he made, that it ſhould, by his Procurement, be carefully printed in Holland, he preſently took Care to add a Preface and a Dedication. And the Patron he made Choice of was Voſſius himſelf, to whom he addreſſed this Work in Terms of much Deference and Reſpect. Voſſius, upon his Arrival at Leyden, committed the Care of the Edition to the learned Ludovicus de Dieu, who gladly received Mr. Pocock's Papers, and after a diligent Peruſal of them, wrote to him, highly commending the Fidelity of his Tranſcript, the Juſtneſs of his Verſion, and the Learning of his Notes. At the ſame Time he propoſes ſeveral Emendations in the Pointing of the Hebrew Character, and one in that of the Syriack, together with two Alterations in the Latin Verſion, and likewiſe one additional Note, intending to delay the Impreſſion, till he could receive Mr. Pocock's Anſwer, without whoſe Conſent, he reſolved, as himſelf expreſſes it, to interpolate nothing. After that was come to hand, de Dieu put the Epiſtles to the Preſs, and when the Edition was finiſhed, he wrote a ſecond Time to Mr. Pocock; and congratulates him on that Occaſion. From this ſecond Letter it appears, that the Reply to the firſt brought Conſent to moſt of the deſired Amendments. And accordingly all of them, except three, ſtand, as propoſed, in the printed Work. Beſides which, de Dieu had a Commiſſion to make what further Alterations he ſhould find expedient. In Purſuance of which he proceeded to other Emendations with Voſſius's Advice, in Number ſix, of which he gives an Account in his ſecond Letter, with his Reaſons for each of them: They all concerned the Latin Verſion. The Edition being thus finiſhed, a conſiderable Number of Copies were ſent, by Voſſius, as a a Preſent to the Author at Oxford, together with due Acknowledgments of the Uſefulneſs of the Work, and of the Affection and Honour expreſſed in the Dedication. And, indeed, that moſt learned Man entertain'd on this Occaſion, ſuch a Value for Mr. Pocock, that, tho' he was thirty Years older, and a Sort of Dictator in the Common-wealth of Learning, he treated him ever after with all the Kindneſs and Familiarity of a Friend. He correſponded with him by frequent Letters, ſome of which have been made publick[l]; he preſented him with the Books he publiſhed; and, upon all Occaſions, made honourable mention of him to the Day of his Death.

SOME Time in the Year 1629, Mr. Charles Robſon of Queen's College in Oxford, returned from being Chaplain to the Engliſh Merchants at Aleppo, and the Vacancy thereby made, Mr. Pocock was appointed to fill, being now in holy Orders. That of Prieſt was conferred on him by Richard Corbett, Biſhop of Oxford, Dec. 20, 1629. By whom alſo he had ſome Time before been made a Deacon. We cannot ſay, to whom it was Mr. Pocock was indebted for his laſt mentioned Preferment. Biſhop Laud was in himſelf a moſt obſerving and munificent Patron of Learning, and being then Biſhop of London, had the Direction of religious Affairs abroad. On both which Accounts he might naturally be ſuppos'd to have recommended him to that Poſt, were it not that the firſt Letter written by that Prelate to Mr. Pocock at Aleppo, and dated, Oct. 30, 1631, plainly diſcovers that they had then no Acquaintance with each other: And that the Biſhop having no Intereſt of his own in the Chaplain at Aleppo, wrote to him in the Strength of Mr. Bedwell's Acquaintance.

I CANNOT meet with any Account of the Circumſtances of his Departure from England, nor of his Voyage, till he came to Scanderoon; where having been long at Sea, he arrived, I find, Oct. 14, 1630, and came three Days after to Aleppo. Being a Man of a meek and humble Temper, and naturally in Love with Retirement and Peace, he did not (as many Travellers do) carry with him a violent Deſire of viewing ſtrange Countries. Nay, he was ſo far from being delighted, either with what he had already ſeen, or the Place where he was now ſettled; that in a Letter, written about two Months after his Arrival, to Mr. Thomas Greaves, a very ſtudious young Man, then Scholar of Corpus-Chriſti, he gave but a very melancholy Account of himſelf. 'My chief Solace, ſaid he, is the Remembrace of my Friends, 'and my former Happineſs, when I was among them. Happy you that enjoy thoſe Places, 'where I ſo often wiſh myſelf, as I ſee the barbarous People of this Country. I think that 'he that hath once been out of England, if he get home, will not eaſily be perſuaded to 'leave it again. There is nothing that may make a Man envy a Traveller.' However, being abroad, he reſolved that his natural Averſion for ſuch a Kind of Life, ſhould not make him neglect the doing any Thing in the Poſt he was in, which was either his Duty to God, or might anſwer the Expectation of good and learned Men.

ABOVE all other Things he carefully applied himſelf to the Buſineſs of his Place, as Chaplain to the Factory; performing the ſolemn Duties of Religion in that decent and orderly Manner, which our Church requires. He was diligent in Preaching, exhorting his Countrymen, in a plain, but very convincing Way, to Piety, Temperance, Juſtice and Love, and all thoſe Chriſtian Virtues or Graces, which would both ſecure to them the Favour and Protection of the Almighty, and alſo adorn their Converſation, rendering it comely in the Sight of an unbelieving Nation. And what he labour'd to perſuade others to, he duly practiſed himſelf; propoſing to his Hearers, in his own regular and unſpotted Life, a bright Example of the Holineſs he recommended.

As he was ſeldom or never drawn from the conſtant Performance of theſe Duties of his Charge, by a Curioſity tempting him to the View of other Places of that Country, ſo he would not omit what belong'd to his Office, even when attended with a very affrightning Danger. For in the Year 1634, as the Plague raged furiouſly in Aleppo, and many of the Merchants fled two Days Journey from it, and dwelt in Tents on the Mountains; he had that holy Confidence in the Providence of God, and that Readineſs to meet his good Pleaſure, whatever it ſhould be, that tho' he viſited them that were in the Country, he, for the moſt Part, continued to aſſiſt and comfort thoſe who had ſhut up themſelves in the City. And indeed, the Mercy of God (as he moſt thankfully acknowledged, in a Letter ſent a little after to a Friend in Oxford) was ſignally manifeſted, at that Time, towards him, and all our Nation belonging to that Factory. For tho' the Peſtilence waſted beyond the Example of former Times, not ceaſing, as uſually, at the Entrance of the Dog-Days, all the Engliſh were preſerved, as well they that continued in the Town, as they that fled from it. God covered them with his Protection, and was their Shield and Buckler againſt that terrible Deſtruction: A Thouſand fell at their Side, and Thouſands at their Right-hand, and yet it did not come nigh them.

DURING his Abode at this very melancholy Place (for ſo he always conſidered it) he diverted himſelf ſometimes with philoſophical Inquiries into thoſe Works of Nature, which were not to be met with in his own Country. For, I find, in a Letter of his to Mr. Thomas Greaves, a ſhort Deſcription of the Wonders of the Chameleon, and yet in ſome Reſpects as accurate as that of the Anatomiſts at Paris[m]; together with a Promiſe of further Obſervations, tions, as he ſhould have an Opportunity to make them. He noted the ſeveral Colours, into which he ſaw that Animal change itſelf; which were chiefly ſuch as are mingled of Green and Yellow. All Sorts of Green, from the darkeſt to the lighteſt, he obſerved it to take; and ſometimes with Spots, one while blackiſh, another aſh-coloured. And as for that Miſtake of Pliny [n] and ſome other of the Ancients, that it neither eats nor drinks, but lives wholly upon Air; he beheld the Confutation of it, as it darted out a long ſharp Tongue and caught Flies: And, was aſſur'd by the Gardeners, that it frequently did Miſchief to ſome of their Plants. However, tho' this Creature, as well as others, is ſupported by Food; he was convinced, as he kept it in a Box, that it could live indeed a conſiderable Time without any, at the leaſt, ſeveral Months.

BUT, as well became a Divine and a Chriſtian Philoſopher, his Inquiries of this Kind were chiefly made into thoſe Productions of Nature and Art, the Knowledge of which might give Light to ſome difficult Places of Holy Scripture. He was now in that Part of the World, wherein moſt of the ſacred Penmen wrote; and he could not therefore but conclude, that a true Account of ſeveral Things of it, which they have referr'd to, might explain ſome Paſſages in thoſe holy Writings; which have not yet, by many Interpreters, been very well underſtood. And, it will not, I ſuppoſe, be thought tedious, if I ſet down two or three Obſervations of this Kind, which are to be met with, among others, in his Papers and printed Books.

THERE are a Sort of Creatures mentioned in the Old Teſtament, which moſt Tranſlators render by the Name of Dragons, tho' the Property there aſcribed to them will not agree to the Nature of thoſe Animals. For we read in the Books of Naturaliſts and Hiſtorians, of no other Noiſe made by Dragons, but only that of Hiſſing; whereas in moſt Verſions, at Micah i. 8. we meet with the Howling or Wailing of Dragons. This Difficulty the learned Bochartus [o] endeavoured to ſolve, from a particular Fancy of ſome of the antient Jews, who ſuppos'd the erecting the Heads, and opening the Mouths of thoſe Creatures, to be a Sort of Lamentation to God, for the Lot that was befallen them. But the Obſervations made by Mr. Pocock, of thoſe Animals, call'd Jakales, or, according to the Turkiſh Pronunciation, Chacales, led him to agree with the antient Syriack Verſion, and an Arab one of Rabbi Saadias, in ſuppoſing that theſe are meant, and not Dragons, in that and ſome other Places of Scripture. They are, as he deſcribes them [p], a Kind of wild Dogs, between a Fox and a Wolf; and the Noiſe they make, is ſuch as none that travel in thoſe Parts in the Night, can be ignorant of. For abiding in the Fields and waſte Places, they howl ſo lamentably, that Perſons unacquainted with them, would conclude that a Company of Women and Children were wailing one to another. In this he was the more confirm'd by ſome Manuſcript Notes of Rabbi Tanchum of Jeruſalem, a learned Jew, who wrote on the whole Old Teſtament in Arabick, Part of which Mr. Pocock procured from the Eaſt. He obſerves it for an Error in Expoſitors, that in this and ſome other Places they render Dragons, where they ſhould render Jakales. The Reaſon of which Miſtake, he ſaith, is, that the Word which ſignifieth Jakales, in the Plural Number, is, in Writing, the ſame with that which ſignifieth a Dragon in the Singular, both Tannin. To prevent therefore this Miſtake, Mr. Pocock lays down this Rule: That whereſoever we meet with Tannim, or Tannin, or Tannoth, as Plurals, they ſignify thoſe howling wild Beaſts, inhabiting waſte deſolate Places: But where Tannim or Tannin in the Singular, or Tanninim in the Plural, they are to be rendered Dragons, or Serpents, or Sea-monſters, or Whales, according as they are ſpoken of Creatures on Land or in the Water.

THESE Jakales are ſo ravenous, that they will prey on dead Bodies, yea dig them out of their Graves, if not well covered. For which Reaſon he thinks [q] theſe Animals are meant, not only, Pſalm xliv. 19. by Tannim, which we and others tranſlate Dragons; but alſo, Pſalm lxiii. 10. by Shualim, which we render Foxes. The Name Jakale, he ſays, is borrowed from the Perſian Language, in which it is written Shegal, and is from the Hebrew Shual, which Word may comprehend both thoſe Kinds, which are not very different from each other.

NOT a few Paſſages we have alſo in Scripture, relating to the Thraſhing of Corn, which to him that only conſiders the Cuſtoms in that Matter, of common Uſe in theſe Parts, will appear very hard to be underſtoood. [r] We there read of thraſhing with Inſtruments of Iron, of thraſhing the Mountains, and beating them ſmall, and making the Hills as Chaff, with a new ſharp thraſhing Inſtrument having Teeth, as alſo of thraſhing with Oxen and Heifers, with a Cart-Wheel, and with Horſemen. And when the Daughter of Zion is commanded to ariſe and thraſh her Enemies, who ſhould be gathered as Sheaves into the Floor; ſhe was, we read, to be provided with Hoofs of Braſs to beat them in Pieces. In ſome other Places alſo, thraſhing and cutting ſeem to be the ſame Thing; as when the Heathen were to be aſſembled together, for a terrible Deſtruction, in the Valley of Jehoſhaphat, after the Preparation for the following Thraſhing or Execution, by putting the Sickle into the Harveſt, the Place of it is called the Valley of Deciſion, or Conciſion, of Thraſhing or Cutting aſunder. Now certainly, the Uſage among us of beating out Corn with a Flail, will give us no juſt Idea of the true Meaning of ſuch Expreſſions as theſe. Whereas, what Mr. Pocock obſerved of the Cuſtoms of thoſe Eaſtern People, makes them plain and intelligible: For he tells us, 'that the Harveſt being over, they lay the Sheaves in order, on a large Floor or Plain, made fit for that Purpoſe in the open Field, and there cauſe their Oxen, or other Beaſts, to draw over the Sheaves, ſo diſpos'd, either an Inſtrument made of heavy Planks of Wood, with ſharp Stones, or Flints, driven into it, or elſe two Iron Wheels dented with ſharp Teeth, and coupled with an Axel-tree or Beam of Wood; and that this Labour is not ended, till both the Grain is divided from the Huſk, and the Straw cut into ſmall Pieces; the latter being deſigned for proper Repoſitories, ſuch as Caves, or dry Wells, where it is kept to feed their Cattle, as the former is for the Granary.

SEVERAL Years after his Return into England, ſome Letters paſſed between him and Dr. Hammond, whilſt that very learned and pious Man was preparing his excellent Paraphraſe and Annotations on the New Teſtament, concerning that Inſtrument uſed in the Eaſt, for purging or cleanſing the Floor, which in our Tranſlation is ſtiled a Fan. Being ſaid in Scripture to be carried in the Hand, it cannot well be ſuppos'd to be any Contrivance of Sails, whereby to throw off the Duſt, and therefore was rationally concluded by Mr. Pocock (whoſe Opinion was followed by Dr. Hammond [t]) both from the Signification of the original Word, and thoſe Words it is rendered by in Syriack and Arabick, to be a Kind of Trident, made uſe of after the Thraſhing was over, by raiſing or toſſing up the Straw and Chaff, to ſeparate them from the Corn; or elſe a Sort of Shovel, which would produce the ſame Effect, by throwing the whole Heap in ſmall Parcels, to a good Diſtance, through the Air.

SUCH Remarks as theſe, ſo uſeful for underſtanding the ſacred Text, he was careful to make, as he met with convenient Opportunies for them. But another Buſineſs there was, in which he daily imployed himſelf; and which indeed took up the greateſt Part of that Time, which he could ſpare from the neceſſary Duties of Religion; and that was, the labouring to arrive at what Perfection he could in the Knowledge of the Eaſtern Languages.

SOON after his coming to Aleppo, he endeavoured, by the Aſſiſtance of the Jews he found there, to obtain greater Accuracy in Hebrew, entertaining one Rabbi Samuel for this Purpoſe, to whom he allowed a good Stipend by the Month, and afterwards applying himſelf to ſome others. But it was not long, before he was fully convinc'd, that this Attempt would be altogether fruitleſs: For, the Stupidity of ſome of thoſe wretched People was ſo great, that they could not, and the Envy of others ſo miſchievous, that they would not, afford any conſiderable Direction.

IT appears too, from ſome Papers written by him in this Place, that he made uſe of ſuch Opportunities as he there met with, of impoving his Skill in Syriack: For they contain ſeveral Grammatical Collections relating to that Language, as alſo a Praxis in it, on ſome Parts of Holy Scripture. The ſame Way, it is alſo manifeſt, that he then ſtudied the Ethiopick Tongue, and furniſh'd himſelf, either from Maſters or Books, with proper Rules whereby to underſtand it.

BUT Arabick, the moſt learned and general Language of the Eaſt, was the Subject of his greateſt Induſtry and Application; for farther Inſtruction in which, he agreed with a Sheich or Doctor, call'd Phatallah, to come to him frequently, and entertain'd, as a Servant, by the Year, one Hamet, chiefly for this End, I ſuppoſe, that he might on every Occaſion converſe familiarly in it. With this Aſſiſtance, to obtain Exactneſs in a Tongue ſo very difficult, he furniſh'd himſelf, as appears from his Papers, with many Grammatical Obſervations, and made ſundry Collections out of Lexicographers and other Authors, which he there met with. He alſo read the Alcoran of that Impoſtor Mahomet, with great Care and a critical Diligence; a Book, the Contrivance of which, was held to be ſo great a Miracle [u] by the Author of it, and is ſo ſtill by his Followers; and which indeed, as a very good Judge informs us, [x] bating the Folly, the Confuſedneſs and Incoherency of the Matter contain'd therein, is, as to the Style and Language, the Standard of Elegancy in the Arab Tongue. Another very uſeful Exerciſe for the ſame Purpoſe, on which he then beſtowed much Pains and Time, was the tranſlating ſeveral Arabick Books. And the chief of theſe was a vaſt Collection he there procur'd, of ſix thouſand Proverbs, containing the Wiſdom of the Arabians, and referring to the moſt remarkable Paſſages of their Hiſtory. This he turn'd into Latin, adding ſome Notes for Explication, with a Deſign, as he ſeem'd to tell his Friend Ger. Voſſius [y], to publiſh the Whole after his Return into England. By ſuch a continued Labour and Study, he at length overcame, in a great Meaſure, all the Difficulties of this copious Language; and that to ſuch a Degree, that he ſpake it with as much Eaſe, as his Mother-Tongue, and ſo well underſtood the Criticiſm and Niceties of it, that his Sheich pronounced him a Maſter in it, in no Sort inferior to the Mufti of Aleppo.

THO' what has been already mentioned, was a great deal of Work, it was not the only Employment he had at this Place. As he now reſided on a Factory, ſo he was concern'd in a Sort of Merchandize: Not that of buying up Silks and other Ornaments to furniſh the Pride and and Luxury of Europe, or any other Traffick that might iſſue in a plentiful Increaſe of Wealth; but the purchaſing far more precious and valuable Wares, even the Learning and Knowledge contain'd in the Books of thoſe Eaſtern Nations. Jacobus Golius, a very learned Profeſſor of Arabick and Mathematicks, in the Univerſity of Leyden, was now very lately return'd out of Syria, bringing with him a great many Manuſcripts of good Account, which he had procur'd in thoſe Parts; and tho' Mr. Pocock had the Diſadvantage of coming after, he reſolv'd, that, if Diligence could effect it, his Abode there ſhould not be of leſs Uſe to the Commonwealth of Learning. He bought up whatever Manuſcripts of any Value, in any Language, he could meet with at Aleppo, and employed his Friends there, to procure the like from other Places, waiting the Opportunities of the Caravans from Perſia, and other Countries. When he could not obtain the Books themſelves, he took Care to have them exactly tranſcribed. And becauſe, amongſt the Rubbiſh, as he call'd it, of the Jews, there were many conſiderable Things; eſpecially, ſuch as had been formerly written by their learned Men in Arabick, when that Tongue was more in Requeſt among them; He employ'd ſeveral Brokers to get ſome of theſe out of their Hands. For he was well aſſur'd, that tho' the Jews were either ſo ignorant, as not to underſtand them, or elſe ſo ſottiſh, as not to make uſe of them, they would not part with them to one, whom they knew to be a Chriſtian.

As he thus dealt in Books for his own private Uſe, and at his own Expence; ſo he had a Commiſſion from Biſhop Laud (in a Letter dated, Oct. 30, 1631.) then of London, deſiring he would buy for him ſuch antient Greek Coins, and ſuch Manuſcripts, either in Greek or the Oriental Languages, as in his Judgment may beſt befit an Univerſity Library. From whence it appears, that this excellent Man (as Lord Clarendon deſervedly ſtiles him) had then deſigned thoſe noble Benefactions, which he afterwards beſtowed on the Bodleian Library at Oxford. Whether the Arabick, Perſian, Hebrew, Armenian, Ethiopick, and other Manuſcripts given by him to that Univerſity, in the Years 1635 and 1636, were any of them procured by Mr. Pocock, I am not able certainly to ſay. I find a Letter of that Prelate's, then made Archbiſhop of Canterbury, dated, May 21, 1634. to Mr. Pocock, in which he thanks him for Greek Coins, but mentions no Books. Nay, he intimates, that no ſuch had been procured, by expreſſing, at the ſame Time, his Doubt, that the French and Venetians had raiſed the Price of Manuſcripts, more than that of Coins. The Archbiſhop however continues to requeſt of Mr. Pocock, 'that he would ſend him Word when there was Hopes of getting any good ones at a 'tolerable Rate.' To which he adds, 'I hope you will, before your Return, make yourſelf 'able to teach the Arabick Language.' From which we may aſſuredly gather, that his Grace had then entertain'd Thoughts of founding an Arabick Lecture at Oxford, and was reſolved in the Choice of his firſt Lecturer.

The Execution of this Project, about two Years after, furniſh'd Mr. Pocock with an honourable Occaſion of returning home and leaving Aleppo, after a Stay of five or ſix Years in that Place, with which he was never heartily pleaſed. The Archbiſhop, notwithſtanding the Calumnies of his Enemies, had his Mind always full of the nobleſt Deſigns, and never thought any Thing too troubleſome or too coſtly, that might be for the Service of Religion, the Benefit of the Poor, or the Advancement of Learning. Amongſt his other Cares for the Univerſity of Oxford, he had often reflected on a conſiderable Defect there, relating to the Study of the learned Languages. King Henry VIII. in the five Lectures he inſtituted, took Care both for Greek and Hebrew. But Arabick, a learned and uſeful Language, was ſtill unprovided for; and for carrying on the Study of this, Archbiſhop Laud reſolves to eſtabliſh a Lecture, and to encourage it with a conſiderable Stipend. With this Deſign he acquaints Mr. Pocock at Aleppo, telling him, in the Letter he ſent to him for this Purpoſe, that he could do him no greater Honour, than to name him to the Univerſity for his firſt Profeſſor; and ordering him, at the ſame Time, to haſten his Return, that he might undertake the Employment.

On ſuch Encouragement as this, there is no Doubt but that he chearfully prepar'd for his Departure. But that which was Matter of Joy to him, was not a little grievous to his Friends in that Place. A kind and obliging Carriage, and a virtuous Life; a faithful Diſcharge of his Duty as a Miniſter, and a wonderful Diligence in ſeveral extraordinary Deſigns, could not but obtain from all the Engliſh there, at leaſt from them that had any Senſe of what was Praiſeworthy, a great Reſpect and Deference. And the approaching Loſs of the Advantages they reap'd from his paſtoral Care, and of the Comfort and Satisfaction they had in his Company, muſt needs be to them a very ſenſible Affliction. Of this we may ſpeak the more aſſuredly, from the Character given of Mr. Pocock, in a Letter to Mr. Selden, written from Aleppo, in the Year 1632, by Mr. Wandesford, then reſiding there.

'You commended, ſays he, a diligent and able Gentleman, Mr. Pocock, to me, who hath 'inabled himſelf very much in the Arab Tongue.——I have no other Comfort but in him 'for Converſe. And indeed his Nature is ſo ſweet and amicable, I owe much to you for the 'Commands you laid upon me to receive him.'

Even the Mahometans themſelves, with whom he was acquainted, were ſo charm'd with his ſhining Virtue, his amazing Induſtry, and moſt agreeable Converſation, that they were extremely unwilling to part with him. Particularly his Sheich, or Maſter for Arabick, was ſo fond of him, that when he ſaw him reſolv'd to be gone, he not only offered his Service, but expreſs'd alſo a very earneſt Deſire to accompany him to England. Nor did this Mahometan Doctor ever forget his excellent Scholar, even to the laſt Moment of his Life. For in the Year 1670. Mr. Huntington, in his firſt Letter to Mr. Pocock, from Aleppo, writes thus: 'Your old Sheich (who died ſeveral Years ſince) was always 'mindful of you, and expreſſed your Name with his laſt Breath. He was ſtill telling the 'good Opinion he had of you, that you were a right honeſt Man; and that he did not doubt 'but to meet you in Paradiſe, under the Banner of our Jeſus.' And the poor Derviſe Ahmed, perhaps the ſame Perſon with Hamet, before mentioned, doubtleſs expreſſed his Affection in ſuch Strains of Oriental Eloquence, as are to be met with in the Epiſtles he afterwards ſent to him; telling him, that his Love for him, was it embodied, would fill a thouſand Rivers; that tho' abſent from his Eye, he ſhould be ſtill preſent in his Heart, from which no Diſtance ſhould remove him; and wiſhing and praying the Peace of God to be with him, as long as the Eaſt Wind blows. And that the Reader may be diverted with ſome further Expreſſions of this Perſon's Eſteem and Love; and alſo be ſatisfied, that Mr. Pocock's Endeavours for the Promotion of Learning, by procuring Manuſcripts from the Eaſt, were not ended on his Return to Oxford, I will here ſubjoin one whole Letter, being the firſt that Ahmed ſent to Mr. Pocock, after he left Aleppo, as it was tranſlated out of the Original Arabick, by his eldeſt and very learned Son, Mr. Edward Pocock, late Rector of Mildenhall in Wiltſhire.

To the Preſence of that eminent Scholar, Pocock the Honoured,

'VERY fair are the Ornaments of Paper enrich'd with the Embroidery of Words; and 'very beautiful is that which the Point of the Pen draws forth from the Minds of Souls: 'Let Peace ſpread its ſweet Smell like Amber, and diſplay its Savour like Jeſſamine toward 'the Tract of that Country, whither he goes. Let God give Succeſs to what he delights in 'and deſires. Beſides this, there came to us a much deſired Letter, fairly writtten after the 'beſt Manner; and we were revived at its Coming, and ſatisfied at its ſweet Aſpect, beyond 'the Spring, and Smell of Flowers; and we know the Matter it contain'd, and what Anſwers 'you deſired in it. And if you enquire concerning us, God be praiſed we are well and 'ſafe, and we truſt in God, you are in like Manner: Only, ſince you left us, we have been 'as tho' our own Brother had left us, or the Spirit which is in the Heart. And therefore, we 'had ſincere Joy, when we heard the News of your Health, and of your Arrival in your 'Country; and we praiſe God, who brought you to your People in Health and Safety; for 'his Mercy is plentiful. We alſo give you to underſtand, that we have taken to Wife a 'Camel Woman riding on a Camel, that ſhe may look after our Affairs. We have alſo gotten 'Echwans Sepha, which you ſaw formerly, fairly drawn for ſixty Garſhes; and we had not 'gotten it for that Price, unleſs Hieronymo had gotten it for us; for how we could buy that 'which I ſaw the Day that I went from Aleppo, you know. And, as for the Hiſtory of Al. 'Jannabi, the Kadi, of which I ſaw ſome Pieces, you told me that we ſhould tarry till the 'tranſcribing it was finiſhed, and when it was finiſhed we ſhould buy it, if the moſt high 'God pleaſe. The Commentary on Gubſtan is alſo finiſhed, which we will ſend you; and, 'if it pleaſe God, we will do our Endeavour to ſend you the Hiſtory of Ebn Chalecan; and 'any Book that we ſhall ſee, which is convenient for you, we ſhall ſend to you. And you 'muſt needs ſend us an Anſwer to theſe Letters, and ſome little Token of what your Coun-'try affords. Send us alſo a printed Geography; and whatſoever Buſineſs you ſhall have in 'theſe Parts, ſend and let me know, that I may enjoy the Performance of it.'

The poor DERVISE AHMED.

SECTION II.

MR. Pocock having ſettled his Affairs at Aleppo, in order to his Return, ſoon had the Opportunity of a Ship to carry him home. During the former Part of his Voyage, he enjoyed the Company of a Perſon, who, tho' he told ſad Stories, was of a very entertaining Converſation. He was an old Dominican Frier, diſpatcht out of the Eaſt to Rome, with a lamentable Account of the State of Chriſtianity in India and China. And as he diverted Mr. Pocock with ſeveral Relations of the Learning and Cuſtoms of thoſe remote Countries, ſo he made no Scruple to acquaint him with the Secrets of his Meſſage; which was to complain of the Jeſuits, and give a particular Account of the Abominations they were guilty of. Thoſe wretched Apoſtles, who had boaſted ſo much of vaſt Numbers of Proſelytes, converted People indeed, but not to the Faith of Chriſt: To acknowledge the Pope's Supremacy, and bear a great deal of Reſpect to their Order, were ſome of the chief Duties they recommended to thoſe they preached to; and provided they would be hearty in ſuch as theſe, any Thing elſe, which they were fond of, was eaſily diſpenſed with. They might, on ſuch Terms, have as much Zeal as they pleas'd for Confucius, or retain any of their former Impieties: They might be ſtill Pagans and Idolaters, and yet very good Catholicks. What Succeſs this honeſt old Frier met with, when he came to Rome, I know not; but too manifeſt it is, that theſe Miſ- ſionaries have ſtill proceeded in the ſame Method; their Practices of this Kind having been, not very long ſince, under the Examination of the Inquiſition.

THE Frier being ſet on Shore in Italy, the Ship continued her Voyage, and came ſafe into England; and Mr. Pocock having taken Care for the Landing and Conveyance of the learned Ware he brought with him, made what Haſte he could to Oxford; where he was receiv'd with due Reſpect and Eſteem from all; but by his old Friends, with all the Expreſſions of a very tender Affection: Principally, by Mr. Thomas Greaves, aforementioned; the eldeſt, Mr. John Greaves, being then ſtill in Italy.

AFTER what was due to the Kindneſs of his Friends in Oxford, Mr. Pocock's next Buſineſs was, to make Preparation for his Degree of Bachelor in Divinity, which he was now perſuaded to take. The Queſtions, on which he anſwered, in his Exerciſes on that Occaſion, were theſe two: Whether Pilgrimages to Places, called Holy, undertaken on the Account of Religion, are to be approved? And, Whether there be any ſuch Thing as Purgatory? And, as he defended the Negative of both theſe, ſo in his Explanation of them, he confirmed the Proteſtant Doctrine, about theſe Matters, in Oppoſition to the Opinions of Rome, with all imaginable Strength and Clearneſs; not contenting himſelf with what is to be met with in modern Tracts, but ſearching out the Senſe of the Primitive Church, from the Writings of the Fathers; particularly, on the firſt Queſtion, to expoſe the Vanity of thoſe Pilgrimages, which the Council of Trent hath declared to be very pious, and are eſteem'd, as of conſiderable Merit, in Popiſh Countries. He made great Uſe of that Oration, or rather Epiſtle, of Gregory Nyſſen, concerning them that travel to Jeruſalem, publiſhed by itſelf in Greek and Latin, by Peter du Moulin; ſetting the Arguments of that excellent Father in their beſt Light, after he had firſt noted the unreaſonable Scruples, and the impotent Rage of ſome Popiſh Writers, on Occaſion of that Epiſtle, more eſpecially of Gretſer, the Jeſuit.

THE Latin Sermon he preached, I ſuppoſe, was on thoſe Words of the Prophet Malachi, chap. ii. ver. 7. The Prieſts Lips ſhould keep Knowledge, and they ſhould ſeek the Law at his Mouth; for he is the Meſſenger of the Lord of Hoſts. This however is certain, that a learned Diſcourſe on that Text, written by his own Hand, was found amongſt his Papers. But on whatſoever Subject it was, he had, as he would ſometimes in Diſcourſe occaſionally remember, an extraordinary Auditory, when he preached it. For, beſides the uſual Members of the Univerſity, there were then preſent, Dr. John Bancroft, Biſhop of Oxford; Sir John Coke, one of the Principal Secrataries of State; Sir Henry Marten, Judge of the Admiralty and of the Prerogative Court; Sir Edward Littleton, Sollicitor General; and Dr. Thomas Rives, the King's Advocate; being at that Time his Majeſty's Commiſſioners at Oxford, on a very ſolemn Occaſion [z]. It was the Confirmation of the new Body of Statutes for that Univerſity, which by the Care and Wiſdom of the Chancellor of it, had been collected out of a vaſt Number, that had continued a confus'd Heap for many Ages. A Work which prov'd too difficult for thoſe two great Cardinals, Woolſey and Pool; who both attempted it in vain [a], and which only that excellent Conduct, and thoſe unwearied Edeavours, which were peculiar to Archbiſhop Laud, were able to get accompliſh'd.

THE neceſſary Exerciſes being thus finiſhed, he was admitted to the Degree of Bachelor of Divinity, July 8, 1636. And ſoon after that, the Honour, which his great Patron had deſign'd for him, was actually conferr'd on him. For on the eighth Day of the next Month, Dr. Baylie, Preſident of St. John Baptiſt's College, and Vice-chancellor of the Univerſity, declar'd in a Convocation, held for this Purpoſe, That, whereas their much honoured Chancellor, the Archbiſhop, had lately given to the publick Library a conſiderable Number of Arabick Books; he was now to acquaint them, with an Addition to that Bounty. For, that thoſe Treaſures might not continue lockt up, and ſo uſeleſs, his Grace had been pleaſed to ſettle 40*l*. per Annum, during his Life, on a Perſon, who ſhould read a Lecture in that Tongue. And the Man, whom he nominated for the Approbation of that Houſe, was, he told them, Mr. Pocock, of Corpus-Chriſti, lately return'd out of the Eaſtern Parts, who was, as he aſſur'd them, and they very well knew, eminent for his Probity, his Learning, and Skill in Languages.

SO kind a Meſſage was received by the Univerſity, with much Joy, and a very grateful Acknowledgment. And the Lecturer, thus appointed, to expreſs a juſt Diligence, open'd his Lecture two Days after, viz. Aug. 10, with an excellent Latin Speech; wherein, as he took Care to pay thoſe Reſpects which were due to the Founder, ſo he gave a learned Account of the Nature and Uſefulneſs of the Tongue he was to explain: A ſmall Part of which Speech, declaring the mighty Eſteem the Arabians antiently had for Poets and Poetry, was afterward printed [b]. After this Introduction, the Book, which he firſt undertook to read on, was, the Proverbs of Ali, the fourth Emperor of the Saracens, and the Couſin German and Son-in-Law of Mahomet: A Man of ſuch Account with that Impoſtor, not only for his Valour, but Knowledge too, that he was wont to declare, that if all the Learning of the Arabians were deſtroyed, it might be found again in Ali, as in a living Library. Upon this Book, obſerving the Directions of the Archbiſhop, in the Statutes he had provided, he ſpent an Hour every Wedneſday in Vacation-time, and alſo in Lent, explaining the Senſe of the Author, and the Things relating to the Grammar and Propriety of the Language; and alſo ſhewing the Agreement it hath with the Hebrew and Syriack, as often as there was Occaſion. The Lecture being ended, he uſually tarried for ſome Time in the publick School, to reſolve the Queſtions of his Hearers, and ſatisfy them in their Doubts; and always, that Afternoon, gave Admittance in his Chamber, from One a-Clock till Four, to all that would come to him for further Conference and Direction.

Whilst Mr. Pocock was employed in this Manner, his dear Friend, Mr. John Greaves, towards the End of the Year 1636, returned home from Italy, where he had been, probably on Archbiſhop Laud's Account, for two Years. Immediately after his Arrival, he writes to Mr. Pocock; acquainting him, that it had been his Fortune, to meet with Mr. Petty in Italy, who proffered him, in my Lord of Arundel's Name, 200*l. per Annum*, and ſuch Fortunes as that Lord could heap upon him, if he would ſtay with him, and go into Greece. In Anſwer to which, Mr. Greaves declared his Purpoſe of returning firſt into England, to ſee Mr. Pocock, after ſo long an Abſence; adding, that if he returned back, he ſhould rather think of going into Egypt, where few had been, and where, beſides ſearching after Books and Antiquities, he ſhould make Aſtronomical Obſervations. Mr. Petty very much approved this Reſolution, and aſſured Mr. Greaves, that if he would undertake that Journey, as under his Lord's ſending, he ſhould have, beſides what was above mentioned, thoſe Preferments ſettled upon him, which he himſelf then poſſeſſed. But getting no abſolute Promiſe of Compliance, and perceiving that Mr. Greaves ſtood in ſome Relation to Archbiſhop Laud, Mr. Petty adviſed him, for his better Security, that ſince he would not caſt himſelf upon his Lord, he ſhould, by the Archbiſhop's Means, go Conſul to Aleppo, and procure Leave of the Grand Seignor to have a Conſular Power at Alexandria, as often as he ſhould go thither. To this Mr. Greaves could give no poſitive Anſwer, till he had ſpoken of it to Mr. Pocock, who could beſt inform him, whether he was fit for the Place, or the Place for him. And of both theſe he would plainly deliver his Opinion.

It is very probable, that Mr. Pocock, at this Inſtant, wiſhed for an Opportunity of travelling once more into the Eaſt, to perfect himſelf in a Language the moſt copious and difficult in the World. And beſides attaining to greater Skill in the Arabick Tongue, he had other Reaſons for deſiring ſuch a Voyage. He had lately engaged in the Tranſlation of an Hiſtorical Work, which he intended to dedicate to the Archbiſhop, as a laſting Monument of his Gratitude; and this, he believ'd, could not be performed by him any where, with ſo much Eaſe and Exactneſs, as there, where, upon every Difficulty, he might have Recourſe to thoſe, whom he thought moſt likely to give the trueſt Accounts of the Matters of Fact, and alſo beſt underſtood the Language they were written in. Moreover, he could not be of Opinion, that the Oriental Books he had already purchas'd, were a ſufficient Proviſion for his Studies; and hoped, that upon his Return to the Eaſt, he ſhould be able to procure many uſeful Treatiſes he ſtill wanted, and which were not yet heard of in the Weſt.

The Receipt of Mr. Greave's Letter, happily opened to him a Proſpect of accompliſhing theſe Deſires; and there is little Doubt to be made, but that, upon Sight of it, he ſoon approved the Project of the Conſulſhip, and in his Anſwer ſignified how glad he ſhould be, if, when he communicated his own Affair to the Archbiſhop, he could procure his Grace's Conſent and Encouragement, for him to make another Voyage to the Levant, for the Ends above-mentioned. For in Mr. Greaves's next Letter, dated, Dec. 23, of the ſame Year, which was ſoon after, in Anſwer to one of Mr. Pocock's, he is deſired to ſend him up Ulug Beg's Aſtronomical Tables; 'of which, ſays he, I propoſe to make this Uſe. The next Week I will 'ſhew them to my Lord's Grace, and highly commend your Care in procuring of thoſe Ta'bles, being the moſt accurate, that ever were extant. Then will I diſcover my Intention of 'having them printed, and dedicated to his Grace. But becauſe I preſume, that there are 'many Things, which in theſe Parts cannot perfectly be underſtood, I ſhall therefore acquaint 'my Lord with my Deſires of taking a Journey into thoſe Countries, for the more emendate 'Edition of them; afterwards, by Degrees, fall down upon the Buſineſs of the Conſulſhip, 'and how honourable a Thing it would be, if you were ſent out a ſecond Time, as Golius in 'the Low-Countries was, by the States, after he had been once there before. If my Lord 'ſhall be pleaſed to reſent, and compaſs the Buſineſs, I ſhall like it well; if not, I ſhall pro'cure 300*l.* for you and myſelf, beſides getting a Diſpenſation for the Allowances of our 'Places in our Abſence; and, by God's Bleſſing, in three Years diſpatch the whole Journey. 'It ſhall go hard too, but I will get ſome Citizen in, as a Benefactor to the Deſign. If not, '300*l.* of mine, whereof I give you the Half, together with the Return of our Stipends, 'will, in a plentiful Manner, if I be not deceived, in Turkey, maintain us.'

The Succeſs of Mr. Greaves's Application to the Archbiſhop, we know no otherwiſe, than by the Event. Mr. Greaves did not go Conſul to Aleppo, nor indeed did he at all viſit that Place, but went directly from Conſtantinople to Alexandria, or Grand Cairo. From whence we may conclude, that his Grace did not come into that Propoſal, but provided for Mr. Greaves's ſecure travelling into Egypt ſome other Way, and queſtionleſs contributed generouſly to the Expence thereof. As to Mr. Pocock, the Archbiſhop not only approved of his Deſire to viſit the Eaſt once more, but alſo encouraged it, by allowing him the Profits of his Lecture, during his Stay in the Levant.

THIS, and the like Revenue, from his Fellowſhip in Corpus-Chriſti, together with an Eſtate of ſome Value, which was lately fallen to him on the Death of his Father, enabled Mr. Pocock to proſecute this Deſign, without accepting the Offer of his generous and affectionate Friend, Mr. Greaves. And accordingly, they both embarked together about the Beginning of July, A. D. 1637. Before Mr. Pocock left Oxford, he entered the following Memorandum in a ſpare Leaf of his ſix Chiliads of Arabick Proverbs, where it is yet extant in the Bodleian Library.

IN nomine S. S. & individuæ Trinitatis, cui Laus in omnem Æternitatem. Amen.

IF it pleaſe God that I return not, otherwiſe to diſpoſe of this Tranſlation of Proverbs, I deſire that it may be put in the Archives of Corpus-Chriſti College Library; there, tho' very rude and imperfect, to be kept for ſome Help of thoſe that ſtudy the Arabick Language; hoping that Mr. Thomas Greaves, or ſome other, may at ſome Time perfect this Work for an Edition.

April 10, 1637. Per me EDV. POCOCK.

MR. Thomas Greaves having, with the Archbiſhop's Conſent, undertaken the Care of the Arabick Lecture, till Mr. Pocock's Return; Mr. John Greaves landed at Leghorn, and went thence to Rome, to diſpatch ſome Employments, which, as he wrote to Mr. Pocock, the Year before, would make it neceſſary for him to return into Italy: But Mr. Pocock continued in the Priſon of his Ship; for ſo he both conſider'd and call'd it, till he came to Conſtantinople; whither Mr. Greaves ſoon after followed him; one of his Letters to the Archbiſhop being dated, Dec. 28, of the ſame Year, from Galata near Conſtantinople. Mr. Pocock, on his Arrival, was kindly receiv'd by all the Engliſh, and eſpecially by the Embaſſador, Sir Peter Wich, to whoſe Favour and Protection he was particularly recommended by the Archbiſhop. That very worthy Perſon, not only entertain'd him at his Houſe, but alſo allowed him there all the Liberties he could deſire, both for himſelf and his Friends; and doubtleſs was not wanting to afford any Aſſiſtance he could give him in his learned Deſigns. Of which obliging Temper alſo towards him, was Sir Sackvil Crow, who, in a ſhort Time, ſucceeded the other, as Embaſſador at that Court.

MR. Pocock being ſettled at Conſtantinople, or rather near it, at Pera or Galata, on the other Side of the Water, where the Engliſh, and other Merchants uſually reſided, made it his firſt Buſineſs to enquire out, and to obtain the Converſation of ſome learned Turk, that might aſſiſt him in acquiring both Books and Languages. But ſuch a one was, it ſeems, a Rarity, which even the Metropolis of the Turkiſh Empire would not preſently afford him. For in a Letter written there, ſome Months after his Arrival, he complain'd, that he could yet ſee no Likelihood of any ſuch Perſon, of whom he might make Uſe.

BUT here he had a Happineſs, which he formerly ſought for in vain at Aleppo, which was the Society of ſeveral Jews, who were both learned and civil. For it is manifeſt, from an Account of his Expences, which he then kept, that ſome of thoſe People did him conſiderable Services, in buying and tranſcribing Books, for which he very well paid them. And that which he then highly valued, and which he would afterwards frequently remember with great Satisfaction, was, an intimate Acquaintance he there had with Jacobo Romano, the Author of an Auctuarium to Buxtorf's Bibliotheca Rabbinica, and one of the moſt learned Jews of his Time[c]. As this was a candid and very judicious Perſon, ſo he would make uſe of a great deal of Freedom in his Converſation. He had carefully read over ſeveral Chriſtian Books, as well of Popiſh, as Proteſtant Authors; particularly, among thoſe of the latter, Calvin's Inſtitutions; and he would often declare to Mr. Pocock, the great Difference he obſerved amongſt them. Which was, that the Reformed were of a Religion, which was very conſiſtent, and held ſuch Doctrines, as agreed with the Principles they owned, namely, the Writings of the New Teſtament: Whereas the Papiſts, in many Inſtances, were at War with themſelves, and pretended to obſerve a Rule, which they would yet very frequently thwart and contradict.

AMONGST the Grecian Chriſtians at Conſtantinople, thoſe miſerable Remains of a once famous and moſt flouriſhing Church, that have long groan'd under an inſupportable Tyranny, there were ſeveral Perſons, with whom he was acquainted, and that were uſeful to him in his Deſigns. Upon which Account they well deſerve to be here mentioned. And the Precedence is moſt juſtly due to that great Man, Cyrillus Lucari, Patriarch of that See, who, to uſe Mr. Pocock's own Words concerning him, was a moſt reverend, grave, and learned Perſon. He was of a Genius much above the ſlaviſh Condition of his Country, and laboured, with a mighty Courage and Induſtry, to promote the common Cauſe of Chriſtianity, and the particular Advantages of the Church under his Care, notwithſtanding all the Malice and Barbarity that oppreſſed him.

FOR ſuch Purpoſes as theſe, amongſt the other great Things he did, he had collected a very excellent Library, furniſhing it with all the choice Manuſcripts, which thoſe Parts afforded, forded, eſpecially in the Greek Language. And indeed, a Specimen of the Treaſures of this Kind, in his Poſſeſſion, he had given the World in that Book of ineſtimable Value, brought with him from Alexandria, of which he had been formerly Patriarch, and ſent as a Preſent to his Majeſty of England, King Charles I. viz. the Septuagints Tranſlation of the Old Teſtament, and the Greek Text of the New, written, as he believed, by the Hand of Thecla, a noble Egyptian Woman, near fourteen hundred Years ago; at the End of which Manuſcript is alſo the admirable Epiſtle of St. Clemens Romanus to the Corinthians, as old as ſome Parts of the New Teſtament itſelf, and antiently read in Churches, but in vain ſought for by the learned Men of Europe, for many Ages. Mr. Pocock, who could not but earneſtly deſire ſuch a Privilege, doubtleſs had the Uſe of any Books, which this venerable Perſon had the Command of; the Eſteem and Affection of that Patriarch being very great for the Reformed in general, and the People and Church of England in particular, of which, perhaps, a ſhort Account will not be thought too great a Digreſſion.

[c] Judæorum, quos mihi noſſe contigit, nemini, vel Doctrinâ vel Ingenuitate ſecundus. Poc. Not. Miſcell. ad Portam Moſis, p. 90.

THIS great Man had travell'd, when young, in ſeveral Places of Europe, and underſtood, beſides Latin, ſeveral modern Languages[d]. And as he had Occaſion particularly to enquire into the State of Religion in thoſe Countries; ſo he was abundantly convinc'd, that the true Difference between Proteſtancy and Popery is, that the firſt is Chriſtianity purg'd from many Corruptions, whereas the latter is Chriſtianity loaded and polluted with them. This was very manifeſt to him from the Writings of the Fathers, and in a great Meaſure too, from the preſent Senſe and Belief of the Church, wherein he preſided; which he well knew to have been always a perfect Stranger to ſeveral of thoſe Opinions, which the Church of Rome would impoſe upon the World for Catholick Doctrines. And as he had, upon theſe Accounts, a juſt Value for the Reformation; ſo the like Reflections produced in him a peculiar Regard for it, as it was eſtabliſhed in the Church of England. For knowing the Conſtitution of this Church very well, he could not but diſcern, that as it caſt out all the Errors and Superſtitions of the Church of Rome; ſo no intemperate Zeal, nor any Neceſſity of Affairs, caus'd it to throw out, together with them, that Apoſtolical Government, and thoſe Rites, which had been of conſtant Uſe with the whole Church of Chriſt, in all Places and Times. When therefore this great Man firſt compos'd his Confeſſion of the Faith and Doctrines of the Greek Church, which hath been printed more than once here in the Weſt, he dedicated it to King James I. and deſign'd to get it printed in England; and afterward, when he ventur'd upon that bold Attempt of ordering Nicodemus Metaxa to ſet about printing it at Conſtantinople itſelf, in the Greek Preſs which he had brought thither from London, it had a Dedication prefix'd, to King Charles I. And the Satisfaction that Patriarch had, in owning Communion with the Engliſh, as a ſound and excellent Part of the Catholick Church, he ſometimes expreſs'd by his Preſence at the Worſhip of God in the Ambaſſador's Chapel, according to our eſtabliſhed Liturgy. Particularly, as Mr. Pocock would often remember, upon an extraordinary Occaſion, when he was preſent, which was, the Baptizing a Son of the Ambaſſador, born at Conſtantinople. At which Time, the moſt Reverend Cyril was not only of the Congregation, and join'd in the Service with much Devotion, but alſo undertaking to be a Godfather, gave his own Name to the Child, who was afterward the Honourable Sir Cyril Wich, one of the Truſtees appointed by Parliament, ſome Years ago, for the forfeited Eſtates in Ireland.

BUT of how much Comfort and Uſe ſoever the Favour of this moſt reverend and learned Man was to Mr. Pocock; alas! He enjoyed it not long. For before he had been a full Year at Conſtantinople, the good old Patriarch, being caught in the Snares his Enemies had laid for him, was hurried, to what the World calls a miſerable End, but indeed to a Crown of Martyrdom. Of the Occaſion and Circumſtances of his Murder, Mr. Pocock ſent a large Account to Archbiſhop Laud, ſoon after it was acted; keeping alſo a Copy of what he wrote, for his own Remembrance. But, as the former, I believe, did not eſcape the Fury of Mr. Prynne, when he ſcatter'd and deſtroy'd that Archbiſhop's Papers; ſo the latter, as Mr. Pocock would often complain, was caſually loſt. What I ſhall therefore here add, of this great Man's Death, is chiefly taken from a Letter of Mr. Pocock's, written to Mr. Thomas Greaves, in the Year 1659, to ſatisfy the Deſire of Dr. Morton, Lord Biſhop of Durham, then ninety ſix Years old, and reſiding in the Houſe of Sir Henry Yelverton, and which agrees with the larger Account, which the Reverend Dr. Smith publiſhed many Years after, from Dr. Pocock's own Mouth, in his Latin Narrative of the Life and Actions of that great Patriarch.

HIS boldly aſſerting the Doctrines of true and genuine Chriſtianity, in Oppoſition to the Corruptions of Rome, expos'd him to the Rage of thoſe buſy Factors for that Church, the Jeſuits. Several of which Order, at Conſtantinople, under the Protection of the French Ambaſſador, continually perſecuted him almoſt twenty Years; for near ſo long it was from his firſt coming to that Throne, to the Time of his Martyrdom. They had, more than once, by their Intereſt in the Miniſters of State, gotten him depoſed; they had alſo cauſed him to be baniſhed; and to obtain their wicked Purpoſes, they ſuggeſted ſuch Things againſt him, as any that pretend to the Name of Chriſt, one would think, ſhould be utterly aſhamed of: Repreſenting the Arguments he made uſe of, for the Divinity of our Bleſſed Lord, againſt Jews and Infidels, as Blaſphemy againſt Mahomet; and the Greek Preſs, which he had provided to print print Catechiſms, and other uſeful Books, for the Inſtruction of the Chriſtians under his Care, as a ſeditious Deſign againſt the Government; but by the Zeal and Diligence of the Engliſh Ambaſſadors, firſt Sir Thomas Rowe, and afterward Sir Peter Wich, together with the Aſſiſtance of the Dutch Reſident, who heartily eſpouſed his Cauſe, he not only diſappointed the wicked Deſigns of thoſe Men, but obtained ſuch an Intereſt in the Prime Vizier, as ſeem'd a ſufficient Fence againſt all future Trouble. However, a Jeſuitical Malice, tho' baffled, is not ended, and a helliſh Contrivance at length prevailed. A Bargain is ſtruck up with a great Baſha, to take the Opportunity of the Vizier's Abſence, and fill the Ears of the Grand Segnior, Sultan Morad, then on the Borders of Perſia, in order to the Siege of Bagdad, with the great Danger, that his Empire was in, from the Patriarch Cyril, a popular Man, of a vaſt Intereſt, and that kept, as this Informer pretended to be well aſſur'd, a cloſe Correſpondence with Chriſtian Princes. This ſucceeded according to their Hopes, and a written Order was immediately diſpatcht for the taking away his Life: Which was preſently executed, with a Barbarity natural to ſuch Inſtruments. A Crew of Janizaries, ſeizing him in his Palace, carried him to Sea, as it were for another Baniſhment; where, in a Boat, amidſt the moſt devout Prayers to Almighty God, which on his Knees, with much Fervor and Conſtancy, he poured out, they reviled, buffeted, and then ſtrangled him; and having taken off his Clothes, caſt him naked into the Water. His Body, being driven to the Shore, was there ſecur'd, till ſome of his Friends took Care to bury it. But the Rage of his Enemies would not afford it ſuch a reſting Place. They cauſed it to be digg'd up, and caſt again into the Sea. However, a ſecond Time it was taken up, by the Humanity of ſome Fiſhermen, and at the Charge of his Friends, buried in a Greek Chapel, on a little Iſland; whence afterward, to ſatisfy the People, when the Heat of Things was over, it was brought to Conſtantinople, and there decently interr'd.

As this venerable Man was thus murdered on the Water; ſo a little Time after, there was too much Reaſon to conclude, that the choice Manuſcripts of his Library were ſwallowed up by it. Thoſe precious Wares were a very deſirable Purchaſe, to any that underſtood the Worth of them; and, it ſeems, the Dutch Reſident had the good Fortune to find Means to obtain them. To make ſure of which, againſt the Endeavours of the new Patriarch, who began to make a diligent Enquiry after them, he ſent them away, with ſome other of his Goods, by a Ship then returning to Holland. And tho' that Veſſel arrived ſafely at the intended Harbour, the very next Day, by the Violence of an extraordinary Storm, it ſunk there, among many others, and the Cargo with it. That thoſe Manuſcripts, by theſe Means, were irrecoverably loſt, I find by one of Mr. Pocock's Letters, was believed at Conſtantinople. But whether the Report afterward appeared true or falſe, I have not had Opportunity of inquiring. I ſhall conclude the Account of Cyril with obſerving, that Archbiſhop Laud was deeply concerned at the Misfortunes of the old Patriarch. In his Anſwer to Mr. Pocock, on that Head, he writes thus: 'For his Succeſſor, I hear no Good yet; what it will pleaſe God 'to work by him I know not. It may be, he hath ſhewed the Turk a Way, in the Death of 'Cyril, how to deal with himſelf.' In this, the Archbiſhop conjectured happily enough. For in leſs than a Year's Time, the new Patriarch, whoſe wicked Intreigues haſtened the Death of his Predeceſſor, was charged, by the Greeks, with Extortion, and other Wrongs done to their Church and its Privileges; and upon a Hearing before the Baſha, he was convicted and impriſoned, and the Greeks had Leave to chooſe a new Patriarch; upon which they elected Parthenius, Archbiſhop of Adrianople.

The Patriarch Cyril having had a great Eſteem for Mr. Pocock, it cannot be doubted, but that his Chaplains, and other Domeſticks, treated him with much Reſpect, and did him all the good Offices they were capable of. This was particularly and certainly true of Nathanael Canopius, his [e] Protoſyncellus, a Cretan born, as was alſo the old Patriarch, and of equal good Inclinations towards the Religion eſtabliſhed in the Church of England. This Perſon, being aſſur'd of commendatory Letters, both from the Engliſh Ambaſſador and Mr. Pocock, had reſolv'd to ſpend ſome Time in England; there to improve himſelf in ſeveral Kinds of Learning. And upon the Death of Cyril, what before was Matter of Choice to him, became alſo neceſſary, to avoid the ſame Uſage that he had met with. Taking, therefore, the firſt Opportunity of a Ship for his Paſſage into England, he came to London; where Archbiſhop Laud received him with a great deal of Kindneſs, ſent him to Baliol College in Oxford [f], and there allowed him a comfortable Maintenance. Some Time after, he was removed from Baliol, and became one of the Petty-Canons of Chriſt-Church; and living there ſeveral Years after Mr. Pocock came back from his Travels, he met with ſuitable Returns from him, for the Kindneſs he had ſhewn him at Conſtantinople. And, to digreſs alſo here a little farther, with the Account of this good and learned Man, more Years would he have ſpent on his Studies in Oxford, had not ſuch a furious Zeal, as forced him from home, driven him alſo from this Univerſity. It was not indeed that of Jeſuits and Mahometans, but of a Sort of People, whom there will be too much Occaſion hereafter to mention, call'd, Parliamentarian Viſitors. By theſe, in the Beginning of Nov. 1648, being turn'd out of his Preferment at Chriſt-Church, he went into Holland [g], where he was reduc'd to ſuch Extremities, that he was forced, in a Latin Addreſs, to petition the States for the neceſſary Expence of his own Paſſage home, and the Carriage of his Books [h]. After his Return, he was made Biſhop of Smyrna, but what afterwards befel him, I know not.

ANOTHER Perſon amongſt the Greeks, who proved of ſome Uſe to Mr. Pocock, was Georgio Cerigo, a Doctor of Phyſick, reſiding at Galata. Beſides the Skill he had in his Profeſſion, he was a Man of conſiderable Learning, eſpecially in Aſtronomy, and other Mathematical Sciences. And as he had the Command of a great many Manuſcripts, ſo he would part with ſeveral of them to Mr. Pocock for his own Uſe, and that of his Friends, eſpecially to receive in Exchange for them, ſome Weſtern Rarities. This Perſon had alſo a Brother, who was a Scholar, and now concern'd with him in the ſame learned Traffick. To whom may be added Segnior Dominico and Conſtantinus Duca, who are mentioned on the like Occaſions.

WITH this Aſſiſtance, Mr. Pocock carried on his Buſineſs of procuring Manuſcripts with good Succeſs, purchaſing a conſiderable Number of ſuch as were very uſeful; but for the moſt Part of no ſmall Price; for the Dearneſs of Books there he often complained of. Neither were his Endeavours of this Kind confined to Conſtantinople. For having frequent Opportunities of ſending to Aleppo, he often deſir'd ſeveral of his old Friends there, to be diligent in taking up ſuch as that Country afforded. The chief of theſe were Mr. William Corderoy and Mr. Richard Hill, Engliſh Merchants; and indeed the Service they did, not only to this learned Man, but to Learning itſelf, well deſerves that they ſhould be remembred; eſpecially the firſt, who was alſo very uſeful in this Way to ſome others [i]. By the Diligence of theſe, he got the Perſian Goſpels; which proved afterwards of good Uſe in the Edition of the Engliſh Polyglott Bible. They waited a conſiderable Time before they could buy theſe, firſt from one, call'd by them, Cogie Caudie, and after his Death from his Son, who would not be induc'd to ſell this Book, till at length his Poverty forced him to it. And there being ſeveral Books, which he had deſired, that were not to be gotten there, they ſent a Perſon as far as Damaſcus, on purpoſe to ſeek them for him. Moreover, they recommended to him a Syrian Chriſtian, call'd, as they told him, Abdel Meſſiah, and dwelling at Muſſoloe, who was taking a Journey on ſome Buſineſs to Conſtantinople, as a Perſon very fit and willing to be employed, on his Return, in buying Books, which, being ſent to Aleppo, they promiſed to pay for, and to ſee conveyed. Indeed, among the Chriſtians of thoſe Parts, there were ſeveral, with whom he had been very intimate, and who now, and upon all Occaſions, were ready to oblige him by any Thing they were capable of: Particularly the Patriarch of Antioch, and a Brother he had, who ſtyl'd himſelf Thalge, the Scribe. The Patriarch had that Regard for Mr. Pocock, that he undertook to procure for him as many of the Books of Ephræm, in the Original Syriack, as were to be had in that Country, in order to their being tranſcribed. And his Brother, who wrote a very fair Character [k], and was very diligent in tranſcribing both Syriack and Arabick Books, engaged to furniſh him with true Copies of all the Parts, that were to be found, of that Father's Works. Several of theſe were ſent to him at Conſtantinople, by the Care of Mr. Hill, which, I ſuppoſe, are now among his other Manuſcripts, in the Bodleian Library. The reſt too would have been finiſhed, and ſent in a little Time, had not that Work been interrupted by the Death of the Patriarch. It alſo appears, by a Letter of this Thalge to Mr. Pocock, (wherein, with much Reſpect, he calls him his Father, his much deſired chief Maſter, and honoured Doctor) that he undertook to procure for him whatever Hiſtorical Accounts were to be obtained there, of Ephræm's Life. Some few of theſe he inſerted in that Epiſtle, but whether any more were ſent after that Time, I know not. Beſides theſe Perſons, that were thus ſerviceable to him, his Turkiſh and Arabian Friends at Aleppo, gave him all the Aſſiſtance they could; particularly, his old Sheich, or Doctor, who procur'd, I find, about this Time, a large Parcel of Books by his Direction. And indeed the Kindneſs he ſtill retain'd for him was ſo great, that he was even tranſported with Joy, on the News that his beloved Scholar was again in the Eaſt; and reſolved immediately on a Journey from Aleppo to the Port, on purpoſe to ſee him, which he perform'd accordingly, ſome Time before Mr. Pocock left that Place.

BESIDES the Society of ſuch learned Men as Conſtantinople itſelf afforded, Mr. Pocock had ſometimes that of ſome, who came from other Parts. Amongſt theſe was Chriſtianus Ravius, born in, or near [l] Francfort on the Oder, and Brother to Joannes Ravius, a Teacher of Arabick for ſome Time at Utrecht. He having a Deſign to go into the Eaſt, for his Improvement in the Languages of thoſe Countries, and to collect Books, Gerard Voſſius [m], at his Requeſt, recommended him directly, in a Letter, to Mr. Pocock, and deſired Archbiſhop Laud to do the ſame, which he did accordingly. And happy was it for Ravius, that he brought to Conſtantinople tinople this laſt Recommendation. For, as Mr. Pocock informed the Archbiſhop, by Letter, 'He came thither, without either Clothes befitting him (of which he ſaid he had been robbed 'in France) or Money, or Letters of Credit, to any Merchant. He had Letters of Recom-'mendation from ſome of the States to the Dutch Ambaſſador, who was departed before his 'Arrival. Sir Sackvil Crow, the Engliſh Ambaſſador, finding that he brought the Archbiſhop's 'Recommendation, generouſly took him into his Houſe and Protection, and gave him all 'due Furtherance; requiring of him that, if Occaſion ſo preſent itſelf, England may enjoy 'the Benefit of what Time he ſhall here employ, in the Study of the Eaſtern Tongues. His 'Deſire, Mr. Pocock adds, ſeems to be, to be employed in ſetting forth Books in the Arabick 'Language, and to be Overſeer of the Preſs in that Kind, for which he would be very fitting.' Ravius afterwards return'd with a [n] Collection of four hundred Manuſcripts in ſeveral Languages (a Catalogue of which was printed at Leyden) and became of ſome Fame in the World, for Eaſtern Learning.

But of all the learned Men that did, or could come to Conſtantinople, no one was ſo welcome to Mr. Pocock, as his dear Friend, Mr. John Greaves, who having diſpatched thoſe Affairs, which obliged him to ſtop in Italy, as has been before mentioned, arriv'd at the Port, probably, ſome Time in December, 1637. Having been recommended, as well as Mr. Pocock, to the Engliſh Ambaſſador, by the Archbiſhop, he found there the ſame kind Reception. And with the Aſſiſtance, and under the Protection of that honourable Perſon, he made thoſe Obſervations, and did thoſe other Things, which the learned Writer of his Life [o] has promis'd to oblige the World with. But beſides the Enquiries he was concerned in, as an Antiquary, a natural Philoſopher, and a Mathematician, his Endeavours were much the ſame with Mr. Pocock's, in the Matter of Languages and Manuſcripts. The Tongues, which he now principally applied his Mind to get Perfection in, were Arabick and Perſian; and with what Succeſs, his immortal Writings have ſufficiently diſcovered; and as he was unwearied in ſearching after rare and curious Books, ſo he ſpared no Coſt in the Purchaſe of them.

We have obſerved before, that Mr. Greaves's original Deſign of travelling was to viſit Egypt, as it is probable Mr. Pocock's was to reſide at Conſtantinople. The latter was never fond of travelling, and he had now a particular Call to ſtay where he was. Sir Peter Wich's Lady was gone for England, himſelf intending ſpeedily to follow her; and with her went his Chaplain. But Sir Peter was obliged to ſtay much longer than he deſigned, by Reaſon of the Grand Segnior and Grand Vizier's Abſence, in the Perſian War. For till their Return, he could not obtain his Recredential Letters; and wanting a Chaplain for that Seaſon, which laſted a full Year, Mr. Pocock deſired the Archbiſhop's Leave to ſupply that Place, and obtained it. Mr. Greaves, who, as is ſaid above, arrived at Galata in Dec. 1637, intended, the following Spring, to ſet out for Alexandria; but delighted with the Company of his dear Friend, or finding more Employment about Manuſcripts, than he expected, at Conſtantinople, he did not leave that Place, at ſooneſt, till the latter End of Auguſt, 1638. About which Time, finding a Ship bound for thoſe Parts, he ſet out, and after ſpending ſome little Time in the Way, in the Iſle of Rhodes, he arrived at Alexandria, towards the Middle of October, where he reſided for many Months, and from whence that Letter, full of due Reſpect and Reverence, was ſent by him to Archbiſhop Laud, which became, among many other Things of like Sort, one of the Crimes with which he was charged, on his Trial in the Houſe of Lords, and which gain'd to Mr. Greaves a laſting Teſtimony of his Worth and Learning, deliver'd in that Place by that great Prelate [p].

Mr. Pocock having now the whole Buſineſs of procuring Books at Conſtantinople on his Hands, made uſe of the Diligence that was neceſſary, to ſerve Mr. Greaves, as well as himſelf. And ſome Time after, he found Cauſe for the Increaſe of it in both Reſpects, having receiv'd an Account from him, of the ill Succeſs of his Endeavours of this Kind in Egypt. For he aſſur'd him, that notwithſtanding all the Search he had made after Manuſcripts, for himſelf and him, both at Alexandria and Cairo (where he ventur'd openly to go to the Bezar, and to many of the Moors Houſes) he could find, beſides common Things, nothing but a few old Papers, or rotten and imperfect Books. Several Letters, complaining of this Diſappointment, he ſent to Mr. Pocock, firſt from Alexandria, and afterward from Leghorn, wherein he preſs'd him to do his utmoſt, for ſupplying this Defect, at the Place where he now was, being, he ſaid, as he found by Experience, the Sea into which all the leſſer Rivers had emptied themſelves, all Books of any Value, in other Parts, having been taken up and brought to the Port. He earneſtly deſir'd him, therefore, to make a due Uſe of the Opportunity, he now had in his Hands, not only by ſolliciting the Aſſiſtance of their common Friends at Galata, but even by going over the Water himſelf to the Bezars, and Shops at Stambol; which he ſuppos'd might be done without Hazard, provided a due Caution were uſed about ſuch Books as relate to Religion. He intreated him alſo to make a further Enquiry after the Libraries of private Men, and to attend to the Return of the then victorious Army from Perſia, which, perhaps, among other Spoils, might bring with them many Books in the Language of that Country.

[n] Mr. Pocock, in a Letter to Mr. Selden (penes D. D. Mead, uti ſupra) ſpeaking of this Collection, ſays, 'It is 'made, not only in Turky, but more in London, of Books, gotten by the Direction of others, by Merchants who, 'by Reaſon of the Diſturbance of the Times, knew not how to diſpoſe of them.' BESIDES the Directions Mr. Greaves had left with Mr. Pocock, at Conſtantinople, when he went thence, he now alſo ſent him a further Account of ſuch Manuſcripts, as he moſt deſir'd to have; and perhaps the learned Reader will not think it tedious to take a ſhort View of ſome of the Particulars. Very ſollicitous, I find, he was for the Aſtronomical, and other Works of that Indian Prince, Ulug Beg, Nephew to Tamerlan the Great. With the Help of two or three Copies of theſe, one of which the Lord Ambaſſador had promiſed to buy for him, he hop'd, he ſaid, having made a Latin Tranſlation out of Perſian, to publiſh the Whole at his Return into England. Which Work he, in ſome Meaſure, perform'd, dedicating one Part of it jointly to Mr. Pocock, and his own Brother, Mr. Thomas Greaves. He was not leſs earneſt for the Geography of Abulfeda, Prince of Hamah, an Arabick Writer, Part of which, in like Manner, he afterward tranſlated and publiſhed. The Alcoran he deſir'd, not only in the original Arabick, but alſo in Turkiſh and Perſian, with ſuch Gloſſes and Commentaries relating to it, as could be found. Alſo Avicenna de Animâ, and any other Part of him, that was to be had in Perſian; Al battany, the Planiſphere and Geography of Ptolemy, Guliſtan in Arabick and Mircondus in Perſian. And tho' he nam'd theſe, and ſome other Books, it was not his Deſign that none elſe ſhould be procur'd for him. For he deſir'd that Mr. Pocock, who very well knew his Studies, and what would be of Uſe to them, would endeavour to get all the Manuſcripts, he ſhould think good, in Perſian, Turkiſh, and Arabick, eſpecially, ſuch as relate to Hiſtory, Philoſophy, Phyſick, Chymiſtry, Algebra and Mathematicks. And as for Mathematicians, that he would carefully remember to enquire after the Ancients, that have been tranſlated out of Greek, and either are not yet extant in Europe, or elſe imperfectly publiſhed. After all, he beg'd him not to be forgetful of ſeveral Greek Manuſcripts, which Dr. Cerigo had promiſed to procure.

MR. Pocock's Commiſſion from the Archbiſhop, was more general. He left it to his own Diſcretion, to procure ſuch Books in the Eaſtern, or other learned Languages, as he ſhould judge proper for an Univerſity Library, and in ſuch Places, where he thought they might moſt eaſily be found. But in April, A. D. 1638, at the Motion of Archbiſhop Uſher, he recommended to him a more particular Method. 'The Primate, ſays he, in a Letter of the Date 'laſt mentioned, is perſuaded that the Patriarch Cyril can procure Clemens Alexandrinus's Hy- 'potypoſes. It were wonderful well worth the getting, if it might be had. But, for my own 'Part, I do not think the Patriarch hath it. Yet you may try and hearken after it, that 'I may be able to give the Primate the better Satisfaction. The Primate writes further to me, 'that Greece having been often gleaned, the likelieſt Way left for good Greek Manuſcripts, is, 'for you to ſtrike over, from the Place where you are, to Natolia, and ſee, what that and 'Mount Athos will afford you, whilſt you are ſo near them; which yet I muſt leave to your 'own Conveniences.' In Anſwer to this, Mr. Pocock writes, Aug. 18, giving an Account of the Patriarch Cyril's unfortunate End, which prevented his applying to him for the Hypotypoſes of Clemens. He gives alſo the Archbiſhop an Account of the Greek Books at Mount Athos; wherein the Patriarch of Alexandria ſeems to have promiſed his Aſſiſtance, if not alſo to accompany Mr. Pocock thither. But he was hindered from doing either, and moreover in Danger, for not conſenting to anathematize good old Cyril. Which, to uſe Archbiſhop Laud's own Expreſſion, in his next Letter to Mr. Pocock, is ſuch a Piece of Charity, as Barbarity itſelf is ſcarce acquainted with. It appears, from the Courſe of the Correſpondence, that the Patriarch of Alexandria, in the End, loſt his Life, and, as was ſuppoſed, thro' the Contrivance of the new Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who had ſerved his own Predeceſſor ſo before. The Death of two great and good Patriarchs, contrived to gratify his own Ambition and Malice, was a heavy Charge upon the new Patriarch. And as Men are apt to form ſevere Judgments againſt the Authors of Miſchief, to thoſe in their own Circumſtances, it might have been expected, that Archbiſhop Laud would not have diſcover'd the leaſt Approbation of that Mercy, which ſpared the Life of the new Partriarch, after his Fall, and condemn'd him to Impriſonment, rather to prevent his Death from the Fury of the Multitude, than as a Puniſhment. But to ſhew how little the Archbiſhop favoured ſanguinary Methods, tho' ſtill calumniated on this Score, by his Enemies, hear his Chriſtian and Temperate Expreſſion. 'I heard, ſays he, '(in a Letter to Mr. Pocock, dated, April 8, 1640.) before your Letters came to me, that the 'Patriarch, who ſucceeded Cyril, was like to ſuffer. And certainly he deſerv'd it, and that 'in a ſeverer Manner, than is fallen upon him. Yet I cannot but ſay there is Charity, and per- 'haps Wiſdom, in preventing the Execution, that might otherwiſe have fallen upon him.'

AND now to return to Mr. Greaves. It will not, perhaps, be thought a very great Indecency, that the Affairs of a Perſon, who had the largeſt Share in Mr. Pocock's Friendſhip, take up ſo much Room in this Account of his Life. I ſhall therefore let the Reader know a little further how Mr. Greaves employ'd himſelf in Egypt, and what Requeſts he ſent thence to Mr. Pocock; beſides thoſe already mentioned. He was now, as a very learned Perſon hath obſerved [q], travelling in that Country, with Deſigns as great as thoſe of Pythagoras, Plato, or any other of the antient Greek Philoſophers, who went thither in the Search of Knowledge. And as the Methods he made uſe of to obtain it, were much more exact than theirs, ſo his Induſtry was indefatigable. He made a Collection of an infinite Maſs and Variety of Hiero-

print Catechiſms, and other uſeful Books, for the Inſtruction of the Chriſtians under his Care, as a ſeditious Deſign againſt the Government; but by the Zeal and Diligence of the Engliſh Ambaſſadors, firſt Sir Thomas Rowe, and afterward Sir Peter Wich, together with the Aſſiſtance of the Dutch Reſident, who heartily eſpouſed his Cauſe, he not only diſappointed the wicked Deſigns of thoſe Men, but obtained ſuch an Intereſt in the Prime Vizier, as ſeem'd a ſufficient Fence againſt all future Trouble. However, a Jeſuitical Malice, tho' baffled, is not ended, and a helliſh Contrivance at length prevailed. A Bargain is ſtruck up with a great Baſha, to take the Opportunity of the Vizier's Abſence, and fill the Ears of the Grand Segnior, Sultan Morad, then on the Borders of Perſia, in order to the Siege of Bagdad, with the great Danger, that his Empire was in, from the Patriarch Cyril, a popular Man, of a vaſt Intereſt, and that kept, as this Informer pretended to be well aſſur'd, a cloſe Correſpondence with Chriſtian Princes. This ſucceeded according to their Hopes, and a written Order was immediately diſpatcht for the taking away his Life: Which was preſently executed, with a Barbarity natural to ſuch Inſtruments. A Crew of Janizaries, ſeizing him in his Palace, carried him to Sea, as it were for another Baniſhment; where, in a Boat, amidſt the moſt devout Prayers to Almighty God, which on his Knees, with much Fervor and Conſtancy, he poured out, they reviled, buffeted, and then ſtrangled him; and having taken off his Clothes, caſt him naked into the Water. His Body, being driven to the Shore, was there ſecur'd, till ſome of his Friends took Care to bury it. But the Rage of his Enemies would not afford it ſuch a reſting Place. They cauſed it to be digg'd up, and caſt again into the Sea. However, a ſecond Time it was taken up, by the Humanity of ſome Fiſhermen, and at the Charge of his Friends, buried in a Greek Chapel, on a little Iſland; whence afterward, to ſatisfy the People, when the Heat of Things was over, it was brought to Conſtantinople, and there decently interr'd.

As this venerable Man was thus murdered on the Water; ſo a little Time after, there was too much Reaſon to conclude, that the choice Manuſcripts of his Library were ſwallowed up by it. Thoſe precious Wares were a very deſirable Purchaſe, to any that underſtood the Worth of them; and, it ſeems, the Dutch Reſident had the good Fortune to find Means to obtain them. To make ſure of which, againſt the Endeavours of the new Patriarch, who began to make a diligent Enquiry after them, he ſent them away, with ſome other of his Goods, by a Ship then returning to Holland. And tho' that Veſſel arrived ſafely at the intended Harbour, the very next Day, by the Violence of an extraordinary Storm, it ſunk there, among many others, and the Cargo with it. That thoſe Manuſcripts, by theſe Means, were irrecoverably loſt, I find by one of Mr. Pocock's Letters, was believed at Conſtantinople. But whether the Report afterward appeared true or falſe, I have not had Opportunity of inquiring. I ſhall conclude the Account of Cyril with obſerving, that Archbiſhop Laud was deeply concerned at the Misfortunes of the old Patriarch. In his Anſwer to Mr. Pocock, on that Head, he writes thus: 'For his Succeſſor, I hear no Good yet; what it will pleaſe God 'to work by him I know not. It may be, he hath ſhewed the Turk a Way, in the Death of 'Cyril, how to deal with himſelf.' In this, the Archbiſhop conjectured happily enough. For in leſs than a Year's Time, the new Patriarch, whoſe wicked Intreigues haſtened the Death of his Predeceſſor, was charged, by the Greeks, with Extortion, and other Wrongs done to their Church and its Privileges; and upon a Hearing before the Baſha, he was convicted and impriſoned, and the Greeks had Leave to chooſe a new Patriarch; upon which they elected Parthenius, Archbiſhop of Adrianople.

The Patriarch Cyril having had a great Eſteem for Mr. Pocock, it cannot be doubted, but that his Chaplains, and other Domeſticks, treated him with much Reſpect, and did him all the good Offices they were capable of. This was particularly and certainly true of Nathanael Canopius, his [e] Protoſyncellus, a Cretan born, as was alſo the old Patriarch, and of equal good Inclinations towards the Religion eſtabliſhed in the Church of England. This Perſon, being aſſur'd of commendatory Letters, both from the Engliſh Ambaſſador and Mr. Pocock, had reſolv'd to ſpend ſome Time in England; there to improve himſelf in ſeveral Kinds of Learning. And upon the Death of Cyril, what before was Matter of Choice to him, became alſo neceſſary, to avoid the ſame Uſage that he had met with. Taking, therefore, the firſt Opportunity of a Ship for his Paſſage into England, he came to London; where Archbiſhop Laud received him with a great deal of Kindneſs, ſent him to Baliol College in Oxford [f], and there allowed him a comfortable Maintenance. Some Time after, he was removed from Baliol, and became one of the Petty-Canons of Chriſt-Church; and living there ſeveral Years after Mr. Pocock came back from his Travels, he met with ſuitable Returns from him, for the Kindneſs he had ſhewn him at Conſtantinople. And, to digreſs alſo here a little farther, with the Account of this good and learned Man, more Years would he have ſpent on his Studies in Oxford, had not ſuch a furious Zeal, as forced him from home, driven him alſo from this Univerſity. It was not indeed that of Jeſuits and Mahometans, but of a Sort of People, whom there will

[e] The Syncelli, both in the Latin and Greek Churches, but principally in the latter, were Eccleſiaſticks, that cohabited with Biſhops and Patriarchs in the ſame Cell; from whence they took their Name. They were inſtituted as Witneſſes of the Biſhop's good Behaviour, and that they might profit by his holy Example. Of theſe the Chief was called the Protoſyncellus. See Du Freſne. [f] Athen. Oxon. be too much Occaſion hereafter to mention, call'd, Parliamentarian Viſitors. By theſe, in the Beginning of Nov. 1648, being turn'd out of his Preferment at Chriſt-Church, he went into Holland [g], where he was reduc'd to ſuch Extremities, that he was forced, in a Latin Addreſs, to petition the States for the neceſſary Expence of his own Paſſage home, and the Carriage of his Books [h]. After his Return, he was made Biſhop of Smyrna, but what afterwards befel him, I know not.

ANOTHER Perſon amongſt the Greeks, who proved of ſome Uſe to Mr. Pocock, was Georgio Cerigo, a Doctor of Phyſick, reſiding at Galata. Beſides the Skill he had in his Profeſſion, he was a Man of conſiderable Learning, eſpecially in Aſtronomy, and other Mathematical Sciences. And as he had the Command of a great many Manuſcripts, ſo he would part with ſeveral of them to Mr. Pocock for his own Uſe, and that of his Friends, eſpecially to receive in Exchange for them, ſome Weſtern Rarities. This Perſon had alſo a Brother, who was a Scholar, and now concern'd with him in the ſame learned Traffick. To whom may be added Segnior Dominico and Conſtantinus Duca, who are mentioned on the like Occaſions.

WITH this Aſſiſtance, Mr. Pocock carried on his Buſineſs of procuring Manuſcripts with good Succeſs, purchaſing a conſiderable Number of ſuch as were very uſeful; but for the moſt Part of no ſmall Price; for the Dearneſs of Books there he often complained of. Neither were his Endeavours of this Kind confined to Conſtantinople. For having frequent Opportunities of ſending to Aleppo, he often deſir'd ſeveral of his old Friends there, to be diligent in taking up ſuch as that Country afforded. The chief of theſe were Mr. William Corderoy and Mr. Richard Hill, Engliſh Merchants; and indeed the Service they did, not only to this learned Man, but to Learning itſelf, well deſerves that they ſhould be remembred; eſpecially the firſt, who was alſo very uſeful in this Way to ſome others [i]. By the Diligence of theſe, he got the Perſian Goſpels; which proved afterwards of good Uſe in the Edition of the Engliſh Polyglott Bible. They waited a conſiderable Time before they could buy theſe, firſt from one, call'd by them, Cogie Caudie, and after his Death from his Son, who would not be induc'd to ſell this Book, till at length his Poverty forced him to it. And there being ſeveral Books, which he had deſired, that were not to be gotten there, they ſent a Perſon as far as Damaſcus, on purpoſe to ſeek them for him. Moreover, they recommended to him a Syrian Chriſtian, call'd, as they told him, Abdel Meſſiah, and dwelling at Muſſoloe, who was taking a Journey on ſome Buſineſs to Conſtantinople, as a Perſon very fit and willing to be employed, on his Return, in buying Books, which, being ſent to Aleppo, they promiſed to pay for, and to ſee conveyed. Indeed, among the Chriſtians of thoſe Parts, there were ſeveral, with whom he had been very intimate, and who now, and upon all Occaſions, were ready to oblige him by any Thing they were capable of: Particularly the Patriarch of Antioch, and a Brother he had, who ſtyl'd himſelf Thalge, the Scribe. The Patriarch had that Regard for Mr. Pocock, that he undertook to procure for him as many of the Books of Ephræm, in the Original Syriack, as were to be had in that Country, in order to their being tranſcribed. And his Brother, who wrote a very fair Character [k], and was very diligent in tranſcribing both Syriack and Arabick Books, engaged to furniſh him with true Copies of all the Parts, that were to be found, of that Father's Works. Several of theſe were ſent to him at Conſtantinople, by the Care of Mr. Hill, which, I ſuppoſe, are now among his other Manuſcripts, in the Bodleian Library. The reſt too would have been finiſhed, and ſent in a little Time, had not that Work been interrupted by the Death of the Patriarch. It alſo appears, by a Letter of this Thalge to Mr. Pocock, (wherein, with much Reſpect, he calls him his Father, his much deſired chief Maſter, and honoured Doctor) that he undertook to procure for him whatever Hiſtorical Accounts were to be obtained there, of Ephræm's Life. Some few of theſe he inſerted in that Epiſtle, but whether any more were ſent after that Time, I know not. Beſides theſe Perſons, that were thus ſerviceable to him, his Turkiſh and Arabian Friends at Aleppo, gave him all the Aſſiſtance they could; particularly, his old Sheich, or Doctor, who procur'd, I find, about this Time, a large Parcel of Books by his Direction. And indeed the Kindneſs he ſtill retain'd for him was ſo great, that he was even tranſported with Joy, on the News that his beloved Scholar was again in the Eaſt; and reſolved immediately on a Journey from Aleppo to the Port, on purpoſe to ſee him, which he perform'd accordingly, ſome Time before Mr. Pocock left that Place.

BESIDES the Society of ſuch learned Men as Conſtantinople itſelf afforded, Mr. Pocock had ſometimes that of ſome, who came from other Parts. Amongſt theſe was Chriſtianus Ravius, born in, or near [l] Francfort on the Oder, and Brother to Joannes Ravius, a Teacher of Arabick for ſome Time at Utrecht. He having a Deſign to go into the Eaſt, for his Improvement in the Languages of thoſe Countries, and to collect Books, Gerard Voſſius [m], at his Requeſt, recommended him directly, in a Letter, to Mr. Pocock, and deſired Archbiſhop Laud to do the ſame, which he did accordingly. And happy was it for Ravius, that he brought to Conſtantinople tinople this laſt Recommendation. For, as Mr. Pocotk informed the Archbiſhop, by Letter, 'He came thither, without either Clothes befitting him (of which he ſaid he had been robbed 'in France) or Money, or Letters of Credit, to any Merchant. He had Letters of Recom-'mendation from ſome of the States to the Dutch Ambaſſador, who was departed before his 'Arrival. Sir Sackvil Crow, the Engliſh Ambaſſador, finding that he brought the Archbiſhop's 'Recommendation, generouſly took him into his Houſe and Protection, and gave him all 'due Furtherance; requiring of him that, if Occaſion ſo preſent itſelf, England may enjoy 'the Beneſit of what Time he ſhall here employ, in the Study of the Eaſtern Tongues. His 'Deſire, Mr. Pocock adds, ſeems to be, to be employed in ſetting forth Books in the Arabick 'Language, and to be Overſeer of the Preſs in that Kind, for which he would be very fitting.' Ravius afterwards return'd with a [n] Collection of four hundred Manuſcripts in ſeveral Languages (a Catalogue of which was printed at Leyden) and became of ſome Fame in the World, for Eaſtern Learning.

But of all the learned Men that did, or could come to Conſtantinople, no one was ſo welcome to Mr. Pocock, as his dear Friend, Mr. John Greaves, who having diſpatched thoſe Affairs, which obliged him to ſtop in Italy, as has been before mentioned, arriv'd at the Port, probably, ſome Time in December, 1637. Having been recommended, as well as Mr. Pocock, to the Engliſh Ambaſſador, by the Archbiſhop, he found there the ſame kind Reception. And with the Aſſiſtance, and under the Protection of that honourable Perſon, he made thoſe Obſervations, and did thoſe other Things, which the learned Writer of his Life [o] has promis'd to oblige the World with. But beſides the Enquiries he was concerned in, as an Antiquary, a natural Philoſopher, and a Mathematician, his Endeavours were much the ſame with Mr. Pocock's, in the Matter of Languages and Manuſcripts. The Tongues, which he now principally applied his Mind to get Perfection in, were Arabick and Perſian; and with what Succeſs, his immortal Writings have ſufficiently diſcovered; and as he was unwearied in ſearching after rare and curious Books, ſo he ſpared no Coſt in the Purchaſe of them.

We have obſerved before, that Mr. Greaves's original Deſign of travelling was to viſit Egypt, as it is probable Mr. Pocock's was to reſide at Conſtantinople. The latter was never fond of travelling, and he had now a particular Call to ſtay where he was. Sir Peter Wich's Lady was gone for England, himſelf intending ſpeedily to follow her; and with her went his Chaplain. But Sir Peter was obliged to ſtay much longer than he deſigned, by Reaſon of the Grand Segnior and Grand Vizier's Abſence, in the Perſian War. For till their Return, he could not obtain his Recredential Letters; and wanting a Chaplain for that Seaſon, which laſted a full Year, Mr. Pocock deſired the Archbiſhop's Leave to ſupply that Place, and obtained it. Mr. Greaves, who, as is ſaid above, arrived at Galata in Dec. 1637, intended, the following Spring, to ſet out for Alexandria; but delighted with the Company of his dear Friend, or finding more Employment about Manuſcripts, than he expected, at Conſtantinople, he did not leave that Place, at ſooneſt, till the latter End of Auguſt, 1638. About which Time, finding a Ship bound for thoſe Parts, he ſet out, and after ſpending ſome little Time in the Way, in the Iſle of Rhodes, he arrived at Alexandria, towards the Middle of October, where he reſided for many Months, and from whence that Letter, full of due Reſpect and Reverence, was ſent by him to Archbiſhop Laud, which became, among many other Things of like Sort, one of the Crimes with which he was charged, on his Trial in the Houſe of Lords, and which gain'd to Mr. Greaves a laſting Teſtimony of his Worth and Learning, deliver'd in that Place by that great Prelate [p].

Mr. Pocock having now the whole Buſineſs of procuring Books at Conſtantinople on his Hands, made uſe of the Diligence that was neceſſary, to ſerve Mr. Greaves, as well as himſelf. And ſome Time after, he found Cauſe for the Increaſe of it in both Reſpects, having receiv'd an Account from him, of the ill Succeſs of his Endeavours of this Kind in Egypt. For he aſſur'd him, that notwithſtanding all the Search he had made after Manuſcripts, for himſelf and him, both at Alexandria and Cairo (where he ventur'd openly to go to the Bezar, and to many of the Moors Houſes) he could find, beſides common Things, nothing but a few old Papers, or rotten and imperfect Books. Several Letters, complaining of this Diſappointment, he ſent to Mr. Pocock, firſt from Alexandria, and afterward from Leghorn, wherein he preſs'd him to do his utmoſt, for ſupplying this Defect, at the Place where he now was, being, he ſaid, as he found by Experience, the Sea into which all the leſſer Rivers had emptied themſelves, all Books of any Value, in other Parts, having been taken up and brought to the Port. He earneſtly deſir'd him, therefore, to make a due Uſe of the Opportunity, he now had in his Hands, not only by ſolliciting the Aſſiſtance of their common Friends at Galata, but even by going over the Water himſelf to the Bezars, and Shops at Stambol; which he ſuppos'd might be done without Hazard, provided a due Caution were uſed about ſuch Books as relate to Religion. He intreated him alſo to make a further Enquiry after the Libraries of private Men, and to attend to the Return of the then victorious Army from Perſia, which, perhaps, among other Spoils, might bring with them many Books in the Language of that Country.

Mead, uti ſupra) ſpeaking of this Collection, ſays, 'It is 'made, not only in Turky, but more in London, of Books, gotten by the Direction of others, by Merchants who, 'by Reaſon of the Diſturbance of the Times, knew not how to diſpoſe of them.' BESIDES the Directions Mr. Greaves had left with Mr. Pocock, at Conſtantinople, when he went thence, he now alſo ſent him a further Account of ſuch Manuſcripts, as he moſt deſir'd to have; and perhaps the learned Reader will not think it tedious to take a ſhort View of ſome of the Particulars. Very ſollicitous, I find, he was for the Aſtronomical, and other Works of that Indian Prince, Ulug Beg, Nephew to Tamerlan the Great. With the Help of two or three Copies of theſe, one of which the Lord Ambaſſador had promiſed to buy for him, he hop'd, he ſaid, having made a Latin Tranſlation out of Perſian, to publiſh the Whole at his Return into England. Which Work he, in ſome Meaſure, perform'd, dedicating one Part of it jointly to Mr. Pocock, and his own Brother, Mr. Thomas Greaves. He was not leſs earneſt for the Geography of Abulfeda, Prince of Hamah, an Arabick Writer, Part of which, in like Manner, he afterward tranſlated and publiſhed. The Alcoran he deſir'd, not only in the original Arabick, but alſo in Turkiſh and Perſian, with ſuch Gloſſes and Commentaries relating to it, as could be found. Alſo Avicenna de Animâ, and any other Part of him, that was to be had in Perſian; Al battany, the Planiſphere and Geography of Ptolemy, Guliſtan in Arabick and Mircondus in Perſian. And tho' he nam'd theſe, and ſome other Books, it was not his Deſign that none elſe ſhould be procur'd for him. For he deſir'd that Mr. Pocock, who very well knew his Studies, and what would be of Uſe to them, would endeavour to get all the Manuſcripts, he ſhould think good, in Perſian, Turkiſh, and Arabick, eſpecially, ſuch as relate to Hiſtory, Philoſophy, Phyſick, Chymiſtry, Algebra and Mathematicks. And as for Mathematicians, that he would carefully remember to enquire after the Ancients, that have been tranſlated out of Greek, and either are not yet extant in Europe, or elſe imperfectly publiſhed. After all, he beg'd him not to be forgetful of ſeveral Greek Manuſcripts, which Dr. Cerigo had promiſed to procure.

MR. Pocock's Commiſſion from the Archbiſhop, was more general. He left it to his own Diſcretion, to procure ſuch Books in the Eaſtern, or other learned Languages, as he ſhould judge proper for an Univerſity Library, and in ſuch Places, where he thought they might moſt eaſily be found. But in April, A. D. 1638, at the Motion of Archbiſhop Uſher, he recommended to him a more particular Method. 'The Primate, ſays he, in a Letter of the Date 'laſt mentioned, is perſuaded that the Patriarch Cyril can procure Clemens Alexandrinus's Hy- 'potypoſes. It were wonderful well worth the getting, if it might be had. But, for my own 'Part, I do not think the Patriarch hath it. Yet you may try and hearken after it, that 'I may be able to give the Primate the better Satisfaction. The Primate writes further to me, 'that Greece having been often gleaned, the likelieſt Way left for good Greek Manuſcripts, is, 'for you to ſtrike over, from the Place where you are, to Natolia, and ſee, what that and 'Mount Athos will afford you, whilſt you are ſo near them; which yet I muſt leave to your 'own Conveniences.' In Anſwer to this, Mr. Pocock writes, Aug. 18, giving an Account of the Patriarch Cyril's unfortunate End, which prevented his applying to him for the Hypotypoſes of Clemens. He gives alſo the Archbiſhop an Account of the Greek Books at Mount Athos; wherein the Patriarch of Alexandria ſeems to have promiſed his Aſſiſtance, if not alſo to accompany Mr. Pocock thither. But he was hindered from doing either, and moreover in Danger, for not conſenting to anathematize good old Cyril. Which, to uſe Archbiſhop Laud's own Expreſſion, in his next Letter to Mr. Pocock, is ſuch a Piece of Charity, as Barbarity itſelf is ſcarce acquainted with. It appears, from the Courſe of the Correſpondence, that the Patriarch of Alexandria, in the End, loſt his Life, and, as was ſuppoſed, thro' the Contrivance of the new Patriarch of Conſtantinople, who had ſerved his own Predeceſſor ſo before. The Death of two great and good Patriarchs, contrived to gratify his own Ambition and Malice, was a heavy Charge upon the new Patriarch. And as Men are apt to form ſevere Judgments againſt the Authors of Miſchief, to thoſe in their own Circumſtances, it might have been expected, that Archbiſhop Laud would not have diſcover'd the leaſt Approbation of that Mercy, which ſpared the Life of the new Partriarch, after his Fall, and condemn'd him to Impriſonment, rather to prevent his Death from the Fury of the Multitude, than as a Puniſhment. But to ſhew how little the Archbiſhop favoured ſanguinary Methods, tho' ſtill calumniated on this Score, by his Enemies, hear his Chriſtian and Temperate Expreſſion. 'I heard, ſays he, '(in a Letter to Mr. Pocock, dated, April 8, 1640.) before your Letters came to me, that the 'Patriarch, who ſucceeded Cyril, was like to ſuffer. And certainly he deſerv'd it, and that 'in a ſeverer Manner, than is fallen upon him. Yet I cannot but ſay there is Charity, and per- 'haps Wiſdom, in preventing the Execution, that might otherwiſe have fallen upon him.'

AND now to return to Mr. Greaves. It will not, perhaps, be thought a very great Indecency, that the Affairs of a Perſon, who had the largeſt Share in Mr. Pocock's Friendſhip, take up ſo much Room in this Account of his Life. I ſhall therefore let the Reader know a little further how Mr. Greaves employ'd himſelf in Egypt, and what Requeſts he ſent thence to Mr. Pocock; beſides thoſe already mentioned. He was now, as a very learned Perſon hath obſerved [q], travelling in that Country, with Deſigns as great as thoſe of Pythagoras, Plato, or any other of the antient Greek Philoſophers, who went thither in the Search of Knowledge. And as the Methods he made uſe of to obtain it, were much more exact than theirs, ſo his Induſtry was indefatigable. He made a Collection of an infinite Maſs and Variety of Hiero-

[q] Vita Joan. Gravii, p. 7.

Hieroglyphicks [r]; conſidered all the Rarities he met with in Architecture; took a moſt accurate Account of all the Monuments of Antiquity, and the ſeveral Inſcriptions he found; and diligently enquir'd into all the Works of Nature, which ſeem rare and wonderful. Twice he went from Alexandria to Cairo, and both Times meaſured the three famous Pyramids, which are near that Place, and that with an Exactneſs incomparably beyond whatever had been attempted there before; uſing, for that Purpoſe, beſides other Inſtruments, a Radius, ten Foot long, moſt accurately divided. And as he aſcended by the Degrees on the Out-ſide, to the Top of the greateſt Pyramid; ſo by the narrow Paſſage, on the North Side of it, he entered to the very Center of it: Where, taking with the utmoſt Niceneſs, all the Dimenſions of the ſpacious Marble Chamber, in the midſt of which is the Tomb of Cheops, or Chemmis, the ſuppoſed Founder, he fixed a Standard, for adjuſting Meaſures to all Poſterity. An Expedient, much deſired by learned Men, but never taken Care of by any before him [s]. At Cairo, nothing rare or curious could eſcape him, as appears from his Account of hatching Chicken there in Ovens, printed long after his Death, by the Care of his great Friend, Sir George Ent [t]. Neither was he diſcouraged from travelling many Miles in the Libyan Deſerts, partly to view the ſeveral Pyramids, that ſtand there, but principally to ſee the Mummies, ſeveral of which he opened and accurately examin'd, taking exact Notice, as of the Subſtance of each, ſo of the Make of the Coffin, the Linen Ribbands or Bandages about the Body, and the Scroles, full of Myſtical Characters, that were faſtened to it; and concluding from theſe, as well as the Meaſures of the Marble Tomb in the Pyramid, afore-mentioned, that Nature doth not indeed languiſh in her Productions, as ſome imagine, but that the Men and Women of this Age, are of the ſame Stature with thoſe who lived near three thouſand Years ago. And as ſuch Enquiries were his Buſineſs by Day; ſo when the Weather proved clear, he allowed himſelf very little Sleep at Night; making accurate Obſervations, wherever he came, of many Phænomena in the Heavens, eſpecially, ſuch as were ſerviceable to rectify Geography, by giving the true Longitude and Latitude of Places. In one of Mr. Greaves's Journeys, from Cairo to Alexandria, between Roſetto and Alexandria, an Accident befel him, which might have proved of dangerous Conſequence. He, with ſome Engliſh and French, fell into the Hands of the Arabs, who robbed them. But Mr. Greaves's Loſs was inconſiderable, if we except that of a fair Manuſcript of Euclid, in Arabick, with Vowels. This happened to him in January, 1638-9.

Of theſe Employments in Egypt, Mr. Greaves, from Time to Time, gave Mr. Pocock an Account, and purſuant to the ſame Deſigns, he requeſted his Aſſiſtance in ſome Matters of the like Nature, to be tranſacted at Conſtantinople. He deſired him to be careful in procuring for him ſeveral Obſervations, eſpecially of Eclipſes, which were to be made by Dr. Cerigo, at Galata, by a Raguſa Doctor, who went with the Army to Bagdat, and by a certain Conſul, of his Acquaintance, at Smyrna; alſo to conſult a Manuſcript, not to be bought, in the Hands of Segnior Dominico, concerning the Topography of Egypt; and to tranſcribe thence ſeveral Things, particularly ſuch as related to the Feddanes, which is the Meaſure, by which that Country is divided. Moreover, he recommended to his particular Care ſome Marble Stones, having Inſcriptions, which were to be ſent, by the general Ships, into England; and alſo requeſted him to be at the Pains of noting ſome Things, that had been omitted by him at Conſtantinople, concerning the Compoſition of their Ink, the Turkiſh Way of writing, their Manner of letting Houſes, and making Contracts. Laſtly, he deſir'd Mr. Pocock, if he could poſſibly, to meaſure the Weſt End of S. Sophia, very exactly, with a very fine ſmall Wire of Braſs, or Iron. He had done it himſelf with a Line of Packthread, which, becauſe it ſometimes ſtretches about half a Foot, he could not depend upon. 'You muſt, adds he, with 'many Circumſtances, deſcribe the Place which you meaſure, that if any ſhould deſire to do 'it hereafter, they may take the very ſame without erring.' So wonderfully exact was this great and good Man, to give Information in ſuch Things, that might be depended on.

Besides all this, there was yet another Buſineſs, which he requeſted of Mr. Pocock, and that was, his Examination of a Latin Ode, lately made by him on a Victory, obtain'd by the Great Duke of Tuſcany, over the united Strength of the Corſairs of Barbary. This Ode, he deſir'd him carefully to peruſe, and to ſend his Opinion of it in a Letter, that might meet him on his Return to Italy, where he deſign'd to make uſe of it. And the End, he ſaid, which he had in compoſing it was, beſides the doing an Act of Gratitude for the like Honour, lately done by one of that Court to his Majeſty of England, by this Means, to gain Admiſſion to the Medicean Library, which he had found, by Experience, when formerly at Florence, to be ſhut to Strangers. A Library, famous for a great Variety of excellent Greek Manuſcripts; from one of which the genuine Epiſtles of S. Ignatius have, by the Care of Iſaac Voſſius, been publiſh'd to the World, after they had been loſt for ſome Ages. Three Copies of this Ode he ſent to Mr. Pocock, for fear of Miſcarriage, two of which, I find, came to his Hands. It is addreſſed, Sereniſſimo, Potentiſſimoque Principi, Magnæ Hetruriæ Duci, and begins in this Manner:

Tyrrheni Domitor Maris, Metuſque
Claſſis Barbaricæ, nimis potentis.

[r] Mr. John Greaves's Pyramidographia, p. 142. [s] Pyramidographia, p. 94. [t] Philoſophical Tranſactions, Num. 137. p. 923.

Mr. Pocock's Friends, about this Time, viz. 1639. began to preſs him, by Letters, to think of returning home. Mr. Greaves, from Alexandria, in his laſt Letters, had adviſed him, not to devote himſelf ſo much to his Oriental Studies, as to forget his Hopes, and his Fortunes at home. And Mr. Charles Fettiplace, a Turkey Merchant, reſiding in London, (who took Care to receive his Money from the Archbiſhop, and the College, and to give him Bills for it at Conſtantinople) acquainting him, in a Letter, with ſome Preferments lately beſtowed on his Friend, Mr. Thomas Greaves, had deſir'd him to conſider, that his great Patron was mortal, like other Men, and that therefore, he ſhould by no Means abſent himſelf unneceſſarily, and loſe the Opportunities of improving his Favour to the beſt Advantage. The Archbiſhop alſo, in many ſucceſſive Letters, had been quickening him in this Reſpect. In one, dated, March 4, 1639-40. 'I am now going, ſays he, to ſettle my Arabick Lecture for ever upon the Uni- 'verſity. And I would have your Name in the Deed, which is the beſt Honour I can do for 'the Service.' Mr. Pocock excuſed himſelf for ſome Time, as waiting the Coming of his old Arab from Aleppo, writing, that he purpoſed to ſet forward for England, ſome Time the following Summer. And with this, the Archbiſhop reſted ſatisfied. Accordingly, in Auguſt 1640, he went on board the Margaret, after near four Years Stay at Conſtantinople, which had coſt him between five and ſix hundred Pounds.

He did not deſign to return to England entirely by Sea, but rather to make his Way through Part of Italy and France. It appears, that he intended, before his ſetting out, to land at Leghorn. For he had provided himſelf, before he left Conſtantinople, with Letters of Credit to ſome Merchants in that City. That he was at Genoa, he would often tell his Friends, relating to them ſome-what, that paſſed there; which well deſerves a very ſerious Reflexion. During ſome Stay he made in that Place, there was on a certain Day, a religious Proceſſion, which went thro' the Streets with all the ceremonious Pomp, that is uſual on ſuch Occaſions. And as he ſtood in a convenient Place, to take a View of it, he was ſurpriz'd with the Diſcourſe of ſome Perſons, at a little Diſtance, who talked in Arabick. They were a Couple of Slaves in Chains, who being confident, that no Body could underſtand the Language they ſpake in, expreſs'd their Opinions of what they ſaw, with all Manner of Freedom. And as they rallied the Pageantry they beheld, with a great deal of Wit, ſo from it they took Occaſion to ridicule Chriſtianity itſelf, and to load it with Contempt. So unhappy has the Church of Rome been in her Practices on the Chriſtian Religion: For whilſt, to ſerve ſome worldly Deſigns, ſhe hath laboured to engage the Minds of the vulgar Sort, by empty Shews, and ſuperſtitious Solemnities, ſhe hath, by thoſe corrupt Additions, expos'd what is infinitely rational, wiſe and good, to the Laughter and Reproach of Infidels, who will not take the Pains to diſtinguiſh in the Profeſſors of Chriſtianity, what hath, indeed, the Warrant of the Goſpel, from what hath not.

A little after Chriſtmas, he came to Paris, where, doubtleſs, he converſed with ſeveral eminent Men, tho' no Account is to be met with of any Conference he had with more than two. One of theſe was Gabriel Sionita, the famous Maronite, who then reſided at that Place. With him he had much Diſcourſe about Oriental Learning, and, without queſtion, was very welcome to him, not only becauſe of his great Skill in thoſe Matters, and the very conſiderable Pains he had formerly taken about the Syriack Epiſtles, but for the honourable Mention he had made of this very learned Man, in the Preface to that Work. The other, whom I am alſo aſſur'd he viſited there, was the moſt learned Hugo Grotius, then Ambaſſador at the Court of France, from the Crown of Sweden, to whom he could not but be very acceptable, as upon ſeveral Accounts, ſo particularly, on that of the Relation he ſtood in to a Perſon, for whom Grotius had all imaginable Eſteem and Reverence, the Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury. And doubtleſs the Troubles, which had lately begun to fall on that great Prelate, and the black Cloud, which now hung over the Church of England in general, were the Subject of no ſmall Part of their Converſation.

But there were other Things, about which he was willing to diſcourſe with this great Man. Mr. Pocock, while he continued in the Eaſt, had often lamented the Infatuation, which ſo great a Part of the World lay under, being inſlav'd to the fooliſh Opinions of that grand Impoſtor, Mahomet. He had obſerv'd, in many that profeſs'd his Religion, much Juſtice, and Candor, and Love, and other excellent Qualities, which ſeem'd to prepare them for the Kingdom of God; and therefore he could not but perſuade himſelf, that, were the ſacred Doctrines of the Goſpel duly propoſed to them, not a few might open their Eyes to diſcern the Truth of it. Something, therefore, he reſolv'd to do towards ſo deſirable an End, as he ſhould meet with convenient Leaſure; and, he could not think of any Thing more likely to prove uſeful in this Reſpect, than the tranſlating into Arabick, the general Language of the Eaſt, an admirable Diſcourſe, that had been publiſh'd in Latin, ſome Years before, concerning the Truth of Chriſtianity. With this Deſign he now acquainted Hugo Grotius, the excellent Author of that Treatiſe [u]; who received the Propoſal with much Satisfaction, and gave him a great deal of Encouragement to purſue it. And Mr. Pocock's Aim in this Matter being only the Glory of God, and the Good of Souls, he made no Scruple at all to mention, to that learned Man, ſome Things, towards the End of his Book, which he could not approve, viz. certain Opinions, nions, which, tho' they are commonly, in Europe, charg'd on the Followers of Mahomet, have yet no Foundation in any of their authentick Writings, and are ſuch as they themſelves are ready, on all Occaſions, to diſclaim. With which Freedom of Mr. Pocock, Grotius was ſo far from being diſpleas'd, that he heartily thank'd him for it; and gave him Authority, in the Verſion he intended, to expunge and alter whatſoever he ſhould think fit.

UPON this Occaſion, theſe two learned Men entered into a long Diſcourſe, concerning the State of Things in the Eaſt, and the Reaſons why the holy Religion of Jeſus Chriſt was ſo far from gaining Ground in thoſe Countries, that it was treated there, by Unbelievers, with great Contempt. Mr. Pocock mentioned ſeveral Things, which he obſerved to be thus fatally miſchievous: But amongſt them all, he told him, there was nothing more ſo, than the many Schiſms and Diviſions of thoſe that own the Name of Chriſt, who ought to be as one Fold under one Shepherd. As Grotius very eaſily believ'd what Mr. Pocock thus reported; ſo it inſpir'd him with new Reſolution, and Courage, to purſue the Deſign he was engag'd in, to promote, as far as he was able, the Peace and Union of the Chriſtian World. A glorious Undertaking, and ſuch as highly deſerves the moſt zealous Endeavours, and the moſt fervent Prayers of all that love the Lord Jeſus Chriſt with Sincerity; tho' ſome of the Meaſures, which were followed by that moſt learned Man, are not to be juſtified. For, tho' we are to do what lies in us for the Sake of Chriſtian Peace, we are not to yield up the Truth, even for obtaining that moſt deſirable Bleſſing: We muſt not, we cannot, part with Truth.

IN a ſhort Time Mr. Pocock left Paris, and came for England; where taking London in his Way to Oxford, he found, what he had heard ſeveral Reports of before, namely, a great Change of Affairs ſince he left the Nation, and a ſad Face of Things. A turbulent Party among the Scots, who, when upon very groundleſs Pretences they had arm'd themſelves the laſt Year, had met with all the Kindneſs and Satisfaction, which a very gracious Prince could give them; renewing their Sedition, had now invaded the Northern Parts of the Kingdom. And in the Parliament, which was conven'd to find out the proper Means of ſending theſe diſorderly, and ungrateful People home, too many there were, who were ſo far from promoting a juſt Defence againſt them, that ſome of them approv'd, and others reſolv'd to make uſe of their Deſigns. This unhappy Correſpondence between thoſe that rais'd theſe Troubles, and ſeveral of them that were now call'd upon, as only able to quiet them, diſappointed all the peaceable Endeavours of a pious and good King, and even began to ſhake the very Foundations of the Kingdom. The Thing that was now firſt, and moſt violently attack'd, was the Eccleſiaſtical Government, eſtabliſh'd by Law. This Hierarchy, as it is agreeable to the Word of God, and warranted by the conſtant Practices of the Church of Chriſt, in all Places, and at all Times; ſo it had, for fourſcore Years, reckoning from the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, ſtood both the Glory and the Defence of the Church of England. And, as a learned Gentleman was pleas'd to expreſs his Senſe of the Matter [x], upon the Account of its Antiquity alone, it muſt be concluded now to need Repair. But repairing or mending was but a mean Attempt, for the violent Zeal of ſome others. Wherefore they were for making an utter Deſtruction of all the Roots and Branches of it, even a total Abolition. That this laſt Courſe might be taken, was earneſtly deſir'd [y] by ſuch as, doubtleſs, had made a deep Search into the Nature of the Thing, to wit, ſome Thouſands of Tradeſmen, in and about the City of London, who were ready alſo to demand, what they thus requeſted, at the Doors of the Parliament. And theſe were ſoon ſeconded by five and twenty hundred Kentiſhmen [z], who had found, by Experience, as they ſaid in their Petition, Epiſcopacy to be very dangerous, both to Church and Commonwealth. The Eccleſiaſtical Government itſelf being thus ſtruck at, it could not be expected, that the Governors ſhould eſcape. Accordingly, the chief of theſe, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, was early accuſed of High-treaſon; and ſeveral of thoſe, who had been juſtly puniſhed in the Courts wherein he was concerned, for ſeditious and immoral Practices, were let looſe againſt him, to worry him even to Death.

THE Archbiſhop, having been ten Weeks in the Cuſtody of Mr. Maxwell, Gentleman Uſher of the Black-rod, waiting for the Charge, which was to be brought up againſt him, was committed to the Tower, March 1, 1640, about which Time, or a little after, Mr. Pocock came to London. And he thought himſelf under the ſame Obligation to go and pay his Duty to his Patron, now in this Confinement, as if he had been ſtill one the Height of his former Proſperity, either at his Palace at Lambeth, or his Lodgings in Whitehall. Being admitted to his Preſence, doubtleſs, the vaſt Difference of Circumſtances, which he now beheld, from thoſe he had formerly ſeen him in, could not but fill his Mind with the juſt Senſe of the Uncertainty of human Greatneſs, and the Tranſitorineſs of worldly Honour and Power, even when eſtabliſhed upon Innocence and Virtue. He now ſaw a Man, who, beſides his high Station in the Church, had been for many Years the Favourite of a great and good Prince; a Man, whoſe Advice was moſt followed in Affairs of State, which he ſtill gave, according to his beſt Wiſdom, and with undoubted Integrity; a Man, whoſe Requeſts to the Throne, were ſeldom or never denied; for it was manifeſt, that he managed no private Intereſt for himſelf or his Relations; but had long devoted all that he had to the publick Good: This Man, Mr. Pocock now ſaw fallen from that Eminence, on which he ſtood, become the Object of popular Hatred and Contempt, reproached, accus'd, and ſhut up in Priſon, there to expect the bitter Effects of the Malice of his Enemies, and the Madneſs of the People.

THE Archbiſhop receiv'd Mr. Pocock with many Expreſſions of a very great Eſteem, and a moſt hearty Kindneſs; he thank'd him for the Pains he had been at, in procuring ſo many curious Manuſcripts for him in the Eaſt, and for the ſeveral Accounts of Things, which, from Time to Time, he had ſent him thence; he told him, that he very well knew, what that Diligence, together with an extraordinary Piety and Learning, deſerved from him; that he had firmly purpoſed to make a juſt Acknowledgment of all, by ſome conſiderable Preferment on his Return; and that the Impoſſibility of doing it, which he was now reduced to, was ſuch an Addition to his other Afflictions, as very ſenſibly touch'd him. Mr. Pocock, who could not but be much affected with ſo obliging a Diſcourſe, return'd him Thanks, both for the Favours, he had already conferr'd on him, and for thoſe which he had further deſigned for him. And lamenting the unjuſt Uſage, he had met with, and the Impriſonment he now ſuffer'd, he delivered to him a Meſſage relating to both, which Hugo Grotius had charged him with, when he waited on him at Paris. It was the humble Advice and Requeſt of that learned Man, that his Grace would find out ſome Way, if poſſible, to eſcape out of the Hands he was now in, and paſs to ſome Place beyond the Seas, there to preſerve himſelf for better Times, at leaſt to obtain ſome preſent Security from the Malice of his bitter Enemies, and the Rage of a deluded People. This, Mr. Pocock told him, that excellent Perſon had earneſtly preſs'd him to move his Grace to, as ſoon as he ſhould be able to have Acceſs to him; and he hoped the Thing would appear ſo reaſonable to him, that he would neglect no Means or Opportunity that might be offer'd, to put it in Execution.

THO' this was a Courſe, which had been lately followed by ſome other great Men, particularly, by the Lord Keeper of the great Seal, and by one of the principal Secretaries of State; the former having withdrawn himſelf into Holland, the latter into France; the Archbiſhop, as ſoon as it was thus propoſed to him, declared his Reſolution againſt it. I am obliged, ſaid he, to my good Friend Hugo Grotius, for the Care he has thus expreſs'd of my Safety; but I can, by no Means, be perſuaded to comply with the Counſel he hath given me. An Eſcape, indeed, is feaſible enough; yea, 'tis, I believe, the very Thing, which my Enemies deſire; for every Day an Opportunity for it is preſented to me, a Paſſage being left free, in all Likelihood, for this Purpoſe, that I ſhould endeavour to take the Advantage of it. But they ſhall not be gratified by me, in what they appear to long for; I am almoſt ſeventy Years old; and ſhall I now go about to prolong a miſerable Life, by the Trouble and Shame of Flying? And were I willing to be gone, whither ſhould I fly? Should I go into France, or any other Popiſh Country, it would be to give ſome ſeeming Ground to that Charge of Popery, they have endeavoured, with ſo much Induſtry, and ſo little Reaſon, to faſten upon me. But if I ſhould get into Holland, I ſhould expoſe myſelf to the Inſults of thoſe Sectaries there, to whom my Character is odious, and have every Anabaptiſt come and pull me by the Beard. No, I am reſolved not to think of Flight; but, continuing where I am, patiently to expect and bear, what a good and a wiſe Providence hath provided for me, of what Kind ſoever it ſhall be.

HAVING thus diſcharg'd his Duty to his great Patron, Mr. Pocock haſtened away from the Tumults and Noiſe of London, to ſeek for Peace and Reſt at Oxford; where he had the Satisfaction to find, that his Arabick Lecture would no longer depend on the Uncertainties of an aged Life, purſued too by the moſt induſtrious Malice, being now ſettled to Perpetuity. For the good Archbiſhop, foreſeeing the Storm, that was about to fall upon himſelf, had lately ſent a Grant, to that Univerſity, of about a fifth Part of his Lands, lying in Bray, within the County of Berks, for the Maintenance of this Lecture for ever: The other four Parts being likewiſe ſettled on the Town of Reading, the Place of his Nativity, for charitable Uſes there. The Grant from the Archbiſhop to the Univerſity, of Budd's Paſtures, at Bray, aforeſaid, for the perpetual Endowment of an Arabick Lecture, bore date June 6, in the 16th of Charles I. 1640, and was regiſtered in Chancery, the 18th of the ſame Month. The Grant was not direct, but conveyed thro' the Hands of two Truſtees, viz. Adam Forteſcue and William Dell, both of Lambeth, Eſquires. And, I ſuppoſe, the Reaſons of conſtituting this Truſt was, that the Grant running to the Chancellor, &c. the Archbiſhop, who was then Chancellor, muſt otherwiſe have granted to himſelf. The Truſtees deviſed the Paſtures above mentioned, to the Univerſity of Oxford, June 13, 1640.

ON the 6th of November following, the munificent Archbiſhop made another Preſent of Manuſcripts to the Univerſity of Oxford; Six of which were Hebrew, Eleven Greek, Thirty Four Arabick, Twenty One Latin, Two Italick, and Two Engliſh, beſides Five Perſick, one of which, written in very large Folio, contained the Hiſtory of the World, from the Creation, to the End of the Saracenick Empire, in all Eighty One. Together with theſe he ſent a moſt affectionate Letter, deploring the Iniquity of the Times, and the State of the Church; concluding, with moſt ardent Prayers for the Peace and Proſperity of that Univerſity. This Letter was dated, Nov. 6, juſt four Days after the firſt Sitting of the long Parliament, and leſs than ſix Weeks before the Archbiſhop's Commitment to the Black-rod. This Donation is the more pertinent to our main Story, as it is probable, that moſt of theſe Manuſcripts had been procured by Mr. Pocock, and his dear Friend, Mr. John Greaves.

Mr. Pocock, now at Oxford, applied himſelf, with as much Chearfulneſs as thoſe melancholy Times would admit of, not only to the Duties of his Lecture, but to ſeveral other Deſigns, both in Arabick and Rabbinical Learning. And, indeed, it was impoſſible for him to do otherwiſe, if he would now anſwer the Expectation which every Body had of him. His great Abilities were very well known, before he went from England; and it could not but be concluded, that in the many Years he had ſpent in the Eaſt, he had made a vaſt Improvement in all the Learning of thoſe Countries. Wherefore, upon his coming home, great Matters were expected from him, by the learned Men of this and other Nations. This, in Part, appears from an Epiſtle, which his old Friend, Gerard Voſſius, ſent him [a], together with a Preſent of ſome Books, lately publiſh'd by him, as ſoon as he heard of his Arrival at Oxford; 'I 'give Thanks unto God, ſaid he, for your ſafe Return, as upon the private Score of our 'Friendſhip, ſo upon the publick Account, becauſe I well perceive how great Advantages the 'Republick of Letters, and the Church of God, may receive from you. For if, for more 'than fifteen Years ago, you could acquit yourſelf ſo well, what may we not hope from you 'now, that Age, and the Induſtry of ſo many Years, have much increas'd your Knowledge, 'and ripen'd your Judgment? Your Return, therefore, I congratulate to yourſelf, to Oxford, 'and to all England; yea, and to the whole learned World.'

That which was moſt likely to leſſen his Diligence in preparing any Thing for the publick View, was that Diffidence of himſelf, and his own Labours, which his great Modeſty and Humility ſtill ſuggeſted to him; whereby he was, upon all Occaſions, very prone to fancy, that none of his Performances could be of Value and Uſefulneſs enough, to juſtify the Publication of them. However, upon the earneſt Requeſt of his Friends, and the Repreſentations they made to him of the Services he was capable of, he was contented to proceed, and he now laid the Foundations of ſeveral very conſiderable Works, which, ſome Years after, were made publick, being ready, as he tells Gerard Voſſius, in his Anſwer to the Letter but now mentioned [b], to put his Hand to any Buſineſs, concerning which he ſhould be ſatisfied, that it would be of the leaſt Benefit to the Commonwealth of Learning.

This Year, viz. 1641, a Correſpondence began between Mr. Pocock and two learned Men, Jacobus Alting, a Foreigner, then in England, and Mr. John Selden. The latter of theſe was then preparing for the Preſs ſome little Part of Eutychius's Annals, in Latin and Arabick, which he publiſhed the Year following, under the Title of Origines Alexandrinæ; and on this Account wanted Mr. Pocock's Aſſiſtance in collating, and extracting from Arabick Books at Oxford. The Occaſion Mr. Selden had for his Services, then and afterwards, produced a Friendſhip, that proved of ſingular Uſe to him on ſeveral urgent Affairs, as will appear in the Courſe of his Story. He had endeavoured, when in London, to wait on Mr. Selden; but was prevented by the other's conſtant Employment. But Providence ſoon ſupplied him with an Opportunity, which he before ſought in vain. The following Year added another very learned Correſpondent, to thoſe before mentioned, which was John Henry Hottinger, of Zurich, who, a little before, had ſeen and known Mr. Pocock in England. He was then employed in tranſlating the Chronicon Samaritanum, which he brought out of Holland, and ſhewed to Primate Uſher here, who then preſſed him to render it into Latin. It appears alſo from Hottinger's Letter, that he was excited to turn the Helvetick Confeſſion into Arabick, by hearing from Hugo Grotius, at Paris, that Mr. Pocock had done the ſame by his Book, de Veritate Religionis Chriſtianæ; and thereupon, he earneſtly begs Directions for that Work.

The War, which broke out this Year, viz. 1642, interrupted all Correſpondence between him and the Learned, both of our own, and other Nations, and alſo made Oxford itſelf an improper Place for Study. Its antient Quiet was now loſt, and nothing to be heard there, but the Noiſe of Arms and armed Men. For in the Month of July, the Members of that Univerſity, having expoſed themſelves to the Indignation of the two Houſes of Parliament, by advancing all the Money they had in their publick Treaſuries, and much out of their own Purſes, for the Service of the King, who was then at York; were obliged, as ſoon as they underſtood that the Earl of Eſſex began to march with an Army, to begin to think of their own Safety. And accordingly, being authorized, as well by a Proclamation againſt the Rebels, as by particular Meſſages ſent to them from his Majeſty, ſome Hundreds of them immediately put themſelves in Arms, and were ſoon after joined by two Hundred Horſe, under the Command of Sir John Byron. About two Months after, theſe Forces being drawn out for the King's Service in other Parts, ſome Troops of the Parliament Side, took Poſſeſſion of Oxford, and there, under the Command of the Lord Say, did what they thought fit; till, in a little Time, his Majeſty march'd thither with his Foot, immediately after the Battle at Edge-Hill, and order'd it to be made a Gariſon, which it continued to be, and alſo the ordinary Reſidence of the Court, to the End of the War. The Military State the Univerſity was then in, and the Hurry that attended it, ſuffered Mr. Pocock to make but ſmall Advances in the Deſigns he had undertaken. And in a ſhort Time, his Mind was diverted to other Matters: For, in the Year 1643, the Rectory of Childry, a Living of a very good Value in the County of Berks, becoming vacant, he was preſented to it by the Preſident and Fellows of Corpus-Chriſti College, the Patrons of it. As this was an Evidence of the Eſteem, which that learned Society had for this worthy Member; ſo, doubtleſs, it could not but be very agreeable to his Inclinations: For Childry being about twelve Miles from Oxford, he could conveniently live upon his Parſonage, and perform the ſeveral Duties he was oblig'd to there, and yet at the proper Times repair to the Univerſity, and read his Lectures. Tho', indeed, at preſent, there was no Room at all for ſuch Exerciſes; the Minds of thoſe who were to frequent them, being fill'd with the Thoughts of other Matters, and the publick Schools taken up for Proviſions, and Warlike Stores.

SECTION III.

MR. Pocock being now a Country Clergyman, ſet himſelf, with his utmoſt Diligence, to a conſcientious Performance of all the Duties of his Cure; labouring for the Edification of thoſe committed to his Charge, with the Zeal and Application of a Man, who thoroughly conſidered the Value of immortal Souls, and the Account he was to give. He was conſtant in preaching, performing that Work twice every Lord's Day. And becauſe the Addition of catechizing, which he would not neglect, made this a Burden too heavy to be always borne by himſelf, he ſometimes procured an Aſſiſtant from Oxford, to preach in the Afternoon. His Sermons were ſo contriv'd by him, as to be moſt uſeful to the Perſons, that were to hear them. For tho' ſuch as he preached in the Univerſity, were very elaborate, and full of critical and other Learning; the Diſcourſes he delivered in his Pariſh, were plain and eaſy, having nothing in them, which he conceived to be above the Capacities, even of the meaneſt of his Auditors. He commonly began with an Explanation of the Text he made choice of, rendering the Senſe of it as obvious and intelligible, as might be: Then he noted whatever was contained in it, relating to a good Life; and recommended it to his Hearers, with a great Force of ſpiritual Arguments, and all the Motives, which appeared moſt likely to prevail with them. And as he carefully avoided the Shews and Oſtentation of Learning; ſo he would not, by any Means, indulge himſelf in the Practice of thoſe Arts, which at that Time were very common, and much admir'd by ordinary People. Such were Diſtortions of the Countenance and ſtrange Geſtures, a violent and unnatural Way of Speaking, and affected Words and Phraſes, which being out of the ordinary Way, were therefore ſuppos'd to expreſs ſome-what very myſterious, and, in a high Degree, ſpiritual. Tho' no Body could be more unwilling than he was to make People uneaſy, if it was poſſible for him to avoid it; yet neither did his natural Temper prevail with him, nor any other Conſideration tempt him, to be ſilent, where Reproof was neceſſary. With a Courage, therefore, becoming an Ambaſſador of Jeſus Chriſt, he boldly declar'd againſt the Sins of the Times; warning thoſe who were under his Care, as againſt all profane and immoral Practices, ſo againſt thoſe Schiſms and Diviſions, which were now breaking in upon the Church, and thoſe Seditions which aimed at the Subverſion of the State. His whole Converſation too was one continued Sermon, powerfully recommending, to all that were acquainted with him, the ſeveral Duties of Chriſtianity. For as he was blameleſs and harmleſs, and without Rebuke; ſo his unaffected Piety, his Meekneſs and Humility, his kind and obliging Behaviour, and great Readineſs, upon every Occaſion, to do all the good he was capable of, made him ſhine as a Light in the World.

A MINISTER that thus acquitted himſelf, one would think, ſhould have met with much Eſteem, and all imaginable good Uſage from his whole Pariſh; but the Matter was otherwiſe; he was one of thoſe excellent Perſons, whom the brighteſt Virture hath not been able to ſecure from an evil Treatment; yea, that upon account, even of what was highly valuable in them, have been contemn'd, reproach'd and injuriouſly handled. Some few, indeed, of thoſe under his Care, had a juſt Senſe of his Worth, and paid him all the Reſpect, that was due to it; but the Behaviour of the greater Number was ſuch, as could not but often much diſcompoſe and afflict him. His Care not to amuſe his Hearers, with Things which they could not underſtand, gave ſome of them Occaſion to entertain very contemptible Thoughts of his Learning, and to ſpeak of him accordingly. So that one of his Oxford Friends, as he travel'd through Childry, enquiring, for his Diverſion, of ſome People, who was their Miniſter? And how they liked him? Receiv'd from them this Anſwer: Our Parſon is one Mr. Pocock, a plain, honeſt Man; but, Maſter, ſaid they, he is no Latiner. His avoiding, as he preach'd, that boiſterous Action, and thoſe canting Expreſſions, which were then ſo very taking with many Lovers of Novelty, was the Reaſon that not a few conſider'd him as a weak Man, whoſe Diſcourſes could not edify, being dead Morality, having nothing of Power and the Spirit. But his declaring againſt Diviſions, Sedition and Rebellion, was moſt offenſive, and rais'd the greateſt Clamour againſt him. Becauſe of this, ſuch in his Pariſh, as had been ſeduc'd into the Meaſures of them, who were now endeavouring the Overthrow, both of Church and State,

State, were ready, upon every Occaſion, to beſtow on him the ill Names, then ſo much in Uſe, of, A Man addicted to Railing and Bitterneſs; a Malignant and one Popiſhly affected. But Diſeſteem and reproachful Language were not the only Grievances, which this good Man ſuffered under. That Income, which the Laws of God and Man had made his juſt Right, and which he always endeavoured to receive, with as much Peace as might be, was thought too much for him, and they ſtudied to leſſen it in all the Ways they could: Beſides, what they call'd, out-witting him in his Tithes, of the Contributions and great Taxes which were frequently exacted, a Sum much beyond the juſt Proportion was ſtill allotted to him; and when any Forces were quarter'd in that Pariſh, as conſiderable Numbers often were, he was ſure to have a double, if not a greater, Share.

THIS Uſage could not but ſeem very ſtrange to a Man, who had been treated with Reſpect and Civility, by all Sorts of Perſons whom he had hitherto converſed with: And it was impoſſible for him to reflect upon ſuch unſuitable Returns, without a great deal of Diſquiet, and very melancholy Thoughts. The barbarous People of Syria and Turky, whom he formerly complain'd of, appeared to him now of much greater Humanity, than many of thoſe, he was engaged to live with. There, his exalted Virtue had won upon Mahometans, and made even Jews and Friers revere him; but theſe Charms had, at this Time, a contrary Effect on the Pretenders to Sainſhip, and purer Ordinances, at home. And he, who, when at Aleppo, ſtill long'd to be in England, as the moſt agreeable Place in the World, now conſider'd an Abode in the Eaſt as a very deſirable Bleſſing. Yea, to ſuch a Degree of Uneaſineſs did the publick Calamities, and the particular Troubles he was every Day exercis'd with, at length carry him; that he began to form a Deſign of leaving his native Country for ever, and ſpending the Remainder of his Days, either at Aleppo or Conſtantinople: In which Places, from his former Experience, he thought he might promiſe himſelf fewer Injuries, and more Quiet and Peace. But upon further Conſideration, and a due Uſe of thoſe Succours, which both Reaſon and Religion afforded him, he fortified his Mind againſt the Force of all ſuch Trials, and learned to poſſeſs his Soul in Patience. He very well knew, that it is the Part of a good Soldier of Jeſus Chriſt, to endure Hardſhip, and that he that hath devoted himſelf to the Work of the Goſpel, muſt be ready in Afflictions and Diſtreſſes, by Honour and Diſhonour, by evil Report as well as good, to approve himſelf a Miniſter of God. He conſidered too, that his Caſe was not ſingular, but ſuch as was common, at that Time, to almoſt all others of the ſame Calling, throughout the Nation, who would not humour the People in unreaſonable Things, nor deſcend to unlawful Compliances. And he was very well ſatisfied, that all the Evil, that comes to paſs in the World, is ſtill over-rul'd by the Providence of that All-wiſe God, who, in the moral as well as the natural World, brings Light out of Darkneſs, and Order out of Confuſion, and who will make all Things work together for Good to them that love him. Upon ſuch Reflexions as theſe, therefore, he reſolved to ſtand his Ground, and to perſevere in a faithful Diſcharge of all the Duties he was called to, notwithſtanding all the Difficulties that attended it. Having thus laid aſide all Thoughts of a Remove, to eaſe himſelf of the Cares of Houſekeeping, and the Management of a Family, and to have the Comfort of an agreeable Partner, amidſt the Troubles he was expoſed to, he began to think of a Wife. And Providence directed him to the Choice of a very prudent and virtuous Gentlewoman, namely, Mary, the Daughter of Thomas Burdett, Eſquire, of Weſt-Worlham, in Hampſhire; whom he married about the Beginning of the Year 1646, and by whom God was pleas'd to bleſs him with nine Children, ſix Sons and three Daughters.

AT the ſame Time that Mr. Pocock underwent ſo many Uneaſineſſes at Childry, his Affairs were in a yet worſe Condition at Oxford: Where, tho' he attended his Lecture with as much Diligence, as the preſent State of the Univerſity would admit of, his Salary was wholly detain'd from him. For Archbiſhop Laud, after almoſt four Years Impriſonment in the Tower (notwithſtanding ſuch a Defence of himſelf againſt all the Crimes, with which he was charged, as will be a laſting Monument, both of his Innocence and great Capacity) being put to Death by an Ordinance of Parliament, they that had thus gotten his Life, were for diſpoſing of his Eſtate, which had been ſequeſtered ſome Time before; and into the Liſt of that, they took, beſides ſeveral other Lands given by him to pious, and charitable Uſes, Budd's Paſtures, in the Pariſh of Bray, which had been ſettled by him for this Arabick Lecture. The ſeizing a Revenue, which had been applied to ſo excellent a Purpoſe, was not only a manifeſt Injuſtice, but might well be underſtood to be ſuch a Contempt and Hatred of Learning, as the Authors of it, one would think, ſhould, even for their own Credit in the World, by no Means have conſented to: Or, if they had taken Poſſeſſion of that Eſtate, by Miſtake, they ſhould have been ready, on the firſt Application to them, to deliver it up again. But the Matter was otherwiſe; for notwithſtanding Mr. Pocock's Endeavours, who took Care to let them underſtand the true State of the Caſe, they would not be prevail'd on to diſcharge it. It appears, from the Copy of one of his Letters, written by him on this Occaſion, that he let them know, 'how uſeful 'that Sort of Learning is, which the Income of thoſe Lands was deſign'd to promote, both 'to Divinity and other commendable Studies; what Reputation it now had in moſt Univerſi- 'ties beyond the Seas, and what large Salaries had been appointed in ſeveral of them, for the 'Encouragement of it.' He alſo labour'd to make them ſenſible, 'that, beſides the Settlement

'of the Founder, which was made with all the Formalities the Law requir'd, he had alſo an 'equitable Right to what he claim'd. For, as his Continuance at Aleppo, which firſt recom-'mended him to the Choice of the Archbiſhop, had been a Thing of Charge and Difficulty to 'him; ſo, to qualify himſelf better for this Employment, he had been at the Hazard of a 'Voyage to Conſtantinople, the neceſſary Expences of which amounted to a Sum ſufficient, 'even for the Purchaſe of a Revenue for Life, of much greater Value.' But all theſe Repreſentations were of no Force with the People he had to deal with; and, doubtleſs, they would not have deliver'd up his Right to him, had not ſome other Method been thought of by his Friends, whereby to obtain it.

THE learned Mr. John Selden, at that Time, one of the Burgeſſes in Parliament for the Univerſity of Oxford, had long entertain'd a particular Eſteem for Mr. Pocock, and was, as appears above, much obliged to him, having frequently borrowed of him ſeveral Manuſcripts, and other Books, not to be gotten elſewhere, and alſo often receiv'd from him Satisfaction in conſiderable Difficulties, relating to Oriental Learning. Mr. John Greaves, therefore, (who had likewiſe a large Share in the Friendſhip of that great Man) being in London, made him acquainted with this Injury that was done, not only to Mr. Pocock, but to Learning itſelf, and deſir'd his Aſſiſtance in the Redreſs of it. No Body could be more ready than Mr. Selden was, to grant this Requeſt. He told him, that he had a due Senſe both of the Injuſtice and Scandal of this Proceeding, and that the Perſons concern'd in it, could have no Countenance for it from the Order of Parliament, by which they pretended to act. For the Sequeſtrations, appointed by it, could only relate to particular Perſons, as Seius and Sempronius, to uſe his own Expreſſions on that Occaſion, and not to Corporations, which was the Caſe of theſe Lands. He alſo promis'd, that he would himſelf ſearch the Rolls, where the Donation was recorded, and make the beſt Uſe of it he could, when he had found it.

WHILE this was tranſacting for Mr. Pocock in London, his Friends in Oxford were careful alſo to do him all the Service they were capable of. Dr. Langbaine, the very worthy Provoſt of Queen's-College, was at the Pains himſelf of drawing a long Inſtrument in Latin, wherein the Courſe taken by the Archbiſhop, effectually to ſettle theſe Lands, was at large, and very particularly recited, and alſo a formal Grant from that Body inſerted, of all the Profits iſſuing out of them to Mr. Pocock, during the Time that he ſhould continue to be Arabick Lecturer; and this Inſtrument, being propoſed by him and ſome others in Congregation, with unanimous Conſent had the Seal of the Univerſity affixed to it. What was thus done for him by his Friends, was abundantly ſufficient to clear his Title to the Satisfaction of all reaſonabl Men: But leſt all this ſhould not be effectual, Mr. Selden, with much Earneſtneſs, recommended the Matter to ſome of the leading Men of that Time, in whom he had a conſiderable Intereſt, and, by their Means, this Salary was at length reſtor'd to Mr. Pocock, after it had been detain'd from him about three Years. This Reſtitution was effected about the Middle of the Year 1647. And I have Reaſon to ſuppoſe, that Dr. Langbaine's good Offices, above-mentioned, (to which he was ſtrongly incited by T. Smith, a Fellow of his own College, and a Friend of Mr. Pocock's) was the Foundation of that Friendſhip, which continued between him and Mr. Pocock for the Remainder of their Lives.

THIS ſame Year, viz. An. 1647, he and his Family, at Childry, were delivered from a Ruin, that threatened them, by the Diligence and Intereſt of his excellent Friend, Mr. John Greaves. For Mr. Pocock being conſider'd as a Malignant, ſome of the Forces for the Parliament, which had now carried all before it, grievouſly oppreſs'd him by free Quarter, and other Violence; and ſuch a Treatment he was to expect, as often as any Troops ſhould come into thoſe Parts. Hereupon he complains to his Friend Mr. Greaves, by Letter, who, by the Aſſiſtance of Dr. Ent, procur'd him a Protection, under the Hand and Seal of my Lord Fairfax, dated at Windſor, Dec. 5, 1647. by which all Officers and Soldiers, are forbid to plunder his Houſe, or take away his Horſes, Sheep, or other Cattle or Goods, or to offer Violence to his Perſon, or the Perſons of any of his Family. Conſtables alſo, and Quarter-maſters, are, by the ſame Inſtrument, forbid to quarter upon him above his juſt and due Proportion. And, to crown this good Office, Mr. Greaves would be at all the Expences, that attended the Procurement of this Protection.

IT was, indeed, a ſingular good Providence for Mr. Pocock, under the Troubles and Difficulties he met with in theſe Times, that he was provided with ſo many uſeful and active Friends. For, beſides his own natural Modeſty and Meekneſs, which diſqualified him from ſtirring effectually in his own Behalf, his long Abſence from England, had made him a Stranger, even to the common Remedies againſt Oppreſſion; and his only Methods, for Redreſs, were to complain, from Time to Time, to his Friends, of his hard Uſage.

BEING delivered out of theſe Difficulties, he had but very little Time to breathe, before a freſh Occaſion was given for the Exerciſe of his own Patience, and of the Kindneſs of his Friends. For now the Viſitation of the Univerſity of Oxford was coming on, which, under the Pretence of Reformation, threatened the utmoſt Severity to all Perſons of that Body, who had manifeſted any Loyalty to the King, or Zeal for the Church. In the Articles of Oxford, indeed, when that City was delivered up by Sir Thomas Glenham to General Fairfax, expreſs Proviſion had been made, that all the Members of the Univerſity ſhould enjoy their antient

Rights and Privileges, notwithſtanding any Thing done by any of them, relating to the unhappy War between the King and the Parliament. But ſuch Agreements were very weak Bonds to reſtrain them, who having the Power entirely in their Hands, were now reſolv'd both to gratify the Ambition and the Avarice of thoſe that depended on them, and to ſatisfy their own Revenge. On the firſt Day of May, therefore, in the Year 1647, an Ordinance of Parliament was made, whereby of twenty four Perſons therein named, any five or more had Authority given them to be Viſitors of that Univerſity, for the Hearing and Determination of all Matters and Cauſes they ſhould think fit to enquire into, relating to it, or any Members of it: And alſo twenty Lords and forty nine of the Houſe of Commons, were, at the ſame Time, appointed to be a ſtanding Committee, for receiving the Reports of thoſe Viſitors, and hearing all Appeals, that ſhould be made to them.

OF the Viſitors thus nominated, ten had been formerly Members of that Univerſity, and moſt of them, ſuch as had been expell'd, or otherwiſe puniſh'd, for Miſdemeanours committed in it. The other fourteen were Lawyers, and Country Gentlemen, of known Zeal for the Cauſe they were carrying on, amongſt whom Mr. Prynne was one of the chief. There could be no Doubt at all, but that ſuch as theſe would be very forward in the Execution of this Power; as, indeed, they were. For a Citation, under the Hands of a ſufficient Number of them, dated the 15th of the ſame Month, was ſent to Oxford, commanding both the Proctors, and all Heads of Colleges and Halls, to appear before them in the Convocation-Houſe there, on the fourth Day of the next Month, between the Hours of Nine and Eleven in the Morning. But the Miſchief deſigned, at that Meeting, was delay'd for ſome Time by the dextrous Management of Dr. Samuel Fell, the Vice-chancellor. For whilſt Mr. Harrys, one of the Viſitors, was entertaining his Brethren at St. Mary's with Prayers, and a long Sermon for the Occaſion, the Hour limited in the Citation was paſs'd, and the Vice-chancellor, having gotten a Teſtimonial of the Attendance of thoſe that had been ſummon'd, atteſted on the Place, in due Form, by a publick Notary, immediately diſmiſs'd the Aſſembly. This Diſappointment put the Viſitors into ſo much Confuſion, that they attempted nothing more, till, by an additional Ordinance of Parliament, dated the 26th Day of Auguſt following, they had new Powers conferred upon them. But then they applied themſelves to the Work again, with a great deal of Diligence, and never omitted it, till they had forced out a great Number of the beſt and moſt learned Men of the Univerſity, and put themſelves, and their Friends, in their Places.

WHEN the Violence of theſe Reformers began to rage at Oxford, Mr. Pocock was on his Parſonage at Childry; and there he ſtill continued, as well by the particular Direction of his Friends, as from his own Judgment and Inclination. He had frequent Accounts ſent to him of the Troubles many worthy Men were in, and the Methods made uſe of to ruin them, and he continually expected a Share in the ſame Treatment. And tho' he was ready, when Providence ſhould call him to it, not only to throw up his Lecture, but every Thing elſe that he had, if he could not keep it with a good Conſcience; he thought himſelf, however, under no Obligation to invite and haſten the Danger, by appearing in the Univerſity.

THE Viſitors, and their Maſters of the Committee, having other Employment, no Notice was taken of him for ſeveral Months; but at length ſomething extraordinary fell out, which brought him on the Stage. Dr. Morris, the Hebrew Profeſſor at Oxford, died of a Fever, March 27, 1648. The King, who was then a Priſoner in the Iſle of Wight, having a full Knowledge of Mr. Pocock's Sufficiency, and being alſo moved thereto by the Recommendations of Dr. Sheldon and Dr. Hammond, nominated him for the Hebrew Lecture, thus vacant, and for the Canonry of Chriſt-Church annexed to it; but he was not conſtituted by Patent, the King then not having the great Seal in his Power. About this Time, likewiſe, Dr. Payne, Canon of the ſame Church, was turned out, by an Order of the Committee. And on the 7th of April enſuing, the Committee having reſolved, that the Matter of the Anſwer, put in by the Dean of Chriſt-Church, Dr. Fell, and others the Prebends, whoſe Hands were ſubſcribed to it, was an high Contempt of Authority of Parliament; and, 'That for an effectual Remedy 'thereof, the ſaid Dr. Fell, Dean of Chriſt-Church, and others the Prebends of Chriſt-Church, 'who ſubſcribed their Names to the ſaid Anſwer, be forthwith removed from their ſaid 'Places.' Then the Order immediately proceeds: 'This Committee being informed, that 'Dr. Morris, one of the ſaid Prebends, and Hebrew Lecturer of the Univerſity, is lately de-'ceaſed, whoſe Hand is ſubſcribed to the ſaid Anſwer, do order that Mr. Pocock be Hebrew 'Lecturer of the Univerſity, in the Place of the ſaid Dr. Morris, deceaſed, and ſhall receive all 'Profits and Dues belonging to the ſaid Place. And further order, that the ſaid Mr. Pocock 'be, and hereby he is, conſtituted and eſtabliſhed a Collegiate Prebend of Chriſt-Church, in 'the Place of Dr. Payne, removed from his Prebend's Place, by a former Order of this Com-'mittee. And the ſaid Mr. Pocock ſhall enjoy and have all the Power, Rights, Emolu-'ments, Rooms, and Lodgings, by any Statute, or Cuſtom, or Right, formerly belonging 'to the ſaid Dr. Payne.' It might ſeem a Matter of Difficulty, at this Diſtance of Time, to give a full Account, how Mr. Pocock, whoſe Abſence from Oxford alone preſerved him from a Summons of the Viſitors, to take the ſolemn League and Covenant, and conſequently from the Loſs of his Arabick Lecture; I ſay, how he came to meet with ſuch diſtinguiſhing Favour at that Time from them, who ſeemed to have ſo little Regard, either to Learning or Goodneſs, in others of his Principles. But it was chiefly to be imputed to the hearty Kindneſs of an eminent Member of that Committee, namely, his conſtant Friend, who had been ſo ſerviceable to him already, Mr. John Selden. For to him, Mr. Pocock wholly aſcrib'd this unexpected Succeſs, in a Letter he ſent to him ſome Time after. And, indeed, as that learned Man found out Means to preſerve ſome few of his particular Friends in Oxford, from the Dangers that then threatened them; ſo he did all that was poſſible for him, on behalf of the Univerſity in general. This, I find, was gratefully acknowledged by Dr. Langbaine, in a Letter written to him about this Time. Which, as well in Honour to the Memory of ſo great a Friend, and Patron of Mr. Pocock; as for that it gives ſo particular an Account of the ſad State of the Univerſity, and the different Opinions of ſome great Men in it, at that Juncture, I ſhall here inſert, as it was found amongſt the Papers of the Lord Chief Juſtice Hale, who was one of Mr. Selden's Executors[c].

'Moſt Honoured Sir,

'NOTWITHSTANDING thoſe common Endearments, by which you have purchas'd ſo 'great an Intereſt in this diſconſolate Univerſity, and thoſe multiplied Favours which you have 'been pleaſed to heap upon myſelf, the meaneſt of your Servants; I could have been content 'to hug myſelf in the tacit Recordation of both, had not that kind Remembrance, which 'I received from you, by Mr. Palmer, ſome few Minutes ſince, ſeconded by the preſent Op-'portunity of ſafe Conveyance, by Mr. Patrick Yonge, invited, or indeed extorted from me 'this Acknowledgment; which is no more mine, than the Voice of the Publick, ſo far as 'Diſcretion will permit us to make it publick; that however the Condition of this Place be 'now ſo deſperate, that Salus ipſa ſervare non poteſt; yet are we all abundantly ſatisfied in 'your unwearied Care and poſſionate Endeavours for our Preſervation. We know and confeſs,

'Si Pergama Dextrâ
'Defendi poterant, etiam hâc defenſa fuiſſent.

'Whether it be our Unworthineſs, as it is our Unhappineſs, to fall at laſt, others may better 'judge; but of this we are confident, that, next under God's, it muſt be imputed to your 'extraordinary Providence, that we have ſtood thus long. You have been the only Belli 'Mora, and

'Quicquid apud noſtræ ceſſatum eſt mœnia Trojæ,
'Hectoris (I cannot add Æneæque, for you had no ſecond) Manu Victoria Graium
'Hæſit.

'By your good Arts and prudent Manage, our ſix Months have been ſpun into two Years, 'and it has thus far been verified upon us by your Means, Nec capti potuere Capi. But now the 'decretory Day is come. Fuimus. That Tempeſt, which has ſo long hover'd, has now 'fallen ſo heavy upon our Heads, that all our Pilots have forſaken the Helm, and let the 'Ship drive. The Pro-Vice-chancellors, Proctors, and other Officers and Miniſters of the Uni-'verſity, have withdrawn themſelves. I might add much, but I fear this may be too much 'of this Kind, as the Senſe of the moſt and beſt in this Place; who fly ſo high upon the 'Point of Loyalty and Privilege, as if they were ambitious of ſuffering. For myſelf (and, 'tho' I have little Correſpondence with Particulars, I believe I am not ſingular) I could be 'well enough content to ſit down with a Confeſſor's Place, and not envy my Betters the Glory 'of this Martyrdom. I cannot think, that we are bound, by any Obligation of Law or Con-'ſcience, from acknowledging my Lord of Pembrook for our Chancellor. But for the new de-'ſigned Proctors and Heads of Houſes (Chriſt-Church excepted) we do not ſee, with Submiſſion 'be it ſpoken, why thoſe Colleges, to whom the Right of Election regularly belongs, may 'not challenge it by Virtue of the Articles, by which the Rights of all, and every of them, is 'promiſed to be ſav'd. And tho' we know the Practice of former Times is no Rule for the 'preſent, nor the Actions of Kings any Laws for Parliaments; yet we cannot chooſe but ob-'ſerve the Difference heretofore, when, upon Occaſion, Princes have ſometimes depos'd the 'Proctors, ſometimes preferr'd Heads of Houſes to Biſhopricks, they always left the Elec-'tion of their Succeſſors free, according to the reſpective Statutes of the Univerſity and Col-'leges, and did not otherwiſe interpoſe (though it was thought a Point of their Prerogative) 'than, at moſt, by Letters of Recommendation, which were many Times not obey'd, and 'that with Impunity. But whatſoever you pleaſe to command, we muſt obey. And it will, 'perhaps, not at all offend our moſt eager Adverſaries, if we chooſe to do it rather by Suffer-'ing, than Compliance; which is already the Reſolution of a good many, and perhaps his 'Turn is not far off, who, though he would not be over haſty to offer the Sacrifice of Fools, 'by a peremptory Oppoſition to an extraordinary and irreſiſtible Power, ſo long as nothing is 'commanded which he conceives, in its own Nature, ſimply unlawful, yet he hopes, he ſhall 'never proſtitute his Innocency, to purchaſe the ſhort Enjoyment of a ſlight Preferment, 'which he values for nothing more, than the Opportunity it affords him of Freedom in his 'Studies,

'Studies, and thereby (if you ſhall at any Time do him the Honour to command him) of 'putting himſelf in a Capacity to be reputed,

Sir, Your moſt humble, and moſt bounden Servant,

Queen's-College, Oxon,
March 20, 1647-8. G. LANGBAINE.

As this Letter gave ſuch a melancholy Repreſentation of the preſent Condition of Affairs in Oxford; ſo the Tranſactions that ſoon followed, in that Place, would require even more tragical Expreſſions, duly to ſet them forth. For the Viſitors firſt, and then the Chancellor himſelf, (who came thither for that Purpoſe) with a Guard of Muſketeers, went from College to College, and breaking open the Doors of ſeveral Lodgings, diſpoſſeſs'd the rightful Owners with the utmoſt Violence.

AND now to return to Mr. Pocock: The Committee iſſued an Order to the Viſitors, June the 6th following, to put him in Poſſeſſion of Dr. Payne's Lodgings at Chriſt-Church; which was done accordingly. How he reliſhed the Manner of his Coming into this Preferment, we cannot ſay with Certainty. But from the Letters of his Friends, at that Time, it ſhould ſeem as if he had ſome Scruple on that Head. Mr. John Greaves, in one to him, dated the very Day he was voted in by the Committee, after acquainting him with his Succeſs, adds, 'From whence no Envy can fall upon you here, (at Oxford) ſeeing you diſplace no Man, and 'it is undertaken that he ſhall be ſatisfied, who is moſt concerned, without any further Trou-'ble of yours. So that I ſee, by a wary Carriage, that all Sides may be pleaſed.' Dr. Langbaine, in a Letter, May 3, 1648, has the following Expreſſions: 'I perceive——that you are 'not fully informed concerning your Hebrew Profeſſor's Place; and, therefore, I take leave 'to tell you, that however the reſt of the new Prebends (for ought I yet hear) have not, nor 'deſign to have, any other Security for Settlement, than the Votes of the Committee, yet 'Mr. Selden intends (and I preſume by this Time it is done) to procure an Ordinance for yours. '——This Ordinance, I think, will be ſufficient, without a Patent under the broad Seal, be-'ing, for preſent, of equal Force, of leſs Charge, and leſs obnoxious to Exception from his 'Majeſty; of whoſe Confirmation, if it ſhall pleaſe God to reſtore him to his Power and 'Rights, I think you will have no Cauſe to make a Queſtion.' The Ordinance here ſpoken of by Dr. Langbaine, as certain, to what Cauſe ſoever the Diſappointment was owing, never was obtained; and, I have undoubted Authority for ſaying, that Mr. Pocock held his Preferment at Chriſt-Church by no other Title, from the ruling Powers of that Time, ſave from a Vote of the Committee.

BUT tho' theſe Arguments and Suggeſtions of his Friends, prevail'd on him to accept the Hebrew Profeſſorſhip; yet he was much diſſatisfied, that he had not the Canonry along with it, which King Charles had annexed thereto, and which his Predeceſſor, Dr. Morris, enjoyed in that Manner. It is highly probable, the Committee were ignorant of any ſuch Annexation, and voted Mr. Pocock into Dr. Payne's Prebend, for no other Reaſon, but becauſe it had been longeſt vacant; the Doctor having been turned out by a Vote, which ſome Time preceded that for removing Dean Fell, and the reſt that ſubſcribed to the Anſwer put in by him; of which Number Dr. Morris, the Hebrew Profeſſor, was one. However, finding that he was voted not only into the Place, but alſo into the Lodgings of Dr. Payne, before the Committee's Order to the Viſitors for putting him in Poſſeſſion of thoſe Lodgings was iſſued, he complained to his Friends, above, of the Injury thereby done to him, and the Profeſſorſhip. For, in a Letter from Mr. Greaves of the 11th of May, 1648, I find theſe Words: 'As concerning 'your Lodgings, and the Injury offered to you by the Viſitors, I mentioned it to the Primate 'and Mr. Patrick Yonge. Both of them will acquaint Mr. Selden with it.' But in that, and the two following Months, nothing more was done in this Buſineſs, thro' the Jealouſies of thoſe Times. But in Auguſt, Mr. Selden aſſured Dr. Langbaine, that he could find nothing to that Affair in the Rolls, and that ſome, who were moſt active in the then Changes, did expreſly deny any ſuch Annexation. However, he promiſed his beſt Aſſiſtance, but could not aſſure him of Succeſs. About the ſame Time Mr. Greaves, often waiting on Mr. Rous, Secretary to the Committee, prevailed with him, as he tells Mr. Pocock, in a Letter of Auguſt 2, 'That nothing ſhould be done to his Prejudice for the future; but [with Relation to what 'was paſt] all the Anſwer he could get was, that the Committee muſt obſerve their own Orders.' All this did not diſcourage Mr. Pocock, and his Friends, from proſecuting a Reparation of the Injury done to the Hebrew Profeſſorſhip, by diſuniting it from its proper Canonry. For, upon an Intimation from Mr. Greaves, that Mr. Selden wanted to ſee a Copy of the Grant of the Canonry to the Hebrew Profeſſorſhip, and eſpecially whether that individual Place be annexed to it; adding, if ſo, he (Mr. Selden) doubts not but Things may be ordered yet, if there be ſo much as the Name of Juſtice left; I ſay, upon this Intimation Dr. Langbaine, in a Letter of Nov. 30, this ſame Year, mentions, that the Charter concerning his Prebend, was ſent up by the Bedel to Mr. Selden. But all this availed nothing. And, therefore, after a Year more ſpent in vain Endeavours to get the Annexation avowed, and the proper Lodgings of the annexed Canonry reſtored to himſelf, as Hebrew Profeſſor, he, upon Friday, the laſt Day of Auguſt, 1649, read and entered a Proteſtation for ſaving the Rights of his Profeſſor-

ſhip, before Dr. Reynolds, Dean of Chriſt-Church, and then Vice-chancellor of the Univerſity, as alſo in Preſence of Ralph Button, Prebendary of that Church, and Ralph Auſten, and laſtly of John French, Notary Publick and Regiſter of the Univerſity: In which he ſet forth, 'That the late King, in the 6th Year of his Reign, had given and granted to John Morris, 'B. D. and then Hebrew Profeſſor, a Canonry or Prebend in the Cathedral of Chriſt-Church, 'to be held by him as long as he ſhould continue Hebrew Profeſſor, and Lecturer of the Uni-'verſity of Oxford, and no longer; with all the Houſes, Manſions, Profits, &c. any Way 'belonging, or hereafter to belong, to the ſaid Canonry or Prebend. And by the ſaid Letters 'Patents, he further granted to the Vice-chancellor, Maſters, and Scholars of the Univerſity 'of Oxford, and their Succeſſors, that, for the future, and in Perpetuity, that whenever, by 'the Death, Reſignation, Deprivation, &c. of the ſaid John Morris, the ſaid Prebend ſhould 'any Way become void, that then, and ſo from Time to Time, the ſaid Canonry, with its 'aforeſaid Appurtenances, ſhould come to every Hebrew Profeſſor, and Lecturer for the 'Time being, and ſhould not, in the Interim, be granted to any other. And whereas, upon 'the natural Death of the ſaid John Morris, the Canonry aforeſaid was become void, he, 'Edward Pocock, by the Appointment and Decree of the honourable Committee, for regu-'lating the Univerſity of Oxford, was declar'd publick Profeſſor, and Lecturer of He-'brew, in the ſaid Univerſity of Oxford, in the Room of the ſaid John Morris. That 'whereas, by a very late Act, for abrogating Cathedral Churches, it was, amongſt other 'Things, provided, that the ſaid Act, nor any Thing in it contained, ſhould in any 'wiſe extend to the Foundation of Chriſt-Church in Oxford, or to the Profits or Emo-'luments of any publick Profeſſor, or Lecturer, in either Univerſity; he, the ſaid Ed-'ward Pocock, Hebrew Profeſſor, and Lecturer in the ſaid Univerſity of Oxford, did therefore '(with due Reverence) openly and in Writing proteſt, that by his Acceptance of any other 'Houſes and Manſions, at Chriſt-Church, aforeſaid, he did not intend any Prejudice ſhould 'be done to his Right, Title, or Intereſt, or to that of his Succeſſors, the Hebrew Profeſſors 'at Oxford, or of the Chancellor, Maſters, and Scholars of the ſaid Univerſity, to the 'Houſes and Manſions in Chriſt-Church, lately in Poſſeſſion of John Morris, Hebrew Pro-'feſſor, or to any other Profits, &c. So that (notwithſtanding any Acceptance of mine for 'the Time) my Right, and that of my Succeſſors, and that of the Chancellor, Maſters, and 'Scholars of the ſaid Univerſity of Oxford, and their Succeſſors (if any Right there be) to all 'and ſingular of theſe, may be preſerved ſafe and unhurt, and remain ſo at preſent, and to all 'future Times; according to the Force, Form, and Effect of the Letters Patents, Reſolu-'tion and Act, aforeſaid.'

I THOUGHT it proper to inſert the Subſtance of this Proteſtation, that the World may ſee how clear, and how important a Right Mr. Pocock, and his Friends, had been thus long conteſting for, and the ſhameful Injuſtice of thoſe he had to deal withal. The Right in Queſtion appears to have been founded on a Grant of the King's, that was within his unqueſtionable Prerogative, and further guarded by a Clauſe in an Act, which had very lately paſſed both Houſes. So that by baffling ſo ſtrong a Claim, the Committee demonſtrated, that whilſt they thought the King ſubject to his own Laws, they would always be at Liberty to contradict, not only his Appointments, but their own unrepeal'd Ordinances. And doubtleſs Mr. Pocock had Reaſon to ſtir in this Affair, not ſo much on Account of the different Goodneſs of the Lodgings, belonging to the one or the other Canonry, as left his utter Acquieſcence, in accepting a Canonry, which had never been annexed to the Hebrew Profeſſorſhip, ſhould weaken his and his Succeſſors Title to that which had. But ſtill the Honeſty and Spirit of the good Man, on this Occaſion, appears to greater Advantage, when one conſiders, that, thro' the whole Courſe of this Affair, he, in other Reſpects, lay perpetually at the Mercy of thoſe whom he was teazing to do him Juſtice, and againſt whoſe arbitrary Proceedings, the above Proteſtation was formed. For from his firſt being voted into the Profeſſorſhip and Canonry, by the Committee, he plainly foreſaw, that as Things then went, he was not long to expect any Advantage from that Favour, without ſuch Compliances as he could, by no Means, yield to. That which he had, therefore, chiefly to depend on, was Abſence from Oxford till better Times, for which it pleas'd God he had a while too juſt an Excuſe, being viſited with a great Sickneſs, which kept him a long Time very weak. When, therefore, upon the Coming of the Chancellor, he received a Meſſage from one of the Viſitors, who pretended to be very much his Friend, inviting him to appear, as ſoon as he could, upon his Canonry, at Chriſt-Church, he was ſo far from any Thought of going thither, that he would not ſo much as write an Anſwer; and the Care of thoſe in Oxford, who wiſhed his Welfare, made this Neglect paſs indifferently well, on the Score of his Indiſpoſition.

BUT as the Excuſe of Sickneſs could not continne always, ſo in no long Time, his Preſence in Oxford was often requir'd in another Manner: For the next Month it was decreed by the Viſitors, That all Lecturers and Profeſſors ſhould come and perform their ſeveral Duties in the Univerſity, which, they ſaid, had been neglected for three Terms now laſt paſs'd. A little after they made another Order, That whoſoever claim'd any Place, either in the Univerſity or any College, ſhould, within fifteen Days, come and diſcharge their Duties there, and alſo to ſubmit themſelves to the Viſitation. And, in a ſhort Time, they decreed again, that, whoſoever came to Oxford, upon their being ſummon'd thither, and yet did not appear before the Viſitors, ſhould be conſidered as guilty of Contempt. It is manifeſt, that ſuch Orders as theſe, were directly leveled at Mr. Pocock, and ſome others in the like Circumſtances. And what Arts he could find out to avoid the Force of them I cannot tell. And yet a very worthy Perſon[d], who was at the Pains to ſearch the Viſitation-Book, in the publick Library, at Oxford, aſſured me, that he could meet with no Account there of any Appearance before the Viſitors, made at any Time by Mr. Pocock. The greateſt Light I have been able to get into this Matter, has been from ſome Letters ſent to him, during theſe Difficulties, by Mr. John Greaves; whoſe Advice to him, upon theſe Occaſions, was, ſo to order his Affairs in a prudential and honeſt Way, as neither to provoke the Viſitors, nor to give them any Advantage, by appearing before them. And this too he tells him, in one of his Letters, was not only his own Senſe, but likewiſe that of Mr. Selden, whom he had conſulted on his Behalf, namely, that he ought to make it his utmoſt Endeavour, to keep out of the Reach of their Quarter-Staff, to uſe Mr. Selden's own Expreſſion, which would, he ſaid, ſtrike down all before it; and againſt which, there was no Ward, but ſuffering or complying. A hard Choice, adds Mr. Greaves, either to be martyred, or to approve of their wicked and ſacrilegious Courſes; but ſurely, continues he, the former is to be taken, which, after ſome Patience, will be crowned with a juſt Reward. However, to put off, as long as might be, ſo great a Hardſhip, he directs him, not to go to Oxford at all, if it were poſſible to avoid it. But if his Affairs ſhould abſolutely require him to go thither, as he thought they would, to make but very little Stay, and when oblig'd to lie there a Night, not to let his Lodging be known, for fear he ſhould receive a Summons to appear. Moreover, he puts him in Mind of conſulting with his good Friends, Dr. Sheldon and Dr. Hammond, what he had beſt do, who would both give him faithful Advice. And in another Letter, after theſe two excellent Men were driven from Oxford, he recommends to him the Counſel and Direction of Dr. Langbaine, of whoſe Friendſhip, as well as Skill in ſuch Affairs, he had the greateſt Aſſurance.

But notwithſtanding all the Expedients, which either his Friends could recommend to him, or he could think of, it was not poſſible for him to keep himſelf wholly out of Danger. For I find Mr. Greaves at one Time giving him Notice, that his Name had been return'd to the Committee, among thoſe, that contemn'd their Authority. Moreover he told him, in another Letter, that upon diſcourſing with Mr. Selden, he found, indeed, the ſame Conſtancy of Affection in him, but withal great complaining of ſuch Injuſtice and Shuffling of Buſineſſes, as made him weary of ſtriving againſt the Stream, tho' he deſpaired not totally of doing him good.

And, upon this Occaſion, I cannot but again do what Juſtice I am able, to the Memory of this Mr. John Greaves, by ſaying ſomething further of that extraordinary Degree of Friendſhip, he manifeſted, at this Time, to Mr. Pocock. For, beſides what has been already mentioned, in ſeveral of his Letters, which he wrote to him about theſe Matters, he not only aſſur'd him of his utmoſt Endeavours to ſerve him, but alſo told him, that he was much more concern'd for his Preſervation than his own, and ſhould be better pleas'd if he could obtain it. And the Event was, in ſome Sort, according to his Deſire. For whereas Mr. Greaves had been an Inſtrument of keeping Mr. Pocock's Affairs in ſome tolerable Condition in Oxford, he himſelf was baniſhed thence, by a Decree of the Viſitors, Nov. 9, 1648, and ſo loſt both his Fellowſhip at Merton-College, and his Place as Aſtronomy Profeſſor in that Univerſity. Not that he ſeems to have been actually deprived of the latter, till near a Year after. For I find him, in a Letter of the 23d of Auguſt, 1649, complaining to Mr. Pocock, as of a freſh Grievance, that Mr. Rous told him the Committee had voted him out of his Lecture, for not appearing, and Contempt. It was then ſo lately tranſacted, that Mr. Greaves had not, as yet, ſeen the Order, but was to ſee it the Day after. Indeed, to add ſome-what more of this worthy Perſon, out of theſe Letters to Mr. Pocock, ſince the Face of Things had been ſo much chang'd in Oxford, he ſeem'd to have but little Inclination to ſpend any of his Time in it for the future. For, ſome Months before this Sentence againſt him, giving Mr. Pocock an Account of his Deſign to go thither from London, where he had now been for a good While, he told him, that, 'He was reſolv'd to do nothing, but what ſtood with a good Conſcience. 'Yet, adds he, Tully ſomewhere, (as I remember) miſlikes Os & Frontem novæ Academiæ. 'And I am certain I ſhall do the ſame.' In another, of May 17, of the ſame Year, he tells Mr. Pocock, 'He was then going into Kent, to his good Friend, Mr. Marſham, not far from 'Rocheſter. Who, adds he, hath been very importunate, admitting of no Excuſe, that 'I muſt make his Houſe and Library, who hath a fair one, mine own. It will be this Fort-'night e'er I return, and it may be ſhall afterwards live with him, if I ſee, at my coming to 'Oxford, the ſame Confuſion which I hear, and which is likely, in Probability, to continue.' Several Months after, going a ſecond Time to this Mr. Marſham's (afterward Sir John Marſham, a very learned Gentleman, who had dedicated a Latin Treatiſe of Chronology to him, and now again invited him to make uſe of his Houſe and Library) he ſo far deſpair'd of any future Encouragement to Learning and Ingenuity in Oxford, that he order'd Mr. Pocock to ſend up his Will, with the Keeping of which he had intruſted him, that he might blot out thence the Gift of his Mathematical Inſtruments to that Univerſity, which had coſt him, he ſaid, more than a Hundred Pounds. And a Conveniency not falling out preſently for tranſmitting it, he was ſo earneſt upon the Matter, that, in another Letter ſoon after, he deſired Mr. Pocock, to open his Will, and ſtrike out that Part of it. But ſeveral Years after his Death, when the Univerſity, on the Return of King Charles II. was delivered from her Captivity, and became again what ſhe was before; his Brother, Mr. Nicholas Greaves, afterwards Dean of Dromore in Ireland, and another Brother, Mr. Thomas Greaves, formerly mentioned, diſpos'd [e] of theſe Inſtruments, according to the firſt Deſign of their dead Brother; and they are now in the Muſeum Savilianum [f], at Oxford.

Mr. Pocock found Means of his Friends to paſs thro' the Dangers already mentioned, without being oppreſſed by them. However, a greater Difficulty began to appear, Nov. 28, 1648. For then, among ſome other Orders obtain'd by the Viſitors, from the Committee of Parliament, one was, that they ſhould ſtrictly require of all Members of the Univerſity, the taking the ſolemn League and Covenant, and the Negative Oath. In their firſt Commiſſion, indeed, they had been directed to enquire after all Perſons who had refus'd, or neglected the Taking thoſe Oaths; but the Univerſity thereupon immedietely, with a Courage truly Chriſtian, publiſhed their unanſwerable Reaſons againſt the Lawfulneſs of doing it, which were ſolemnly voted in Convocation. And, I do not find, that it had been requir'd of any of thoſe turn'd out before November, 1648. They being commonly diſmiſs'd upon other Pretences. But now theſe Reformers were reſolv'd upon a general Impoſition of thoſe Oaths in Oxford, which they well knew would effectually purge out all the Remains of what they call'd Malignancy [g]. This Matter gave him freſh Diſquiet, and ſet his Friends again upon ſeeking out Means to preſerve him. But the great Diſorder the Nation was in about that Time, ſoon took off the Minds of the Viſitors, from going on with that Deſign, and opened a new Scene of Affairs, in which, at length, he was to fall. For about this Time, the Officers of the Army took Matters out of the Hands of the Parliament; and, to all their former Oppreſſions and Rapine, added the Murder of the King. An Act, conſidered in all its Circumſtances, ſo prodigiouſly wicked and barbarous, that no Age or Country, ſince the Creation, that we know of, had ever afforded a Precedent for it. Hear the honeſt, pious, and affecting Senſe of the ſo oft mention'd and excellent Mr. John Greaves, on that ſad Occaſion, in a Letter to Mr. Pocock.

'O! My good Friend, my good Friend! Never was there Sorrow like our Sorrow! 'What a perpetual Infamy will ſtick on our Religion and Nation! And, if God be 'not more merciful than Men, what a Deluge of Miſeries will flow in upon us? Ex-'cuſe me now, if I am not able to write to you, and to anſwer your Queries.——— 'O Lord God, if it be thy bleſſed Will, have Mercy upon us, not according to our 'Merits, but thy Mercies, and remove this great Sin, and thy Judgments, from the 'Nation.'

Your moſt affectionate and afflicted Friend,
J. Greaves.

The Original Letter ſtill teſtifies the ſorrowful Diſpoſition of the Writer, and the many Blots, eſpecially in the latter Part of it, evidence that he wrote on Paper, for the moſt Part bathed in Tears.

Not content with this tranſcendent Villany, they alſo aboliſhed the Upper, or Houſe of Lords. After which, they and their Inſtruments, at Weſtminſter, paſs'd what they call'd an Act for ſubſcribing an Engagement, whereby every Man ſhould promiſe to be true and faithful to the Government then eſtabliſhed, without a King, and Houſe of Lords. This new Teſt was firſt impoſed at Chriſt-Church, Nov. 30, 1649. Soon after which, Endeavours were uſed in Oxford, to prevent the Ruin of many honeſt and uſeful Men, who, it was well known, would never ſubſcribe to it. To which Purpoſe, Dr. Langbaine, in a Letter to Mr. Pocock, of Dec. 15, in the ſame Year, informs him, 'That the Day before, among other Matters, 'a Petition was agreed on, and ſent in the Name of the Univerſity, to the Committee for Re-'gulation, &c. promiſing that they will live peaceably under the preſent Government, and 'ſubmit to all lawful Commands, and deſiring that this may be accepted inſtead of Subſcrip-'tion to the Engagement. This Day, adds he, Dr. Stanton, and Proctor Maudit, are gone 'up with it, and (if they come ſoon enough) it is to be preſented to Morrow.' Upon this, he conſulted his faithful Friend Mr. Greaves, who, in his Anſwer, of the 8th of the following [e] Vita Joannis Gravii, p. 43. [f] Vide Catalog. Manuſcriptor. Angl. pt. I. p. 302. [g] Herein Mr. Smith follows Anth. Wood's Hiſt. and Antiqu. of Univ. of Oxf. l. I. p. 413. But Dr. Tim. Halton, in Anſwer to an Inquiry upon this Subject, ſeems, in Part, to contradict this Account. He writes thus: 'The Viſitors of the Uni-'verſity of Oxon, apointed by Parliament, never had the Opportunity of preſſing the Covenant upon any Members 'of the ſaid Univerſity, nor was any one removed, or expelled for not taking of it. In their Commiſſion, An. '1647, I think the Clauſe of tendering the Covenant to all Perſons was inſerted. But that Commiſſion was va-'cated. And in the next Commiſſion granted, An. 1648, the Clauſe was omitted by the Intereſt of Mr. Selden.' Perhaps the Truth of the Caſe is this: By Mr. Wood's Account, (ubi ſupra) the ſecond Commiſſion was clandeſtinely obtained, only ſix or ſeven of the Committee being preſent. Probably, therefore, Mr. Selden, one of the abſent Members, upon hearing what had been done, might procure either a Revocation of the ſecond Commiſſion, or an Order that the Clauſe in it, which related to the ſolemn League, ſhould not be put in Execution.

ing February, delivers himſelf thus: ‘ I wiſh I were able to direct you. If only Quietneſs be ‘ required by the Subſcription, conſidering your Profeſſion, I know not what can be objected ‘ againſt it.’ Mr. Pocock then intended a ſpeedy Journey to London, to which his Friend, in the ſame Letter, anſwers, ‘ That he feared it would caſt him beyond the 20th of that ‘ Month, and that then what may be the Danger, God only knows.’ The 20th Day of February, 1649, was the Term appointed, by an Act, which paſſed the 2d of January preceding, at or before which, whoſoever did not ſubſcribe the Engagement, was to be returned to the Committee, in order to their being removed from their Places in the Univerſity. By another Act, which paſſed February 23, 1649, the Time for taking the Engagement, was prolonged a Month, viz. to the 20th of March following, and the Return to be made thereof, April 10. And as the Expedient, offered, as above, by the Univerſity, inſtead of ſubſcribing the Engagement, was rejected by the Committee; ſo it is probable, that on, or before the lateſt Time prefix'd, Mr. Pocock either appeared, and abſolutely refuſed to ſubſcribe, or elſe, that he lapſed the Time in Abſence, and was returned accordingly. From the Reſolution, which paſſed againſt him in the Committee, the 24th of October following, it ſhould ſeem probable, that the latter was really the Caſe. For the Words of the Reſolution are, not, that he refuſed to take and ſubſcribe, but, that he hath not taken and ſubſcribed the Engagement preſcribed by the Act. This is certain, that on the 20th of February, above mentioned, Mr. Pocock was gone for London, and ſhortly expected to return, as appears from a Letter of that very Date to Mrs. Pocock, from Mr. Sparkes of Corpus-Chriſti, in which he ſays, ‘ There had been ‘ a Conference between ſome Parliament Men and divers Miniſters in London, of which the ‘ Concluſion was, that they were to expect no Favour, unleſs they did ſubſcribe.’ But notwithſtanding this, Dr. Langbaine, and Mr. Greaves, uſed all their Endeavours to ſave Mr. Pocock, and others of the Univerſity, from the Ruin, that threatened them, for not having ſubſcribed the Engagement. The former writes thus to him, April 5, 1650, ‘ I have made as many ‘ Friends for you as for any Man; the General doth enquire after you, of every one that ‘ comes from Oxford, of your Welfare. We have ſtudied a [h] pretty Diverſion for a Month; ‘ we ſhall hereby gain this half Year's Rent. We have ſent an Expreſs to the Lord Lieutenant ‘ of Ireland, who is coming over, to deſire him to intercede for the Univerſity.’ I cannot find, that any Thing was effected by this laſt Expedient, nor that any Thing more was done in the Affair, till the 21ſt of June following, when an Order was paſſed in the Houſe, ‘ That the ‘ Committee for regulating the Univerſities, ſhould examine what Officers, Maſters, Fellows, &c. did neglect, or refuſe to take the Engagement, purſuant to the late Act for that ‘ Purpoſe; and ſhould have Power to diſplace them, and place other able and fit Perſons in ‘ their Room.’ It is probable, that ſome ſtill ſeverer Reſolution, concerning the Univerſity, was at this Time expected. For, in Anſwer to a Letter of Mr. Pocock's, in which he deſired Information about the Truth of ſuch a Report, Mr. Selden writes to him, Aug. 26, ‘ That he ‘ was afraid ſome ſuch Thing would paſs concerning the Univerſity; and he doubted it would ‘ not be poſſible to exempt any Man from it.’ He adds, ‘ But if I can, in that or any Thing ‘ elſe, do what may be advantageous to you, I ſhall and will uſe my utmoſt Endeavours.’ Sept. 6, of the ſame Year, Mr. Greaves writes thus: ‘ I have often conferr'd with our noble ‘ Friend (who ſhewed me your Letter, and much pitied your Caſe) we both could think ‘ of no better Courſe, than to put off your Buſineſs, and to gain Time. Many Things in ‘ the mean While may happen. It is believ'd (continues he) which you may keep to yourſelf, ‘ that Engagers, of what Quality ſoever, will be removed out of the Univerſities. I would ‘ therefore adviſe you, not to quit your Poſſeſſion of your Living. For the Committee here ‘ cannot eject you thence.’ His Friends laboured, to the laſt, for his Preſervation. Dr. Langbaine put Mr. Selden in Mind of the irreparable Loſs the Univerſity would ſuſtain in the Removal of Mr. Pocock. And Mr. Selden himſelf, in a kind Letter he wrote to him, had aſſured him of his utmoſt Affection and Service, telling him, ‘ That theſe were no more than what ‘ his excellent Merit, and the many Advantages he had receiv'd from him, highly deſerv'd.’ But all their Endeavours could defer the fatal Vote of the Committee againſt Mr. Pocock no longer than the 24th of October; at which Time, the two following Reſolutions paſſed.

1. ‘ THAT it does appear to this Committee, that Edward Pocock, Collegiate Prebend of ‘ Chriſt-Church, hath not taken and ſubſcribed the Engagement preſcribed by the Act.

2. ‘ THAT the Committee will proceed on this Day Fortnight to nominate another, to ſupply the Place of Mr. Edward Pocock, Collegiate Prebend of Chriſt-Church.’

ACCORDINGLY, the 7th of the following Month, the Committee reſolved,

‘ THAT Mr. Peter French be Collegiate Prebend of Chriſt-Church, in the Place of ‘ Mr. Pocock.’

AND acccordingly a ſpecial Order of the ſaid Committee, for placing the ſaid Peter French in the Place of the ſaid Mr. Pocock, iſſued, reciting, ‘ That the Place of the ſaid Mr. Pocock, be‘ came void, for not taking and ſubſcribing the Engagement.’

CONSIDERING the Perſon put into Mr. Pocock's Canonry, it was no Wonder, that all the Intereſt of his Friends to keep him in, proved without Effect. For this Mr. French had married a Siſter of Oliver Cromwell, and therefore a Vacancy muſt be made to provide for him.

[h] This was the Prolongation of the Term for taking the Engagement.

His refuſing the Engagement, which thus coſt him his Prebend, did not preſently affect his other Preferments, in Oxford. But in no long Time (probably about the Beginning of December) the Committee reſolving, that all Non-Engagers ſhould be turned out of the Univerſity, he was alſo to quit both his Lectures. This was a Thing he had Reaſon to expect as unavoidable. And that he looked for no other Treatment, appears from a Letter of his, dated, Nov. 30, to George Hornius, a learned Profeſſor of Hiſtory in the Univerſity of Gueldres. In which we ſee him declare his preſent Condition, and his Apprehenſions for the future, together with the honeſt and prudent Maxims, by which he had hitherto conducted himſelf, and conformably to which, he religiouſly purpoſed to behave in all Times to come. 'My Affairs, ſays he, are reduced to ſuch a Criſis, that, unleſs I meddle in Things, wherein 'I am reſolved never to intermeddle [meaning the Engagement] I ſhall be turned out of all 'Profeſſorſhips in the Univerſity, or rather, am already [in Effect] turned out. I have 'learnt, and made it the unalterable Principle of my Soul, to keep Peace, as far as in me lies, 'with all Men; to pay due Reverence and Obedience to the higher Powers, and to avoid all 'Things, that are foreign to my Profeſſion or Studies; but to do any Thing, that may ever 'ſo little moleſt the Quiet of my Conſcience, would be more grievous, than the Loſs not 'only of my Fortunes, but even of my Life. But pleaſe, Sir, to be aſſured, that I never 'followed theſe Studies with mercenary Views; and, therefore, when it ſhall pleaſe God (as 'I truſt in his endleſs Bounty that it will) to vouchſafe me a ſafe and obſcure Retirement, I 'will, with greater Alacrity than ever, apply myſelf to theſe Studies, and promote them with 'my beſt Endeavours.' Who can read theſe golden Lines, without ſecretly wiſhing, that every Votary to Religion and Learning, was endowed with a good Portion of that Spirit, which animated this excellent Man? As inattentive as the preſent Age is to Principles, and a Zeal for Literature, a few ſuch Examples would revive the Credit of both, by making them no longer conſidered as the Scaffolding of Ambition, but as the Dictates of a diſintereſted Love of Truth, and of Mankind.

In a little Time after this, the expected Blow was ſtruck. And a particular Vote paſſed, as it ſhould ſeem, to deprive Mr. Pocock of both his Lectures, or however to turn him out of the Univerſity; which in Effect was the ſame Thing. When this Vote paſſed we cannot preciſely ſay. But it muſt have been ſome Time in December, 1650, and probably, about the Middle of that Month. The News of this coming to Oxford, many there were ſo ſenſible of the Damage the Univerſity would undergo, by the turning out a Perſon, whoſe Learning was ſo very uſeful and ornamental to it, that, without his Requeſt or Knowledge, they drew up a Petition to the Committee for his Continuance; in the Form following.

TO the Right Honourable the Committee of Parliament for regulating the Univerſities.

THE Humble Petition of ſeveral, the Governors of Houſes, Publick Officers, Maſters of Arts, and other Graduates, and Students of the Univerſity of Oxford,

Sheweth,

That your Petitioners conceiving Mr. Edward Pocock (late Prebend of Chriſt-Church) to be a Man of a very ingenuous and peaceable Converſation, excellently learned in the Oriental Languages; and conſidering, that there is no Power or Truſt of Government going along with the Hebrew and Arabick Lectures, in this Univerſity; That the Stipend of both is but a very ſmall Maintenance, and (ſhould they be put into ſeveral Hands) no way competent for a learned Man; That he is able (above any we have heard of) to diſcharge them both, as having travelled abroad, and been trained up, for many Years, in the midſt of thoſe Tongues and Nations; That he hath been very uſeful here, and a great Ornament to this Univerſity, where we underſtand he deſires ſtill, in all peaceable Manner, to continue to ſerve this State, and his own Country, in this Employment:

We therefore humbly pray, that out of that Zeal you bear to the Advancement of Learning (this Part eſpecially, ſo uſeful in itſelf, and ſo generally this Day promoted in theſe Weſtern Nations) and as an Act of your Favour and Clemency, you will be pleaſed to ſuſpend the Execution of the late Vote, as to the Arabick Lecture, at leaſt, till ſuch Time as you ſhall be provided of ſome other Perſon, who in Regard of his Abilities, ſhall be thought fit to ſucceed in that Place with Satisfaction to the Univerſity.

And your Petitioners ſhall ever pray.

Beſides theſe, were ſubſcribed the Names of thirty eight Maſters of Arts, and Bachelors of Law. The Reader will obſerve, that among the principal Subſcribers, there were but two of the old Stamp, viz. Dr. Hood, Rector of Lincoln College, and Dr. Langbaine of Queen's; the reſt being, I think, except the two Proctors, Intruders into the Places of ejected Loyaliſts. Nor was it to be wondered at, that ſo many new Men ſhould join in this Petition; conſidering how great a Reproach it would be upon their Friends, the Regulators, and, in ſome Sort, upon themſelves, to remove a Man of ſuch Eminence for Learning and Piety from ſuch Places, as no Body was found ſufficiently qualified to ſupply. Indeed, ſome Endeavours had been made uſe of to prevent this Reproach, by procuring a proper Succeſſor to Mr. Pocock; but they prov'd ineffectual. It appears from a Letter, written about this Time, by one of his Oxford Friends, that Manaſſeh Ben Iſrael had been deſired to ſend over a learned Jew of his Acquaintance, in Holland; but that Jew, being lately turn'd Chriſtian, was more inclin'd to accept of an Offer he had from ſome Proteſtants in France, and Manaſſeh, being offended at his Converſion, would not concern himſelf any farther with him. Chriſtianus Ravius alſo, who came into England about two Years before, in hopes that the Godly Parliament, as he call'd it, in a Letter to Mr. Pocock, would do great Things for him, was long encouraged, by the Committee, to expect their Favour. And, indeed, as Mr. Greaves gave Account of the Matter, he often ſeem'd not unwilling to accept the Preferments of one, that, as has been obſerved already, was formerly very kind and helpful to him. But the Repreſentations that were made to Ravius, by ſeveral of Mr. Pocock's Friends in London, particularly by Mr. Selden, in whom Ravius placed great Confidence, and by Archbiſhop Uſher (who had given this Man a Salary [1] of twenty four Pounds a Year, for the Encouragement of his Studies, while he was in the Eaſt) with-held him, I believe, from being guilty of a Thing ſo infamous and ungrateful. Poſſibly alſo the Committee itſelf might have ſeen ſo much into Ravius's Indiſcretions, as to think he would, notwithſtanding his Knowledge of the Languages, do no Credit, in the Main, to their Nomination. For, as he ſet out at firſt for the Eaſt, without the Caution which common Prudence would have ſuggeſted, ſo he ſeems all along to have acted after a weak and ridiculous Manner. Mr. John Greaves, in a Letter to Mr. Pocock, about the Year 1645 or 1646, diſcovers the Notion they both had of him, and ſupplies us with a pleaſant Inſtance of his injudicious and trifling Conduct. 'I ſend you, ſays he, theſe Papers (which I have lately receiv'd from Mr. Ravius) for your 'Peruſal; I have not been ſo merry ſince theſe ſad Diſtractions, as upon reading of theſe; and 'how much Mirth, think you, ſhall I have, when he ſhall bleſs the World with the reſt, as 'he promiſes? If I have laught (yet with ſome kind of Pity of the Man) at his Perſian, 'how much more will you ſmile at his Perſian and Arabick? A little before, I receiv'd a Let-'ter from him, by the Hands of an honourable Friend of yours, in which he writ, that he 'had dedicated a Book to me; the firſt Noiſe of it almoſt put me into a cold Sweat, but after 'that I found it was dedicated to no leſs han ſix Score, beſides myſelf, and that you and 'your Friend were in the Number, I recovered myſelf, and grew warm again. He is now 'at Leyden, where, when I ſee him, I ſhall give him the beſt Counſel I can, and adviſe him 'to make his Follies leſs publick.' Upon the Whole, no Body being found, of any tolerable Abilities, for the Diſcharge of the Arabick and Hebrew Lectures, the Committee for regulating the Univerſities, upon the Petition before mentioned, with ſo many favourite Hands to it, and, doubtleſs, ſtrongly ſeconded by Mr. Selden, was contented to ſuſpend the Execution of their Vote againſt Mr. Pocock. I cannot certainly fix the Date of that Petition, but conclude, that it was in the Month of December. For Mr. Samuel Clarke, Dec. 30, anſwered one of Mr. Pocock's, which acquainted him with the Petition, and the Hopes of Succeſs therefrom, tho' he had heard of both before from another Hand. 'I was very glad, ſays that learned 'Perſon, of the News, both on behalf of the Univerſity, that now they begin to be ſenſible 'of their Loſs, when they ſuffer themſelves to be deprived of their worthieſt Members, and 'ſomething too on your Behalf, that you have ſome Hopes left of preſerving a Plank out of 'this your Shipwreck.' To conclude this Affair, Mr. Pocock enjoy'd both theſe Places without any Diſturbance, that I can meet with any Account of, taking a Chamber in Baliol-College, for his Reſidence, when oblig'd to be in Oxford.

THO' the Troubles he had thus been in for ſeveral Years together, were a ſufficient Employment for his Thoughts, they did not diſcourage him, however, from going on, at the ſame Time, with a learned Work, which was publiſhed at Oxford in the latter End of the Year 1649. This was his Specimen Hiſtoriæ Arabum, containing a ſhort Diſcourſe, in Arabick, with his Latin Tranſlation of it, and his large and very uſeful Notes on it. The Diſcourſe itſelf is taken out of the general Hiſtory of Gregorius Abul-Farajius, being his Introduction to his ninth Dynaſty (for into ten Dynaſties that Author divided his Work) where, being about to treat of the Empire of the Saracens, or Arabians, he gives a compendious Account of that People before Mahomet, as alſo of that Impoſtor himſelf, and the new Religion introduc'd by him, and of the ſeveral Sects into which it was divided. And Mr. Pocock's Notes on this Diſcourſe are a Collection of a great Variety of Things, relating to thoſe Matters, out of more than an hundred Arabick Manuſcripts, a Catalogue of which he adds in the End of his Book.

To give a brief Account of ſome of the chief Things contained in theſe Notes: Having ſhewn in them, for what Reaſons thoſe People were called Arabians and Saracens, he firſt ſets down ſome of the moſt conſiderable Matters, that were to be met with concerning their moſt antient Tribes; and then proceeding to thoſe Times, the Hiſtory of which is of greater Certainty, he notes the ſeveral Kingdoms, into which they had been divided; mentioning the Kings in each that were any way famous, and the particular Tranſactions, for which they were remarkable. Coming to treat of the Cuſtoms both of thoſe Arabians, which led a wandering Life, moving from Place to Place, as Opportunities of Paſturage or Rapine invited them, and of thoſe who had ſettled Habitations in Villages and Towns, he begins with a pretty large Account of their Gods, and idolatrous Worſhip, particularly of their Caaba, or Temple at Mecca, of the black Stone in one of the Corners of it, which had ſo much Veneration, and of ſome other Things taken afterwards by Mahomet, as theſe two were, into his new Religion. And then he proceeds to the Learning they had amongſt them in thoſe Days, which was chiefly made up of Skill in their own Language, Poetry, Oratory, and ſome Knowledge of the Stars. Under theſe laſt Heads he treats of the Dialect of Hamyar, long ſince loſt, which he gueſſes, from a few Words of it, yet remaining, to have had a much nearer Agreement with the Hebrew Language, at leaſt with Syriack, than the Dialect of the Koraſhites, which ſtill continues. He ſhews the vaſt Extent of this Tongue, which is, indeed, to be wonder'd at, ſince Letters were but of very late Uſe amongſt them; being, as he obſerves, firſt invented by Moramer, the Son of Morra, a few Years before Mahomet. But the Preſervation of it, as alſo of their antient Hiſtory, he believes to be the Effect of their Poetry. For it was a Cuſtom amongſt them, for many Ages, to throw all remarkable Things into Verſes, which being carefully learnt, ſupplied the Place of Books. Of their Oratory, he ſhews they had a great Opinion, and, indeed, notwithſtanding their Want of Letters, it was not contemptible. For ſome of them, by much Practice, would arrive at ſuch a Way of making Speeches, on any Occaſion of Moment, as was very prevailing with the People. But as for their Skill in the Stars, he obſerves, that it was not for any Ends of uſeful Knowledge, but ſome ſuperſtitious and fooliſh Purpoſes. For, as the Chaldeans introduc'd a Way of divining by the Planets, ſo the Arabians and Indians pretended to do the like by the fixed Stars.

The Things already mentioned, and more which are omitted, relate to the Arabians in their State of Ignorance; for ſo they call the Times before Mahomet. Mr. Pocock's next Work, in theſe Notes, is, to give ſome Account of that Impoſtor, whoſe true Name was Mohammed, and of the mighty Change which he made in the Opinions and Affairs of that People. Keeping, therefore, to the Text of Abul-Farajius, he from thence takes Occaſion to ſpeak of the feigned Prophecy concerning his Birth; the Genealogy from Iſhmael; the Time when he was born; the Death of Abdollah his Father; his Marriage with Chadijah, and the Speech of Abu Taleb his Unkle, on that Occaſion; his Flight from Mecca to Medina; his changing the Keblah, or directing the Face in Prayer from Jeruſalem to the Caaba; the Inſtitution of the Faſt in the Month Ramadan; his Sickneſs, Death and Burial. Having thus conſidered the principal Paſſages of Mahomet's Life, and remark'd ſome of thoſe Things which are ſaid concerning his many Wives, and his Daughter Phatema, he ſhews how ſome of his Followers have attempted to juſtify the new Religion he eſtabliſhed, both from the Teſtimony of Holy Scripture, and Pretences to ſeveral Miracles, eſpecially that, which the falſe Prophet himſelf would have to be eſteemed the greateſt Miracle of all, the inimitable Elegancy of his Alcoran. He explains the Nature of that School Divinity, which hath been in great Requeſt amongſt them, as alſo of that Knowledge or Skill in determining Controverſies about Right and Wrong, which gives the higheſt Reputation of Learning to them, that arrive at Perfection in it, and hath ſome Reſemblance, he ſays, to the Study amongſt us of the Civil and Canon Laws. After a ſhort View of the chief Points of their Religion, which have been ſubject to Controverſy, he hath a great deal concerning the moſt famous of their many Sects. For, according to a pretended Prophecy of Mahomet, they reckon up no leſs than Seventy Three. And from the many Inſtances he produces, of the Opinions held by the moſt conſiderable of theſe, in Oppoſition to one another, it is manifeſt, that the Diſputes about the Divine Attributes, Predetermination, God's Decrees, and ſome other Points, have been managed with the ſame Warmth, and indeed Nicety, among them, as they have been among ſome Chriſtians. But that the Mahometan Faith might be known, amidſt the different Sentiments of the ſeveral Parties, he ſets down, out of Al-Gazalius, a long Confeſſion of that which is held for Orthodox, in the Original Arabick, with his own Latin Tranſlation of it. He gives particular Accounts of the four Perſons of greateſt Fame amongſt them, for Knowledge in their Laws, each of them giving Name to a diſtinct Sect, or School, of thoſe that ſtudy them; he ſhews what their Aſſonnah or Tradition is, and the Authority it is of amongſt them. He explains the five fundamental Duties, which they are eſpecially obliged to, being Cleanlineſs in ſeveral Parts of their Bodies, and Cloathing, Prayers, Alms, Faſting, and going in Pilgrimage to Mecca. And under this laſt Duty of Pilgrimage, he mentions thoſe Rites of it, which were requir'd, they ſay, as Inſtances of their Obedience, without having in them any moral Goodneſs; ſuch as their running ſeven Times between Safa and Marwah; their going as often round the Caaba, and their throwing Stones into the Valley of Mena. He ſpeaks of their Obſervation of Friday, and of that Reſt they think themſelves obliged to on it; as alſo of Circumciſion, as it is us'd among them. Finally, he explains ſeveral antient Cuſtoms of the Arabians, forbidden by Mahomet, as unworthy the Religion he eſtabliſhed, tho' he retained many that are not leſs ridiculous.

And as he has thus given, in theſe Notes, a large Account of the true Opinions of the Mahometans; ſo he has taken Care, upon proper Occaſions, to do them Juſtice, by vindicating them from ſuch Things, as have been faſten'd on them, without ſufficient Ground; as particularly that Charge of Idolatry, brought againſt them by Euthymius, and ſome other Greek Writers; and alſo thoſe Stories, that are current in theſe Weſtern Parts, of the Expectation they are under, of the Return of Mahomet; of his Body's being put into an Iron Cheſt, and ſuſpended by a Loadſtone; and of the Dove, that was taught by him to fly to his Ear.

Besides the Things already obſerv'd, he has, in theſe Notes, many critical Remarks, of great Uſe to thoſe that ſtudy the Arab Tongue: And he has alſo taken Occaſion to inſert, in ſeveral Places, ſome curious Things, which the Author he explain'd, did not directly lead him to. Thus he gives a Deſcription of Mecca, out of Sharifol Edreſi; he ſhews what the Superſtition of the antient Sabii was, which, as Maimonides obſerves, had ſpread itſelf over the greateſt Part of the World. He gives an Account of the Magi, who were very numerous, not only in Perſia, and India, but in Arabia too, thinking it probable, that thoſe were of this laſt Country, who came into Judea to worſhip our Saviour. He has a ſhort Diſcourſe out of an Arabian Phyſician, concerning the Power of ſome Kinds of Food, to change the Temper and Diſpoſition of thoſe that eat them. He alſo conſiders the State of Learning amongſt the latter Arabians, as it had been advanc'd, firſt by Abu Jaafar Almanſor, and afterwards by Almamon, and ſome following Emperors. And he ſeems to agree with Sir Henry Savil, in the Opinion he quotes him for, that the Progreſs made by them in ingenious Studies, was ſo great, that they hardly came behind the Greeks themſelves.

This Book he dedicated to his great Patron, Mr. Selden, who had ſo much oblig'd him; not, indeed, by an Epiſtle, for that Purpoſe, but by a Declaration at the End of the Preface, that the following Work was deſign'd by him, to be a Token of his Obſervance and Gratitude. And this Way he choſe, as he told him in a private Letter, in Compliance with the Cuſtom of Arabian Writers, who have no other Way of Dedication, that ever he could obſerve amongſt them: And an Inſtance he gave in Kamus, a famous Arabick Dictionary, which was dedicated in this Manner, by the Author of it, to the Honour of Iſmael, a King of thoſe Times, wherein he wrote. Mr. Selden, upon reading the Book, was, I find, extremely pleas'd with it: And what Reception it met with, amongſt other learned Men, is manifeſt from the frequent Uſe hath been made of it, and the great Things have been ſaid of it. It was, indeed, generally conſider'd by them, as a convincing Proof, of what Mr. Pocock aſſerts in the Preface to it, that the Arab Tongue contains ſuch Riches, in every Kind of Learning, as have not yet been diſcovered to the Weſtern Parts of the World: And that this Work was not of the Nature of thoſe Diſcourſes, the Novelty of which entertains for a little Time, and then they are laid by and forgotten, appears by the general Eſteem it ſtill has, now, after ſo many Years, and the Commendations that are conſtantly given it [k], by almoſt all that are any way converſant in Oriental Learning.

Soon after he had finiſh'd this Work, he began to prepare another very uſeful Book for the Preſs. And alſo, in the Year 1652, by the Importunity of Mr. Selden, he began to undertake the Tranſlation of a large Hiſtorical Diſcourſe; and in the very ſame Year began to lend his Hand to one of the nobleſt Deſigns that ever was executed for the Advancement of Religion and Learning, the Polyglott Bible; but he received great, and long Interruptions in all theſe glorious Projects, by new Troubles that befel him, before he had finiſhed any one of them. And tho' theſe took their Riſe a conſiderable Time after he embarked in the Deſigns above-mentioned; yet to prevent frequent Breaks in the Thread of our Narrative, it ſeems beſt to give the Detail of thoſe Vexations here at once.

He had already loſt the profitable Part of his Preferment in the Univerſity, retaining only that, the Advantages of which did not equal the Burden; and now the utmoſt Endeavours were made uſe of, to deprive him alſo of his Benefice at Childry. Indeed, tho' all that he had, both in the Univerſity and the Country, before his Canonry was taken from him, was no extraordinary Encouragement for a Perſon of his uncommon Merit, whoſe Studies too occaſioned great Expence, and whoſe Family began to be numerous; the State of Affairs, at that Time, would in no wiſe ſuffer him to hope, that he ſhould be able to keep the Whole. At the Beginning, therefore, of his Concern with the Viſitors, I find he had entertained Thoughts of leſſening the Envy of his Preferments, by reſigning his Parſonage, hoping, by that Means, to to ſecure the Enjoyment of what he had in Oxford. But the Repreſentations made to him by Mr. John Greaves, and ſome other of his Friends, then in London, prevailed with him to lay aſide that Deſign. For it was manifeſt to them, that a Man of his Principles, whatever he ſhould part with, would be ſtill conſidered, as one that was fit to loſe more, even till he ſhould be utterly ruin'd and undone. And in no long Time after, he was fully convinc'd of the Truth of what his Friends then ſuggeſted. For the Loſs of his Canonry at Chriſt-Church, was ſo far from ſatisfying the Men of the Times, that it gave them Encouragement to hope, that his good Parſonage would now alſo become an eaſy Prey.

THAT he might be diſpoſſeſs'd of this, ſome ill People of his Pariſh were employed to preſent an Information againſt him, to the Commiſſioners appointed by Oliver Cromwell, for ejecting of ignorant, ſcandalous, inſufficient and negligent Miniſters[1]. One that knows nothing of the real Deſign of that new Law, would very much wonder, how it could be poſſible for thoſe that acted by it, to bring in Queſtion a Man of ſuch eminent Piety, Learning and Diligence. Dr. Brian Walton, then writing to Mr. Pocock concerning the great Work at that Time under his Direction, ſays, 'I have heard lately (which I ſhould wonder at, if any 'Thing in theſe Times were to be wondered at) that ſome malicious Perſons trouble you upon 'the Ordinance for ejecting of Miniſters. If it be true, adds he, I hope God will deliver 'you from unreaſonable and abſurd Men.' But a great Part of the Commiſſioners having Notions of Things very different from thoſe of other People, they readily admitted the nine following Articles, as a Charge againſt him, which were ſign'd by Thomas Buſh, and one Fiſher.

1. THAT he had frequently made uſe of the Idolatrous Common-Prayer Book, as he performed Divine Service.

2. THAT he was diſaffected to the preſent Power.

3. THAT he had no Regard to Thankſgiving-Days, and thoſe of Humiliation, appointed by Parliament; but, on the contrary, had often prayed for the Deſtruction of it.

4. THAT a certain Perſon, who preached for him, declar'd in the Pulpit, when he was preſent, that there were ſome in the Nation, who had pull'd down the King, to make themſelves Steps to climb higher.

5. THAT he, and ſeveral that officiated for him, did rail at Profeſſors, in their Sermons.

6. THAT he had been negligent in examining thoſe that came to the Lord's Table.

7. THAT he had countenanced the Profanation of the Lord's Day.

8. THAT he had refus'd to ſuffer ſome godly Men to preach in his Pulpit. And,

9. THAT he had not read the Ordinance for the Obſervation of the Sabbath.

BEING ſummoned to give in his Anſwers to the Particulars of this Accuſation, he appear'd at Abington, the Place appointed for it, and very ſubmiſſively delivered to the Commiſſioners, his Defence againſt every Article. The Sum of which was this: Firſt, as to an Idolatrous Common-Prayer Book, he declar'd, that he knew no ſuch Thing: But if they meant that which was once eſtabliſhed as the Liturgy of the Church of England, it ſeem'd ſtrange to him, he ſaid, to term that Idolatrous, and thereby to accuſe of Idolatry, all the Proteſtants ſince the Reformation. Of that Liturgy too, he denied that he had made any Uſe, contrary to the late Act for taking it away. The ſecond and third Articles, he ſaid, contain'd Things that were falſe; he having diſcovered no Diſſatisfaction under the preſent Government, ſince it was in being; never prayed for the Deſtruction of any, and taken due Care for publick Service in his Church, on thoſe Days, appointed by Authority, for Thankſgiving and Humiliation. As for thoſe Words in the fourth Article, pretended to have been ſpoken in his Pulpit, he had examined, he ſaid, ſome of the moſt conſtant Hearers of Sermons in his Pariſh, and they could remember no ſuch Paſſage: But if any Thing of that Kind had been deliver'd there, he that ſpoke it, he thought, was accountable for it, and not he. Of the Railing, mentioned in the fifth Article, he might boldly aſſert, he ſaid, that no Pulpit in the whole Nation had been more free from that Imputation, than his; he had never ſpoken againſt any Thing in that Place, but Sin; but he underſtood, indeed, that he had been accus'd, on that Account, as guilty: For, having preached about juſt and upright Dealing, ſoon after Thomas Buſh, one of theſe Informers, had fraudulently remov'd a Land-mark on ſome of his Ground, a great Way from its Place, the ſaid Buſh had cenſur'd him for venting his Malice in the Pulpit, tho', at the ſame Time, when he thus preach'd, he knew nothing of that Encroachment, his Servant having not yet acquainted him with it. He might, he ſaid too, be, perhaps, in like Manner, offenſive in ſome other of his Sermons; for having often preached againſt Lewdneſs and Whoredom, the ſame Perſon might call it Railing, as knowing what was publickly objected to him, by a certain Woman, of his lewd Behaviour towards her. And the other Informer might, for the like Reaſon, be as much offended alſo at ſome of his Diſcourſes againſt Profaneneſs and Drunkenneſs. As to the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, it was well known, he ſaid, by all that frequented his Church, to which his Accuſers never came, that before it was celebrated, the Doctrine of it was in the plaineſt Manner duly opened; People warn'd of the Duty and Danger, and earneſtly exhorted to look to their Preparations; and that ſome, whom he thought unfit, were put back. Any Profanation of the Lord's Day, he told them, he was ſo far from countenancing, that, according to his Power, he had laboured to prevent it. It was known, he ſaid, how often he had call'd on the People of his Pariſh, at leaſt, to ſend their Children and their Servants to be catechiz'd; how often he had ſent the Clerk out of the Church, after their Children, and even gone himſelf to them. And that the Officers were to be blamed for not doing that by their Authority, which he could not by his Perſuaſions. He added too, that he had been inform'd, by Perſons of good Credit, that the Children of the Informer, Thomas Buſh, had been chiefly guilty of ſuch Profanation; that on the laſt Lord's Day, ſince this Complaint was made, a Son of the ſaid Buſh had made a Noiſe in Time of reading the Scriptures, to the Diſturbance of the Congregation; and that the other Accuſant, being Church-Warden, had been complain'd to of People's playing on that Day, and yet would take no Care to reſtrain them. As for his prohibiting godly Men to preach in his Church, he own'd, indeed, that he had once refus'd a Man, whom the Informer Buſh had brought thither for that Purpoſe, preaching at the ſame Time himſelf. And this, he ſaid, he would neither deny nor be aſhamed of, when the Thing ſhould be examined by them, to whom ſuch Matters belong'd. Finally, the laſt Article, about the Ordinance for the Obſervation of the Lord's Day, he declar'd to be falſe, it being well known, he ſaid, that he had read it. And then having aſſur'd them, that the Anſwer he had thus made to the ſeveral Things he had been charg'd with, was true, he deſired the Commiſſioners, that they would be pleaſed to queſtion him on ſuch Things alone, as were proper for their Cogniſance, according to their Commiſſion, leaving the other to ſuch Courts, as they belonged to; and alſo, that they would make the Perſons, who, as it was pretended, ſhould come and witneſs againſt him, well to be adviſed of, and to underſtand, what they were to ſwear to.

After this Anſwer had been put in, it was concluded, by ſeveral of Mr. Pocock's Friends, that the Proſecution againſt him would ceaſe. But they were miſtaken in the Matter: For on Feb. 12, 1654, ſeven or eight Witneſſes appear'd before the Commiſſioners at Abington, to prove the ſeveral Articles againſt him.

To make out the firſt Article, ſeveral of them depos'd, that he had us'd Part of the Common-Prayer; for he commonly, they ſaid, began Divine Service with theſe Words, Almighty and moſt merciful Father. One of them added, that he had made uſe of a Part of it at a Burial. Another, that, on Eaſter-Day laſt, he had adminſtred the Sacrament in the old Way. And a third, that a little after thoſe Words, Almighty and moſt merciful Father, he had ſaid, Praiſe ye the Lord. A fourth charg'd him with ſaying the whole Confeſſion. And a fifth, with repeating the Abſolution, or the Subſtance of it.

For the Proof of the ſecond Article, two or three of them teſtified, that ſome Perſons whom he had entertain'd, and ſome that officiated for him, had been diſaffected to the preſent Power. And as for Mr. Pocock himſelf, one of them declar'd, that about the Time of Naſeby Fight, he prayed for the ſhattering and deſtroying of thoſe, that roſe up in Arms againſt the King, and that he had never heard him pray for the Parliament, or any of their Forces. Another ſwore, that tho' he could not remember the particular Expreſſions, he was very well ſatisfied, that Mr. Pocock did rail at the Government; for which Reaſon, he had long with-drawn himſelf from hearing him. And another Zealot depos'd, that upon a Faſt-Day, appointed about the Beginning of the War, he had prayed, that the Lord would ſcatter, diſcomfit, and deſtroy all thoſe that roſe up againſt his Majeſty; which was the Cauſe, he ſaid, that he then forſook his Miniſtry, having no Freedom, or Comfort, to hear him afterward.

To the third Article, about Humiliation and Thankſgiving-Days, appointed by the Parliament, ſeveral of them teſtified, that he was commonly abſent on them; and that it was a Kind of Proverb in the Pariſh, at ſuch Times, That now Mr. Pocock was either ſick or at Oxford. Some of them alſo added, that he, and thoſe that officiated for him on ſuch Days, ſaid ſo little of the Nature of them, that when the Service was over, the People knew nothing of the Matter.

Of the Words in the fourth Article, ſaid to be ſpoken in Mr. Pocock's Pulpit, no Teſtimony was given, by more than one Perſon; and he could neither name the Man that ſpake them, nor aſſign the Time when.

As for railing againſt Profeſſors, the Charge in the fifth Article, one of them teſtified, that one Mr. Yeels, as he preach'd for Mr. Pocock, about four Years before, was guilty of it; becauſe he warned them, as this Deponent ſaid, not to come into the Yards of ſuch as did not come to the publick Miniſtry. Another depos'd, that one Mr. Hall had railed much againſt Profeſſors, and the People of the Nation, for not helping the King out of his Bonds: As alſo, that he had theſe Words in one of his Sermons: Mark theſe Fellows: They have Bibles on their Tables, but Whips behind their Doors; they lead ſilly Women captive, who are ſtill learning, yet never attain to Knowledge of the Truth. However, moſt of them declar'd, that they could not charge Mr. Pocock himſelf in this Matter. Only one of them ſaid, that he had given Hints to that Purpoſe; and another, that he had call'd Profeſſors, Schiſmaticks, Separatiſts, and Deceivers; meaning, as this Deponent apprehended, ſuch as did not come to hear him.

To the ſixth Article, about his not examining People before the Sacrament, ſeveral depos'd, that they never knew him practiſe it. One of them, notwithſtanding, acknowledged, that one Perſon had been put back. But then this Deponent and another declar'd, that he had admitted ſuch as were Railers againſt Profeſſors, calling them Roundheads, and ſaying they would cut their Throats.

About his countenancing the Profanation of the Lord's Day, in the ſeventh Article, ſome of them declar'd, they could not aſſert any ſuch Thing; others ſaid, that he had not reprov'd thoſe that were guilty of it. But one of them could not but confeſs the contrary, and that when People were playing in the Church-yard, Mr. Pocock had gone forth to call them in to Catechiſm.

That he had deny'd to ſome godly Men the Liberty of preaching in his Pulpit, according to the eighth Article, they endeavoured to make out, by inſtancing in one Mr. Pendarves, to whom Mr. Pocock would not give Leave, a wandering Anabaptiſt Preacher, Author of a Book call'd, Arrows againſt Babylon[m]. They alſo named one Mr. Steed; but he was not, as ſome of them acknowledg'd, refus'd by Mr. Pocock, who was abſent, but by thoſe who had the Care of his Affairs at Childry, when this Steed came to preach there.

The ninth and laſt Article, that he had not read the Ordinance for the Obſervation of the Sabbath, appeared to be perfectly groundleſs; all that either of them could ſay about it being, that, four or five Years before, the Book had been carried to Mr. Pocock in the midſt of Divine Service, and that he thereupon ſaid, it ſhould have been brought to him at home, and that he could not then tell whether he ſhould read it or no.

This is the Sum of what thoſe zealous and forward Witneſſes depos'd againſt Mr. Pocock, after a diligent Inquiry into every Paſſage of his Life. And amongſt the Things they thus teſtified, as ſome were really to his Honour, in the Opinion of all good Men; ſo others were much miſrepreſented, and others notoriouſly falſe. The ſame Witneſſes too being, on his Demand, examin'd, according to Cuſtom, on ſome Interrogatories on his Behalf, notwithſtanding all their Malice, and the little Regard they had for Truth, could not but own, that for his Life and Converſation, they had nothing to charge him with. And one of the moſt ſpiteful of them all was even forced to declare, that he believed him to be as civil a Man, as went upon the Ground. But Innocence and Goodneſs are not a ſufficient Fence againſt the Rage of evil Men; ſome of theſe Witneſſes, therefore, having made ſuch Steps towards his Ruin, took what further Meaſures they could, thoroughly to effect it; and, for that Purpoſe, ſoon after, they preſented a Paper to the Commiſſioners, a true Copy of which I ſhall here add. For tho' ſuch a Mixture of Ignorance, Malice, and Enthuſiaſm, may prove an Exerciſe of the Reader's Patience, it will give him, however, ſome Idea of the ſad Fruits of thoſe wretched Times, and of the Inſults which the beſt of Men were then expos'd to.

'An Anſwer to the reproachful Declaration, put into the Court of Godly Commiſſioners, 'by Mr. Pocock, at Abington, with a Propoſal of our Deſires to be granted by the Com-'miſſioners.

'First, He doth declare the godly Actions of thoſe Magiſtrates, in former Days, compelling the Common-Prayer to be us'd, to draw the Nation from that groſs Idolatry they 'were then under. But it had been a more glorious Work, if they had proved faithful to 'Jeſus Chriſt, if they had thrown down the Traditions of Men, Rudiments of the ido-'latrous World, which is not after Chriſt the Head of the Church, as it hath pleaſed God 'our Magiſtrates have done at this Time, being found in the Maſs-Book. And that it was 'a literal Service, in the Room of ſpiritual Service, which is only acceptable to the Father; 'and ſuch a Worſhip, and ſuch Worſhipers, that offer up ſpiritual Sacrifices, which are ac-'ceptable to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Therefore it was voted down five Years ſince, being 'manifeſt it was the great Idol of the Nation, and not divine, but merely human. And it 'is manifeſt in the holy Scriptures, to ſet up their Poſts by the Lords, is Idolatry. His 'Highneſs, with his Counſel, hath ordained this Court, therefore, to remove from their 'Place all ſuch Miniſters, as ſhall at any Time make uſe of this Service, after January laſt 'was Twelve-month.

'Secondly, He hath reproached thoſe that have teſtified their Knowledge of him, 'from good Experience they have had of him, ever ſince he came to Childry; to render 'them and their Teſtimony to this Court ridiculous and odious. But it is manifeſt Satan had 'Inſtruments in his Hand, to reproach Jeſus Chriſt, who is the only Way, the Truth, and 'the Life; and by the learned Clergy accounted a Deceiver, and uſed all Means poſſible to 'delude the World after his Suffering, that he roſe not again the third Day; altho' the Al-'mighty Hand was ſignally ſeen, in ſtriking their ſtrict Watch they ſet as dead Men, and 'rowled the Stone from the Sepulchre, and rais'd him up by his Almighty Power the third 'Day, according to the Scripture. Yet after they knew the Truth, they gave the Soldiers 'double Money, to report he was ſtolen away, and the World believed the Report, but they 'could not deceive the Elect by it. If Satan, that old Enemy, can reproach the Head, 'tis 'no Marvel if he raiſe all Manner of Reproaches on his poor contemptible Servants, whom 'the Lord Jeſus hath choſen out of the World; yet we humbly conceive it our Duty, with 'all the People of God, both to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to our godly Magiſtrates, and to this 'Court, to give in our Knowledge, and Teſtimony, of any Truth we know againſt publick 'Miniſters, who, from our Experience, are diſaffected to the Reformation the Lord hath 'wrought,

[m] Vid. Athen. Oxon. Vol. II. p. 127.

'wrought, with thier Diſaffection to the Reformers, and alſo their Envy to all thoſe that are 'made willing, by the Day of God's Power, to be reformed. And to this End alſo, which 'is not the leaſt, that the common Enemy may not ſtill be encouraged and ſtrengthened 'againſt his Highneſs, his Counſel, and Army; whom the Lord hath the only Inſtruments 'in his Hands to ſubdue the common Enemy in the three Nations, and a Wall of Defence 'to preſerve the Godly, from the Fury and Rage of the malicious, wicked World, which 'knows not them, becauſe they know not him, who alone is their Prince and Saviour, whoſe 'Voice they know and follow, and know not the Voice of Strangers; therefore they hate 'them the more. And farther, we could anſwer all the Particulars caſt on us, had we his 'Copy, and could declare what Perſons Satan made uſe of in the Buſineſs; we could tell 'you of all thoſe that ſtand for him, how they are affected, and ſpeak Truth from good Ex-'perience, and of himſelf alſo; but we are made to hate Reviling for Reviling, and would 'have been ſilent at this Time, had it been our own Cauſe, and not troubled the Court; but 'we conceive it a Duty incumbent upon us from the Lord, being a Work he hath wrought, to 'reform the Nation, according to Truth and Righteouſneſs, which he labours to darken, by 'reproaching us to this Court: Yet, we are not aſhamed of our Teſtimony and good Affec-'tion to the Work of the Lord, committed to this Court, which we truſt they will perform 'with Zeal and Faithfulneſs, in Truth and Righteouſneſs, to the Glory of God, and the re-'forming thoſe weighty Things that concerns their Truſt, and Well-being of the Nation. 'Alſo we intreat this Court, to give us the ſame Liberty as he had, to croſs-examine their 'Witneſſes, as he did ours, and himſelf and Witneſſes exempt, the Court, in Time of Ex-'amination, calling in one by one, the Door being kept cloſe, as was for us, that one may 'not hear the other's Teſtimony, that Truth may not go in Contempt, and Falſhood take 'place; which is our Deſires, and had rather any of our Tongues ſhould cleave to the Roof 'of our Mouths, than maintain any Falſhood or witneſs Lies. But for fear of Greatneſs, or 'Favour, or the like, divers Perſons, of the forwardeſt Actors, hath diſſented with divers 'others, who engaged to clear the Depoſitions more fully, withdraws; ſeeing us in great 'Contempt, and under Threatenings; and others will not come in, altho' ſummon'd with 'your Warrants, which have declared, that his own Child, laſt Spring, was baptiz'd with the 'Common-Prayer, with Godfathers and Godmothers, in the Preſence of four or five Mi-'niſters; and the Communions adminiſtred the laſt Summer, as it was twenty Years ago. 'And his Curate, Mr. Whetſtone, could not content himſelf to make uſe of it at home, but 'alſo at a neighbouring Town, and was indicted at the Aſſizes for it; the Grand Jury found 'the Bill againſt him, and ſhould have paid five Pounds to the Poor could he be taken, and 'he had been taken, had not his Houſe ſheltered him. Thus 'tis clear, ſtill they labour to 'uphold that which God hath thrown down; but it is the Deſires of our Souls, according to 'that good Prayer he left his Diſciples for a Direction, that his Kingdom may come, and his 'Will be done on Earth, as it is in Heaven, to the Glory of the great God, and our Lord 'Jeſus Chriſt, to whom be Praiſe and Glory for ever and ever, and all Nations come to the 'Knowledge of the Truth, that they may be ſaved, and all Anti-chriſtian Ways deſtroyed, 'that are not found in the Law and Teſtimony, which is our Deſires.'

IT may be proper here to obſerve, from ſome ſcattered Memorandums of Mr. Pocock's, that the two firſt of theſe ſubſcribing Profeſſors, Brookes and Buſh, had been uſed to deny and detain from him Corn Tithes. And there is yet extant a Bond, all of it written in Mr. Pocock's own Hand, dated, Nov. 10, 1647, in which the ſaid Buſh, together with one Alexander Filmore, both of the Pariſh of Childry, do under their Hands and Seals, bind themſelves to pay unto Mr. Pocock, their Rector, the Harveſt following, nine Sheaves of Wheat, four Cocks of Barley, a Cock and an Half of Beans, and one Cock of blue Peaſe; all which they had detained the Harveſt laſt paſt.

THUS, in Return to Mr. Pocock's Forbearance towards Buſh, after he had detained Part of his Tithes, did that ungrateful Man, on the firſt Opportunity that offered, endeavour to deprive him of the Whole.

I DO not find that Mr. Pocock took any other Notice of the Anſwer above rehearſed, than only to procure an atteſted Copy of it, from which, that which is here inſerted hath been tranſcrib'd; but to their Depoſitions againſt him, he delivered to the Commiſſioners, in a little Time, a full Anſwer in Writing, introducing it with theſe humble Deſires, which, as he told them, he crav'd Leave to offer to them.

1. 'THAT what was formerly given in by him, by way of Anſwer, might be review'd 'and conſider'd.

2. 'THAT ſuch Things as concern'd other Perſons, were they true or falſe, might not be 'charg'd upon him.

3. 'THAT the Teſtimonies of the Witneſſes produced againſt him, might not be ex-'tended beyond the Letter of the Ordinance; it being a known and undoubted Rule, that 'no penal Laws are to be extended beyond the ſtrict Letter of them. And tho' ſuch as are 'appointed Judges may, upon ſome Occaſions, as is uſual, diſpenſe with the Rigour of ſuch 'Laws; yet they ought not, upon any Occaſion, to exceed or go beyond the Letter 'of them.

4. 'THAT where the Witneſſes produc'd againſt him ſhould be found to contradict them-'ſelves, or one another, their Teſtimony might not be admitted as Evidence againſt him.

5. 'THAT the Witneſſes to be examin'd for him, according to what was allow'd by the 'Ordinance, might be impartially and indifferently heard, without Prejudice; and their Evi-'dence taken on his Behalf be balanced with the Teſtimony of his Accuſers: It being the 'Duty of righteous Judges, not in any Caſe, ſo far to incline to the Parties accuſing, as if it 'were their Deſire and Buſineſs, to find the Party accuſed guilty; but to admit them to an 'equal Plea, and if there be any Favour to be ſhew'd, it ought to be in the Behalf of the 'Perſon accuſed.'

IN the Anſwer itſelf he was very particular, making his Defence under each Article, againſt every Thing that had been ſworn, by the ſeveral Witneſſes againſt him. It will be a Work too tedious to give an Account of the Whole. Omitting therefore his Replies to thoſe Parts of their Teſtimony, which were either of no Conſequence, or wholly falſe, I will only take Notice of what he ſaid to ſuch as had ſome Ground of Truth, and were intended to render him a ſcandalous Miniſter, according to the Meaning of the Ordinance. And theſe now were the Things they teſtified concerning his uſing the Common-Prayer, his Diſaffection to the Government, and what they call'd, his railing againſt Profeſſors.

THE Uſe of the Common-Prayer, was, by this new Law, declar'd ſufficient to render a Miniſter ſcandalous; and Mr. Pocock, notwithſtanding the Prohibition, always paid a great deal of Regard to that excellent Model of true Devotion; for as he conſtantly read the Pſalms, and the Chapters; ſo the ſeveral Prayers he made uſe of were, as to the Matter of them, agreeable to the Liturgy, and often too, he took in ſome of the very Words of it. But having ſtill govern'd himſelf, with all the Prudence and Caution, which were neceſſary in ſuch dangerous Times; he was able, before any indifferent Judges, to avoid the Force of the Accuſations brought againſt him. For the Defence of himſelf, from the ſeveral Depoſitions relating to this Article, he took all the Advantage he could of the Words of the Ordinance, by which a publick and frequent Uſe of the Common-Prayer Book, ſince a certain Day, were only prohibited, ſhewing, that if moſt of the Things he had been charged with, by the Witneſſes, were allowed to be true, they would not yet, by the Letter of that Ordinance, at all affect him. He declar'd the Falſhood of ſeveral Particulars of the Teſtimony againſt him, which he was ready, he ſaid, fully to prove by other Witneſſes, both for Number and Quality, much more creditable. He made it appear, that ſome of his Accuſers had manifeſtly contradicted, both themſelves and one another. And he noted the groſs Ignorance of others, who, neither underſtood the Nature of an Oath, nor what they ſwore to. For, it was known, he ſaid, that one of the Witneſſes, on her Return home, had told ſome of her Neighbours, that ſhe had expected to be put to ſwear ſome great Oath, but that ſhe did not ſwear at all, only took a Book into her Hand. And they might remember, he added, that the Witneſs, who had charged him with adminiſtring the Sacrament, at Eaſter, after the old Way, being aſk'd, Why he thought it the old Way? Gave this Reaſon, becauſe he made a Prayer before, and a Prayer after, and gave the Bread and Wine to the People. And alſo, being further aſk'd, Whether thoſe Prayers were the ſame Form with thoſe in the Common-Prayer? He ſaid, Yes, for ought he knew; for he talk'd in them of Peter, of Paul, and John.

DISAFFECTION to the Government then in Being, was alſo by the ſame Act made exceeding ſcandalous, and indeed a Man of Mr. Pocock's Principles could not be heartily free from it. However, as formerly in his Prayers for the Proſperity of the King, while that good Prince ſtood in need of them, he had not uſed any harſh or unſeemly Expreſſions; ſo ſince the new eſtabliſhed Tyranny, he had taken a due Care, upon all Occaſions, to carry himſelf inoffenſively; and this Warineſs, now qualified him for a ſufficient Defence. In this Article, as well as in the former, he took hold of the Words of the Act, which only declar'd them guilty in this Matter, who diſcover'd their Diſaffection, by writing, preaching, or otherwiſe publiſhing. He obſerv'd to them, that the Things relating to other Perſons, were they indeed true, could not, with any Juſtice, be put on his Account. And as for thoſe Words, which were alledg'd againſt himſelf, if, indeed, ſpoken by him, the Deponents, he ſaid, had confeſs'd, that it was many Years ago, at the Beginning of the Wars, and about the Time of Naſeby Fight, and ſo they could not reflect on the preſent Power, which was not then in Being; and if in themſelves at that Time criminal, yet they had been diſcharg'd by the Act of Indemnity.

THE other ſcandalous Practice, in the Senſe of this Law, was, what they call'd Railing at Profeſſors, that is, a ſpeaking plainly of the Sins of Schiſm, Diviſion, and the like, which many, in thoſe Times, who pretended highly to Godlineſs, were manifeſtly guilty of: Such Reproof, upon proper Occaſions, he had not neglected; but ſtill what he ſpake, was in a very grave and ſerious Way; for, as often as he expos'd the Errors of thoſe diſorderly People, he did it in the ſofteſt Words, deſigning, if it were poſſible, not to anger, but reform them. And under this Article, therefore, his Defence was very eaſy. For, whereas all that he

he had been expreſsly charg'd with, was the Speaking, as he preach'd, of Schiſmaticks, Separatiſts, and Deceivers, he ſuppos'd, he ſaid, that it could not be deny'd, that there might be juſt and neceſſary Cauſe for the Uſe of ſuch Words; and he hop'd, that the Miſapprehenſion of thoſe who might have applied them wrong, would not be faſtened on him as a Crime.

But tho' his Anſwer, to all the Depoſitions againſt him, was thus full and clear, and had all the Marks of Truth, that could poſſibly be expected; they would not, however, eaſe him of the Trouble of bringing Witneſſes for his Juſtification. A conſiderable Number, therefore, appear'd for him before theſe Commiſſioners at Wantage, March 27, 1655. Amongſt whom were four of the ſame Name, viz. John Fettiplace, of Childry, Eſquire, Charles Fettiplace, of Up. Lambourn, Eſquire, Edmund Fettiplace and George Fettiplace, Gentlemen, whom I could not but thus particularly mention, in Honour to a worthy Family, that in Times of great Difficulty, afforded ſo many Perſons, who were not afraid to protect Learning and Goodneſs, ſo unjuſtly perſecuted. By the Teſtimony of theſe Witneſſes, who were ſworn and ſeverally examined upon all the Articles againſt him, not only the Malice and Falſhood of his Accuſers were ſufficiently manifeſt; but his peaceable Behaviour, his chriſtian Temper, and unblameable Converſation, were made evident, beyond Exception. Several of them declar'd, that upon an intimate Acquaintance with him, for many Years, they had always found him not only meek, friendly, and obliging, but alſo a very religious and godly Man, of an upright Life and Converſation; a conſtant Reprover of Vice and Sin, and an Encourager of Holineſs. And ſome of them added, that they verily believ'd, that in the whole Country, wherein he dwelt, there could not be a Perſon of a fairer Character, and more unblemiſhed Reputation.

And thus, at length, notwithſtanding all the Endeavours of his zealous Adverſaries to oppreſs him, the Charge that had been manag'd againſt him fell to the Ground; it being impoſſible for them to faſten any Thing ſcandalous upon him, even according to their own new Senſe of that Word. Very unwilling, however, they were, that the good Parſonage, which they thought themſelves ſure of the Diſpoſal of, ſhould continue ſtill in his Hands, and therefore made choice of another Method whereby to diſpoſſeſs him of it. As theſe Commiſſioners were, by the Act that eſtabliſhed them, to determine what was ſcandalous in Clergymen; ſo, in Conjunction with ſeveral Miniſters named in it, they were made the Judges too of Ignorance and Inſufficiency [n]; and now, tho' that former Power had not ſerv'd their Purpoſe, they were willing to try whether this other might not prove more ſucceſsful. There was nothing, indeed, in the Articles, at firſt exhibited againſt him, that led them to this Attempt; but the Depoſitions of ſome of thoſe forward Witneſſes, that ſwore to them, afforded ſome Foundation for it. For one of them had declar'd, that he believ'd Mr. Pocock to be deſtitute of the Spirit, tho' he preach'd ſaving Truths according to the Letter; and another had depos'd, that he ſometimes preached pretty well, but at other Times not ſo well; and that his Deadneſs, and Dullneſs drove People from hearing him. But this new Danger, which he was expos'd to, fill'd ſeveral learned Men, of much Fame and Eminence, at that Time in Oxford, with a great deal of Indignation; and they reſolv'd to go to the Place, where the Commiſſioners were to meet, and expoſtulate with them about it. In the Number of thoſe that went, were Dr. Ward, Dr. Wilkins, Dr. Wallis, and Dr. Owen; and they all labour'd, with much Earneſtneſs, to convince thoſe Men of the ſtrange Abſurdity of what they were undertaking: Particularly Dr. Owen, who endeavour'd, with ſome Warmth, to make them ſenſible of the infinite Contempt and Reproach which would certainly fall upon them, when it ſhould be ſaid, that they had turn'd out a Man for Inſufficiency, whom all the Learned, not of England only, but of all Europe, ſo juſtly admir'd for his vaſt Knowledge, and extraordinary Accompliſhments: And being himſelf one of the Commiſſioners appointed by that Act, he added, that he was now come to deliver himſelf, as well as he could, from a Share in ſuch Diſgrace, by proteſting againſt a Proceeding ſo ſtrangely fooliſh, and unjuſt. The Commiſſioners, being very much mortified at the Remonſtrances of ſo many eminent Men, eſpecially of Dr. Owen, in whom they had a particular Confidence, thought it beſt for them wholly to put an End to the Matter, and ſo diſcharg'd Mr. Pocock from any further Attendance. And, indeed, he had been ſufficiently tired with it; this Perſecution, which laſted for many Months, being the moſt grievous to him of all that he had undergone. It made him, as he declar'd to the World ſome Time after [o], utterly uncapable of Study, it being impoſſible for him, when he attempted it, duely to remember what he had to do, or to apply himſelf to it with any Attention. And, doubtleſs, the Characters of the Perſons, under whom he ſuffered, added not a little to the Weight of his Sufferings; being ſuch as hated Learning, out of Zeal for Religion, and with large Pretences to Godlineſs laboured to undermine the true Supports of it. A Sort of Men, as he himſelf deſcribes them [p], abſurd and unreaſonable, and the Peſt of the Age in which they liv'd. Indeed, in thoſe Times of Diſorder and Confuſion, amongſt other ſtrange Opinions, which found an eaſy Entertainment with great Numbers of People, the Contempt and even Hatred of Learning prevail'd to a very great Degree. About the Year 1650, Mr. Pocock had complain'd [q], in the Book he then publiſh'd, of a Sort of Men who boldly declared, all the Kinds of it to be injurious to Religion; and, therefore, that it ought to be wholly baniſh'd from all Chriſtian Commonwealths: Particularly, that it was ſufficient for every one to be acquainted with his Mother-Tongue alone, and that the Time that was employed in obtaining the Knowledge of other Languages, was utterly loſt; ſo that, as he obſerv'd, the very Way which Julian the Apoſtate made choice of, for the Deſtruction of Chriſtianity, was thought the only Means of promoting it: And how much the ſame Opinion obtain'd in the Univerſity of Oxford itſelf, in a few Years after this, amongſt ſome who had made themſelves conſiderable Men there, appears from a Letter of Dr. Langbaine to Mr. Selden, the inſerting Part whereof, may not, perhaps, be unacceptable. After he had given in it, his Senſe of an antient Greek Cuſtom, in Anſwer to a Letter he had receiv'd from that learned Man, he went on in this Manner:

'——'Tis true, the Problem might ſuit very well for the Fire-ſide, in a Winter Night; 'but I am ſorry I have Occaſion to ſay, that I fear we muſt be forc'd, e'er long, to bid good 'Night to our Noctes Atticæ. I was not ſo much troubled to hear of that Fellow, who lately 'in London maintain'd in Publick, that Learning is a Sin, as to ſee ſome Men (who would be 'accounted none of the meaneſt amongſt ourſelves, here at home) under Pretence of Piety, 'go about to baniſh it in the Univerſity. I cannot make any better Conſtruction of a late 'Order made by thoſe, whom we call Viſitors, upon Occaſion of an Election laſt Week, at 'All-Souls College, to this Effect: That, for the future, no Scholar be choſen into any Place in 'any College, unleſs he bring a Teſtimony, under the Hands of four Perſons, at the leaſt, (not 'Electors) known to theſe Viſitors to be truly godly Men, that he who ſtands for ſuch a Place is 'himſelf truly godly. By arrogating to themſelves this Power, they ſit Judges of all Mens 'Conſciences, and have rejected ſome, againſt whom they had no other Exceptions (being 'certified by ſuch to whom their Converſations were beſt known, to be unblameable and ſta-'tuteably elected, after due Examination and Approbation of their Sufficiency by that So-'ciety) merely upon this Account, that the Perſons, who teſtified in their Behalf, are not 'known to theſe Viſitors, to be regenerate. I intend, God willing, e'er long, to have an E-'lection in our College, and have profeſs'd, that I will not ſubmit to this Order; how I ſhall 'ſpeed in it, I do not pretend to foreſee; but if I be baffled, I ſhall hardly be ſilent. Sir, 'excuſe this Paſſion of,

Qu. Coll. Oxon,
Nov. 8, 1653.

Your moſt humble Servant,
GER. LANGBAINE.

UPON the Head of Mr. Pocock's Troubles I ſhall only add, that one of the Commiſſioners, who voted for acquitting him, Mr. Strowde, of Ruſcomb in Berkſhire, had Occaſion for his Teſtimony, after the King's Reſtoration, to ſecure a conſiderable Intereſt of his, then in Queſtion, which was readily, and, I believe, effectually obtained. That Gentleman deſiring the Renewal of a Leaſe belonging to one Mr. Chappel, as Prebendary of Sarum, was refuſed, mainly becauſe he was repreſented to be a Phanatick. Hereupon Dr. Owen, who in the ſelf-ſame Affair had been very active and ſerviceable to Mr. Pocock, writes to him, deſiring, 'That, if he remembered who the Man in former Time hath appeared for, and manifeſted 'a Reſpect unto Worth, Learning, and the Miniſtry, he would be pleas'd to make it a 'Ground of interceding with Mr. Chappel, by his Letter, that he may obtain that lawful Fa-'vour in the Renewal of his Leaſe, which an honeſt Man may juſtly expect.' Mr. Pocock was, doubtleſs, glad of this Opportunity, to diſcharge a Debt of Gratitude to Mr. Strowde, and Dr. Owen, at the ſame Time; and, therefore, wrote immediately to Mr. Chappel, tho' then altogether a Stranger to him, excuſing the Liberty he took, on the Score of Gratitude, which obliged him, at the Deſire of Friends, to atteſt what he knew concerning Mr. Strowde, a Suitor to him for the Renewal of a Leaſe: 'It ſeems, adds he, he is repreſented to you as a 'Phanatick. I am a greater Stranger to him, than to be much acquainted with his Opinions. 'Only thus much: When I was vehemently perſecuted by Phanaticks, in the Time of their 'Power, and their chief Accuſations being my Conformity to the Church of England, I found 'him a Friend againſt them, and one who joined, with others, under his Hand and Seal to 'acquit me out of that Court; ſo that they could not have their Will againſt me. Out of 'which Reſpect, I could not but in Gratitude acknowledge the Favour then done me, and 'my Deſire of doing him any good Office. If at your Hands he may find that Favour of 'being receiv'd as your Tenant, I ſhall be very glad, and think myſelf Partaker of your 'Courteſy, &c.' We have Reaſon to believe, that this Interpoſition had the Effect deſired, and this Event may ſerve as an uſeful Admonition, at all Times, to Men in Power, ſtill to temper their Zeal for the ruling Intereſt, with Equity and Benevolence, towards Men of Worth and Modeſty, whoſe Hap it is to differ from them in Religion and Politicks, remembering, that every Exerciſe of ſo commendable a Moderation, may lay up in Store for them ſignal good Offices, againſt the Time, when an unexpected Viciſſitude ſhall lay them at the Mercy of thoſe they have oblig'd.

I MUST now return back again to the Year 1650, to pick up ſome Things that occurr'd between that Time, and the Troubles above related, and which were deſignedly poſtpon'd, that that thoſe remarkable Events might neither interrupt, nor receive Interruption from, the orderly Courſe of the Hiſtory in Hand.

THE only remarkable Thing in this Year, hitherto untouched, is, that towards the latter End of it, Mr. Pocock began his Deſign of tranſlating Maimonides's Porta Moſis; of which more hereafter. The Year following, Mr. Abraham Wheelock, Arabick Profeſſor at Cambridge, was preparing his Edition of the Perſick Goſpels, being the firſt of the Kind, with a Latin Tranſlation and Notes; for the perfecting of which Mr. Pocock lent him a Manuſcript Copy ſo good, that Mr. Wheelock, in a Letter to him, profeſſes, that had it not been for his Fear of oppreſſing his Amanuenſis, he would, upon Sight thereof, have begun his Work again. On this Occaſion, Mr. Wheelock relates ſomething very ſurprizing. His Amanuenſis's Name was Auſtin, a Fellow of King's-College in Cambridge. 'This young Man, ſays he, in the Space 'of two Months Time, not knowing a Letter in Arabick, or Perſick, at the Beginning, ſent 'a Letter to me in Norfolk of peculiar Paſſages. So that, of his Age, I never met with the 'like; and his indefatigable Pains, and Honeſty, or Ingenuity, exceed, if poſſible, his Ca-'pacity.' But much happier had it been for himſelf, and the World, if this extraordinary Perſon had gone on more leiſurely in his Oriental Studies. For his exceſſive Application to them, ended in Diſtraction and Death, Ann. 1654, juſt as he was deſigned to go on with the Impreſſion of Mr. Wheelock's Perſick Goſpels, who lived only to ſee it carried on to the 6th or 7th Verſe of the 18th Chap. of St. Matthew.

IN the following Year, 1652, Mr. Selden, in a Letter, April 14, mentions to Mr. Pocock, that he had written to Dr. Langbaine, touching a Preparative for an Edition Arabico-Latin of Eutychius Alexandrinus, as a Thing that would be acceptable to that Part of the World, which cares for Books; adding, that whatever was neceſſary to it, he would readily defray. 'I beſeech you, continues he, adviſe with him about it, and give us your Direction and Aſ-'ſiſtance.' Mr. Selden went no further at this Time; but the 11th of the next Month, broke the Deſign wholly to him, begging him, that he would tranſlate Eutychius, and promiſing him, upon his Credit, that it ſhould be advantageous to him in ſome other Way, as that the Time would not be miſpent. Mr. Selden very much feared, that Mr. Pocock, for want of Time, and perhaps for other Reaſons, would appear diſinclin'd to the Work, and ſeems over-joy'd at the Receipt of his Letter, the 18th of the ſame Month, wherein he promiſed a Compliance. But of this alſo, more ſhall be ſaid in due Time. This Year was further famous, in the Hiſtory of Learning, for the firſt Appearance of a Deſign which did infinite Honour to our Church and Nation, as well as Service to Letters and Religion in general; I mean the Edition of the Polyglott Bible. A Work wherein, from the Beginning, ſcarce a Step was taken till communicated to Mr. Pocock, and without whoſe Aſſiſtance, it muſt have wanted much of that Perfection, which gives it a juſt Preference to every other Work of that Kind. But intending a particular Account of this noble Work, when we arrive at the Æra of its Publication, I ſhall ſpeak no more of it at preſent.

BUT fruitful as this Year was in giving Birth to learned Deſigns, and in employing learned Heads, it proved fatal to a moſt excellent Scholar, and exemplary Chriſtian, Mr. John Greaves, Mr. Pocock's moſt intimate and generous Friend. Some Time in Auguſt, he and Dr. Langbaine made a Journey to Cambridge, by way of London; which, perhaps, was the laſt Interview between him and Mr. Greaves. For in October following, he died in London. And no ſooner was Mr. Pocock returned home, but himſelf was ſeized with a Fit of Sickneſs, which, if it did not owe its Riſe to the Loſs of his Friend, was probably much increas'd thereby.

NOTHING elſe, except his Troubles before the Committee already ſpoken of, happened worthy of Notice, either to Mr. Pocock, or his Friends, till the latter End of November 1654, when the learned Mr. Selden departed this Life. Of which Event, Dr. Langbaine gave him Notice, from London, in the following Letter, dated, London, Dec. 2, 1654.

SIR,

'I came here only Time enough to ſee and ſpeak with our good Friend, Mr. Selden, who 'died on Thurſday Night, about eight o'Clock. He told me on Wedneſday (then very weak) 'in the Hearing of one of his Executors, Mr. Heywood, how he had diſpoſed of his Impreſ-'ſion of Eutychius, to you, and myſelf, (and ſo he did by a Codicil made to his Will, in June '1653,) I mentioned to him, that he had often ſpoken of intended Notes; and upon that 'he gave Order, that all Letters or Notes concerning that Author, ſhould be delivered to us. 'All other Papers of his own Hand, he had before peremptorily commanded to be burned. 'Yeſterday I had the Sight of ſo much of his Will, as concerns the Univerſity. He has 'given to our publick Library all his Manuſcripts of the Oriental Tongues, and Greek (not 'otherwiſe particularly diſpoſed of) and all his Rabbinical and Talmudical Books, which are 'not there already, or not of the ſame Editions. Theſe to be taken out of his Library by 'you and myſelf. Item, All his Marbles, Statues, Heads, and Greek Pieces, to be conveyed 'to Oxford, at the Charge of his Executors, and there placed on the Walls of the Library. 'The Executors are Juſtice Hales, Mr. Vaughan, Mr. Heywood, and Mr. Jeux; who deſire 'that you would ſpeedily repair hither, to view and ſelect what belongs to the Univerſity,

'before his Library be otherwiſe meddled with. And to that Purpoſe, I have writ to the 'Vice-chancellor and Mr. Barlow, to ſend up the moſt perfect Catalogue of the publick Li-'brary, for our Direction, and the Executors Satisfaction. To their Diſcretion he hath left 'all the Remainder of his Books, not otherwiſe particularly bequeath'd, either to be divided 'among themſelves, or to be ſent to the Univerſity, or ſome College or Colleges, as they 'ſhall think fit. In the ſame Box, with his Will, he hath left a ſhort Paper of Inſcription 'for his Monument. He is to be buried in the Temple; but when, I cannot tell, &c.' I ſhould have obſerved, that ſome Time in the Year 1654, the famous Golius, Arabick Profeſſor of Leyden, publiſhed his long expected Arabick Lexicon. He had been twice ſent into the Eaſt for his greater Improvement in that Language, and, perhaps, was the only Perſon of that Age, who equall'd Mr. Pocock in that Part of Learning. Golius himſelf confeſſed, that Mr. Pocock had, in this Reſpect, no Superior; as appears by his preſenting him with a Copy of his Lexicon, thus inſcrib'd: Virtute atque Doctrinâ eximio ac præclaro Viro, D^no^. Edv. Pocock, Literaturæ Orientalis Peritia, nulli ſecundo. In Return for which, Mr. Pocock ſent him a juſt Elogium on his Performance, and a Preſent of his Specimen Hiſt. Arab. for which, on the 1ſt of October, he received Golius's Thanks, and Commendations, to a high Degree, which probably came to his Hand much about the Time that his Sufficiency was called in Queſtion, before the Berkſhire Committee. And ſure, there was ſomething odd and whimſical in the Circumſtances and Situation of the good Man, to be one Day careſs'd by the greateſt Scholars in Europe, and ſet up as an Oracle for reſolving Difficulties in the abſtruſeſt Parts of Learning, and the next, perhaps, convened to anſwer the Articles exhibited againſt him, by his illiterate Pariſhioners of Childry, for Ignorance and Inſufficiency.

His Troubles, from this Sort of Men, being, at length, got over, he return'd again to his Studies, and in the ſame Year, 1655, he publiſhed his Porta Moſis, being ſix prefatory Diſcourſes of Moſes Maimonides, which in the Original were Arabick, but according to the general Uſage of the Jews, who have written in that Language, expreſs'd in Hebrew Characters, together with his own Latin Tranſlation of them, and a very large Appendix of Miſcellaneous Notes. It was printed at Oxford, and as his Specimen Hiſtoriæ Arabum, and a ſmall Piece of his Friend, Mr. John Greaves, were the two firſt Pieces, that came from the Arabick Preſs of that Place; ſo this Porta Moſis was the firſt Fruits of the Hebrew Preſs there, the Letters of it having been, on the Requeſt of Dr. Langbaine, founded at the Charge of the Univerſity, upon the Aſſurance he gave, that ſomething of Mr. Pocock's ſhould be ſpeedily printed with them. Maimonides was a Perſon of a vaſt Reputation for Learning, not only amongſt his own People, but the Mahometans too; and, indeed, by the beſt Judges, is held to be one, who, of all the Writers of that Sort, is leaſt guilty of Trifling: Wherefore Mr. Pocock could not but think the publiſhing theſe Tracts (wherein an Account is given, in a very clear Method, of the Hiſtory and Nature of the Talmud, and the Jewiſh Faith and Diſcipline) would be very acceptable to learned Men; eſpecially, conſidering that they had never yet been printed in the Original Arabick, but only in a Hebrew Tranſlation of them, made from imperfect Copies; whereas the Manuſcripts he now made uſe of, were very good, and ſome of them, as he imagined, the very Originals, written by the Author's own Hand. But beſides the Uſefulneſs of theſe Tracts, conſidered in themſelves, he was encouraged to the Publication of them in the Manner before mentioned, on another View; namely, that according to his Duty as a Profeſſor, he might promote the Advantage of thoſe, who ſhould addict themſelves to the Study of Arabick, and Rabbinical Learning. For there being many Jewiſh Manuſcripts of good Account, written thus in the Arab Tongue, but with Hebrew Letters; he was willing to aſſiſt them with this Specimen of that Way of Writing, which, as he declares in the Preface, contain'd much more of the Kind, than had ever yet been printed.

But of what Account ſoever theſe Tracts of Moſes Maimonides are, the Miſcellaneous Notes, which Mr. Pocock added to them, as they exceed them in Length, ſo doubtleſs they do alſo in Uſefulneſs. In which his chief Deſign is to ſhew, by many Inſtances, how much the Knowledge of Arabick, and Rabbinical Learning, will contribute towards the finding out the genuine Senſe of many difficult Places of Holy Scripture. In the four firſt Chapters of theſe Notes, he largely conſiders and explains ſeveral Texts of the New Teſtament, which, being cited from the Old, for the moſt Part, according to the Verſion of the Septuagint[r], ſeem to be very different from the Original Hebrew. And as he gives very learned Accounts of the true Meaning of them; ſo he proves, that there is no ſufficient Reaſon to conclude from thoſe ſeeming Differences, that the antient Hebrew Copies, made uſe of by the Seventy Interpreters, had, as ſome learned Men have thought, other Readings in thoſe Places, than what are ſtill extant. The Deſign of the 5th Chapter is, to prove, from the Cuſtom among the Jews, of whitening the Graves of their Dead, to prevent being polluted by them, that the Sepulchers appearing beautiful, to which our Bleſſed Saviour compares the Scribes and Phariſees, Matt. xxiii. 27. are the ſame with the Graves that appear not, to which they are alſo likened by him, Luke xi. 44. So giving a clear Senſe of thoſe two Places of Scripture, which to thoſe who do not conſider that Cuſtom, are hard to be underſtood. In the 6th Chapter, which is very very long, he gives a large Account of the ſeveral Opinions of the Jews concerning the Reſurrection of the Dead; and being mov'd thereto by the Reſemblance he had obſerv'd between theſe Opinions, and thoſe of the Followers of Mahomet, in the next Chapter he recites from the moſt learned Writers of that Sect, the Sentiments of thoſe People about the ſame Matter. In the 8th Chapter, he ſhews the Reaſon, why the modern Jews, who commonly ſo ſuperſtitiouſly adhere to the Doctrines of their Fore-fathers, do yet differ from them in their Expoſition of the ſecond Pſalm, which was generally underſtood, by their ancient Writers, to be a Prophecy concerning the Meſſiah; namely, that by theſe Means they might be the better able to anſwer the Arguments of Chriſtians. Upon this Occaſion, by the Help of two Manuſcript Copies of the Commentaries of Kimchi on the latter Prophets, he reſtores ſeveral Paſſages relating to the Chriſtians, which, in the printed Copies of that Work, are now left out. And afterwards he vindicates that Prophecy concerning the Meſſiah, at Jer. xxxi. 22. which Calvin, in his Explication of it, ſo readily gave up to the Adverſaries of Chriſtianity. Finally, his Buſineſs in the 9th and laſt Chapter is, to give an Account, from the Jewiſh Writers, of thoſe Traditions of their Elders concerning Waſhings and Vows, for which our Saviour, Mark vii. 11. reprov'd the Scribes and Phariſees; whereby he brings a great deal of Light to ſeveral obſcure Paſſages of Holy Scripture.

THE excellent Learning and Uſefulneſs of this Performance drew upon Mr. Pocock, from all Quarters, great and juſt Commendations. From abroad, Matthias Paſor, a Profeſſor at Groningen, and his firſt Arabick Maſter at Oxford, expreſſed his Thanks, and the great Pleaſure he had, in reading his learned Attempts to reconcile the Septuagint Verſion, which is confirmed by the Apoſtle, to the Hebrew Text. Alting, another Profeſſor, of the ſame Univerſity, having received Mr. Pocock's Book, as a Preſent from Dr. Reynolds, with whom he formerly liv'd in England, acknowledges, in a Letter to the Author himſelf, with whom he oft correſponded, the exquiſite Learning of this Work. At home, his old Friend, the very learned Mr. Thomas Greaves, expreſſes himſelf to be ſo delighted with his Book and learned Notes, that he knew not how to be thankful enough. Sir Kenelme Digby alſo, to whom a Copy had been preſented by the Author's Direction, writes thus to him. 'It joyeth me much to ſee, 'that one of our Nation, in theſe unquiet Times (which Condition is the greateſt Enemy to 'Learning) hath given a Piece to the World, that may be the Envy of the learnedeſt Ages 'following.'

I HAVE only to add farther concerning this Book, that the Index to the Text of Maimonides was compiled by Mr. Henry Chapman, who, in a Letter to Mr. Pocock, dated Jan. 3, 1653, offered to do the ſame for the Miſcellaneous Notes, and probably his Offer was accepted. I am ſorry, that it is not in my Power to acquaint the World with any Thing more concerning this learned Gentleman, than that his Letter was dated from Batterſey.

EARLY this Year, 1655, Mr. Pocock laboured under a ſevere Diſeaſe at Childrey, as we learn from two Letters of Dr. Langbaine's to him, the one dated in January, the other in March; and of whatever Kind it was, it ſeems to have continued upon him more or leſs, till the Middle of the Summer following; after which Dr. Walton writes to him, expreſſing his Joy for the Recovery of his Health.

THE Year following, i. e. 1656, affords but little material relating to our Subject, except it be, that then Mr. Pocock entertained ſome Thoughts of publiſhing Rabbi Tanchum's Expoſitions on the Old Teſtament. He was, as our Author himſelf informs us, in the Preface to the Commentary on Micah, an Hieroſolymitan Jew. 'He wrote Notes, continues he, 'in the Arabick Language, on the whole Old Teſtament, (as himſelf declares) tho' I have 'not had the Happineſs to ſee them on divers of the Books thereof. On the Prophets (all 'but Iſaiah) I have. When he lived, I know not; only it appears, that he was after the 'Time of Moſes Maimonides, whom he often cites, and follows in many Things.' What hindred the Execution of this Deſign, we cannot ſay; but, moſt probably, it was the Want of due Encouragement. It muſt be confeſſed, that at this Time, there were two very great Works going forward, that of the Engliſh Polyglott, already mentioned, and Bee's Edition of the Critici Sacri; ſo that there was leſs Reaſon to expect the Aſſiſtance, which ſo great a Work would require. The learned Mr. Boncle, then Fellow of Eaton-College, though deeply engaged in a great Variety of Buſineſs, generouſly offered to correct two Books after the Preſs, deſiring that Leviticus might be one of them. He further propoſed to get ſome Bookſeller in London to undertake the Printing of Rabbi Tanchum, tho' he then apprehended, that the two Works above-mentioned, neither of them as then finiſhed, would prove an Obſtruction to his Wiſhes. The Miſcarriage of this Deſign, to whatever Cauſe it was owing, was no ſmall Damage to ſacred Literature. For, if we may gueſs by the noble Uſe our Author made of Rabbi Tanchum's Commentaries, their Publication might have been attended with Advantages equal, or rather ſuperior to what have been received from any other Rabbinical Writings. Beſides, for ought that appears, Mr. Pocock was the only Perſon in Europe, that poſſeſſed any MSS. of Rabbi Tanchum. The learned Jews were ſurprized to hear of this, and many other fine Things of like Kind, in the Hands of Mr. Pocock, which were otherwiſe utterly unknown to them; as Manaſſeh Ben Iſrael himſelf profeſſed to Mr. Boncle. But notwithſtanding all this, neither then, nor at any Time after, had he an Opportunity of communicating theſe Oriental Treaſures to the learned World; but they lie in the Archives of the Bodleian Library, till better Times ſhall produce a Patron, that will give them Light and Liberty.

And now we are arrived at the Year 1657, in which the Engliſh Polyglott Edition of the Bible was ſent into the World: A Work it was of ſuch immenſe Coſt and Labour, as would have deterred moſt Men from undertaking it, in the quieteſt Times, and under the moſt proſperous Circumſtances. But, to the immortal Honour of our Engliſh Church and Nation, it was carried on and perfected at a Seaſon, when ſober Religion and ſound Learning were diſcouraged and depreſſed by the greateſt Enemy to both, a rampant Enthuſiaſm. The loyal and epiſcopal Clergy being all diſpoſſeſſed of their Preferments, or, at leaſt, having loſt the moſt profitable of them, could only contribute to this Work by their Credit, their Pains and Erudition; all which were employed therein, to a Degree that almoſt exceeds Belief.

When ſuch a Deſign was carrying on, in which Oriental Learning was to make its utmoſt Efforts, one might naturally ſuppoſe, that the Undertaker would crave the Aſſiſtance of Mr. Pocock, who, beſides his ſuperior Knowledge in the Eaſtern Languages, was able to ſupply valuable MSS. relating to moſt of the Oriental Verſions of the Bible. But our Author, ever attentive to the Intereſts of Religion and Learning, prevented all Application: For he no ſooner heard, that ſuch a Deſign was on Foot, but he offered his Advice upon it, by Dr. Aſhwel, to Dr. Brian Walton [s], who was the firſt Promoter, the chief Compiler, and the ſole Editor of the Polyglott Bible. From that Time Dr. Walton and Mr. Thorndike [t], his Second in the Work, maintained a frequent Correſpondence with Mr. Pocock, giving him a punctual Account, how it proceeded, aſking his Advice in almoſt every Step they took, and deſiring all proper Aſſiſtance from him. By Means of theſe Letters, moſt of which are ſtill extant, we are happily able to inform the World of ſome Particulars relating to that moſt noble Edition of the Bible, which might otherwiſe be loſt, or forgotten. For which Reaſon, and alſo on account of the Share our Author had in the Work, I ſhall here lay together ſuch Notices concerning it, and the learned Promoters of it, as have fallen in my Way, heartily wiſhing I could have gratified myſelf and the Reader with more Particulars about an Affair, which made the Clergy and Church of England appear glorious under their greateſt Diſtreſs.

Dr. Brian Walton, having in the long Rebellion loſt all his Preferments for his Adherence to Monarchy and Epiſcopacy, had for ſome Years ſpent Part of his Time in collecting and adjuſting proper Materials for a Polyglott Bible. And after communicating his Intentions to, and taking the Advice of moſt of the Engliſh Biſhops then living, in the Year 1652, having already [s] This moſt worthy Perſon, Brian Walton, was born in Cleiveland, Yorkſhire, A. D. 1600, was matriculated in the Univerſity of Cambridge, July 4, 1616, being then a Sizar of Magdalen-College: But removed from thence to Peter-Houſe, where he was admitted a Sizar, Dec. 4, 1618, under Mr. Blake: And in that College he commenced Bachelor of Arts, An. 1619, Maſter of Arts, An. 1623, and Doctor of Divinity, An. 1639. He was Prebendary of St. Paul's, but diſpoſſeſſed of that, and all his other Preferments, for his Loyalty and Orthodoxy. At the Reſtoration, he was made Biſhop of Cheſter; but did not long enjoy that Advancement; his exceſſive Labours having probably haſtened his End; for he died in Alderſgate-ſtreet, in the Year 1661, Nov. 29, and on the 5th of the following Month, was, with great Honours and Solemnity, buried in the Cathedral of St. Paul's, oppoſite to the Lord Hatton's Monument. The Biſhop of London performed the Funeral Service, and his Corpſe was attended by the Earls of Derby and Bridgwater, beſides ſeveral more of the Nobility, as alſo by the greateſt Number of the Biſhops in their Rochets, and by the Deans and Prebendaries of many Cathedral Churches, together with a Multitude of learned Clergymen, from Sadlers-Hall to the Place of Interment.

Beſides compiling the Polyglott Bible, and writing large and very learned Prolegomena to it, he publiſhed a Defence of it againſt Dr. Owen, and another excellent Latin Treatiſe introductory to the Reading of the Oriental Tongues.

He was alſo very well ſkill'd in the Common Law of the Realm, eſpecially ſo far as it relates to the Patrimonies and Liberties of the Church: This eminently appears from a little Book written in Defence of the Tythes within the City of London, according to the Proportion of two Shillings and nine Pence the Pound Rent.

[t] Mr. Herbert Thorndike, by ſome Expreſſions in his Will, is conceiv'd to have been a Native of Scambleſby, in the County of Lincoln: He was admitted of Trinity-College in Cambridge, and as Member of that Society, matriculated Dec. 18, 1613, where he took his Bachelor's Degree, An. 1616, and became Maſter of Arts in 1620; he was made junior Fellow of that College 1618, middle Fellow, An. 1620, and ſenior Fellow in the Year 1639; he was conſtituted likewiſe one of the Univerſity Preachers in 1631: He underwent the common Fate of thoſe Clergy, who adhered to the King and the Church in the long Rebellion, being deprived of all his Preferments. At the Reſtoration, he recovered his Fellowſhip and Prebend of Weſtminſter, between which two, he ſpent the Remainder of his Time in Retirement, Devotion and Study, and dying in good old Age, July 13, 1672, at Weſtminſter, was buried, by his own Order, in the Way from his Lodgings to the Church, without any Solemnity, ſave of the ordinary Service. He ordered theſe Words to be put upon his Grave-Stone.

> Hic jacet Corpus Herberti Thorndike, Præbendarii hujus Eccleſiæ, qui vivus veram Reformatæ Eccleſiæ Rationem ac Modum Precibuſque Studiiſque proſequebatur. Tu, Lector, Requiem ei & beatam in Chriſto Reſurrectionem precare.

In the Year 1663, a Mandate, the Original whereof is yet extant in the Archives of the Univerſity of Cambridge, dated April 14, 1663, was ſent down to that Univerſity, to confer the Degree of Doctor of Divinity on him, and Barn. Oley, A. M. which Honour, tho' freely offered, they both declined: But it was more for the Honour of Mr. Thorndike that, April 15, 1663, a Grace paſt the Houſe to this Effect.

Cum Herbertus Thorndike, S. Trin. Coll. Socius, & Weſtmonaſt. Eccleſiæ Præbendarius, ad nullos in S. Theol. Gradus de Induſtria hactenus aſpiraverit, ne Vicemagiſtri vel Decani ſuperioris onus, in prædicto Collegio, ſubire per Leges neceſſe haberet: Placeat vobis ut annum jam quintum ſupra ſexageſimum agens, Miſſionem impetret, & conceſſa in poſterum ab omni munere Academico vacatione (in quantum per Statuta fieri poſſit) quaſi Rude donatus, Locum inter Doctores in Exedris noviſſimum obtineat.

already obtained private Subſcriptions to the Value of near 4000 Pounds, he publiſhed printed Propoſals, with a Letter annexed to them, both which are here ſubjoined.

Worthy SIR,

'IT cannot be unknown to you, what great Benefit the Church of God hath reaped by 'the Care of learned Men in publiſhing the Holy Scriptures according to the beſt Copies in 'the Original, and other learned Tongues, with the moſt ancient and approved Tranſlations, 'which have been of great Authority and Uſe. And altho' among others, thoſe famous 'Editions of the Complutenſe, Antwerp, and the late Paris Bibles be juſtly had in high 'Eſteem and Veneration; yet, without any Derogation from the juſt Praiſe of the Publiſh-'ers, it may be truly ſaid, that much may be added to make the Editions more compleat and 'uſeful, by the Diligence of others, and yet the Price very much leſſened, whereby they 'may become more common, and fit for private Libraries. To this End, there is a Deſcrip-'tion of a more perfect Edition than any hitherto extant (as we conceive) drawn up with a 'Specimen thereof, which, as it hath been approved by the moſt judicious and learned Men 'of this Church, ſo, in regard the Charge will exceed the Ability of a private Purſe, it hath 'been thought fit to deſire the Aſſiſtance of ſuch noble and publick-ſpirited Perſons, as are 'able to advance Moneys towards the Printing, who may receive Copies according to the 'Sums by them expended. Wherein, as diverſe Perſons of Worth have already ſubſcribed 'and promiſed conſiderable Sums, amounting to above half the Charge; ſo it is hoped, that 'others, to whom it ſhall be offered, will be ready, both by their own Examples, according 'to their Abilities, and by ſtirring up ſuch well-affected Perſons, as they are acquainted with, 'to further a Work ſo much tending to the Glory of God, the publick Good of Religion 'and Learning, and the Honour of our Nation. To this Purpoſe alſo Propoſitions, which 'with the ſaid Deſcription, and a Form of Subſcription, are herewith ſent you; to which 'you are deſired, out of your Zeal to the publick Good, to procure what Subſcriptions 'you can. The Form you ſee is conditional, and ties no Man to the Payment of any 'Thing, till the full Sum be ſubſcribed, and Care ſhall be taken to ſecure the Copies to the 'Subſcribers, in ſuch a Way, as, by the Advice of Counſel on the Behalf of the Subſcribers, 'ſhall be thought reaſonable and juſt. There are divers employed to this End in diver's 'Parts of the Land, and ſo hopeful a Progreſs is made, that we doubt not within a few 'Months, but that there will be good Encouragement to go on, and to prepare for the 'Work; for we cannot believe any Gentleman will be backward to advance ſo noble a Work, 'conſidering, that all ſhall be put in the Hands of a Perſon of known Worth and Integrity, 'and ſhall be paid by the Subſcribers only by Degrees, as the Work goes on, and that they 'ſhall receive Copies of a greater Value than what is laid out. It is deſired, that the ſeveral 'Subſcriptions may be returned by the Firſt of April next, if it may be, or otherwiſe as ſoon 'as conveniently, to Dr. Walton, at Dr. William Fuller's Houſe, in St. Giles, Cripplegate, 'Church-Yard; to whom, you may likewiſe direct your Letters, if there ſhall be any other 'Occaſion to ſend to us: We need not ſay to thoſe, who aim at the publick Good, that the 'Work will recompence the Pains of all that ſhall promote it; of which, yet, we are very 'confident. Thus, hoping you will uſe your beſt Endeavours to advance ſo pious a Deſign, 'and that the Author of thoſe ſacred Volumes will bleſs your Pains and ours with anſwerable 'Succeſs, we commit you to his Keeping, and reſt

'TO our worthy Friend Mr. John Carter, Miniſter of God's Word in Norwich, by him 'to be communicated to Mr. Lovering and Mr. Sherman.

'PROPOSITIONS concerning the Printing of the Bible, in the Original, and other 'learned Languages.

'WHEREAS the former Editions, tho' leſs perfect, and not ſo fit for Uſe, have been 'printed at the publick Charge of Princes and great Perſons; and the Charge of this Work 'will exceed the Ability of an ordinary Perſon; whereupon divers Perſons of Worth have 'expreſſed their Readineſs to join in the Charge of the Impreſſion: And it is hoped, that 'others, who wiſh well to Learning and Religion, will aſſiſt in a Work ſo much tending to 'the publick Good, and Honour of the Church of England and of the Nation, and ſo free 'from Intereſts of all Parties; eſpecially conſidering, that as the Edition will be much better 'than any formerly made, ſo the Price will be much leſs.

'THEREFORE, for the ſecuring of all ſuch as ſhall promote ſo good a Work, either 'by free Gift, or advancing of Moneys to be repaid by Copies; and for the encouraging of 'ſuch as ſhall ſollicit and ſtir up others to contribute, theſe Propoſitions are offered, which 'ſhall, God willing, be performed.

1. 'THAT

1. 'THAT whatſoever Moneys ſhall be raiſed, ſhall be paid into the Hands of William 'Humble, Eſq; Treaſurer for this Purpoſe, who will be accountable for the Moneys received, 'and will give Receipts to every one, that ſhall pay in any Money, whereby they may be 'aſſured, that the ſame ſhall be employed no otherwiſe, than for the Uſe intended, and not 'iſſued out, but by Warrant of Perſons mentioned. The like Aſſurance ſhall be given un-'der the Hand of the Publiſher, and upon Security of the Impreſſion, which ſhall be put 'in the Hands of ſome Perſons intereſted, reſiding in London, for receiving Copies propor-'tionable to the Sums ſo paid, as ſoon as the Work ſhall be finiſhed, or otherwiſe, as the ſe-'veral Volumes ſhall be printed.

2. 'THE Treaſurer ſhall not iſſue any Moneys, but by Warrant under the Hands of the 'Lord Primate of Armagh, Dr. William Fuller, Dr. Brune Ryves, Dr. Samuel Baker, Mr. 'Richard Drake, B. D. or two of them, whereof the Lord Primate or Dr. Fuller to be 'one, and ſhall give Account every ſix Months to four Perſons appointed by thoſe that 'advance, to receive the Accounts of all Moneys received or iſſued out, which ſhall be 'ſhowed to all Perſons intereſted, who ſhall deſire the ſame.

3. 'THOSE that by free Gift, or otherwiſe, ſhall in any conſiderable Manner further the 'Work, beſides Copies to be given them, ſhall be acknowledged as Patrons or Promoters of 'ſo noble a Work.

4. 'THOSE that ſhall collect and raiſe any Sum by the free Contribution of Perſons 'well affected, ſhall, for every 10 Pounds, have one Copy; and if any leſſer Sum of 40 'Shillings, or upwards, be ſo raiſed by any at preſent, if the ſaid Sum be made up 10 'Pounds by equal Payments in four ſix Months next following, he ſhall have one perfect 'Copy, and ſo according to that Proportion, for any greater Sum.

5. 'THOSE that ſhall advance any Sum out of their own Eſtate, ſhall, for every 10 'Pounds have one Copy, and for 50 Pounds ſix Copies, and ſo for any greater Sum; and 'the Money ſo advanced ſhall, for the Eaſe and Security of the Advancer, be paid thus: 'Only a fifth Part in Hand, and the reſt in four ſix Months, and at every ſix Months Pay-'ment, Account ſhall be given of the Moneys formerly paid, and of the Progreſs of the 'Work, and then they may alſo receive ſuch Volumes, as ſhall be finiſhed, according to the 'Number of Copies due to them, if they pleaſe, they paying another fifth Part towards the 'Printing of the next Volume.

6. 'THE Perſons to be employed in preparing of Copies, correcting the Preſs, overſee-'ing the managing of the Work, &c.—till all be finiſhed, ſhall be Dr. Stokes, Mr. Whelocke, 'Mr. Thorndike, Mr. Edw. Pocock, Mr. Greaves, Mr. Vicars, Mr. Thomas Smith, together 'with Dr. Walton, and ſome other to aſſiſt in Proſecution of Buſineſs, &c.—And if any 'of them ſhall happen to dye, or be otherwiſe hindered, ſome other ſhall be nominated with 'Approbation of the reſt, for carrying on the Work, wherein the Advice of the Lord 'Primate, Mr. Selden, Dr. Sheldon, Dr. Saunderſon, Dr. Sterne, Dr. Hammond, and other 'learned Men, who have approved the Work, ſhall be deſired, &c.—

7. 'THE Work ſhall not be begun, till there be enough paid in to finiſh the firſt Volume, 'viz. the Pentateuch, viz. about 1500 Pounds; nor the other Volumes, till a proportionable 'Sum for each be brought in, viz. about 1200 Pounds.

8. 'IT is deſired, that the firſt Payment of Moneys to be advanced, may be at or before 'the firſt of Feb. 1652, and if it ſhall appear, that there is enough to print the firſt Volume, 'viz. the Pentateuch, the Work ſhall be begun, as ſoon as Things needful ſhall be prepared, 'which is hoped will be within 3 Months then next following, and within 3 Years after it is 'hoped the whole Work will be perfected, (two Preſſes being kept at Work.)

9. 'WHATEVER ſhall be further reaſonably deviſed or propounded for the better ma-'naging and carrying on of the Work, and ſecuring of all Perſons intereſted, ſhall be will-'ingly aſſented to.

MR. Pocock had heard ſomething of this noble Undertaking early in this Year, and probably had written to Mr. Selden for Information about the Nature of it, and the Hands that would be employed in it: Whether he then offered his Aſſiſtance, if Need were, I cannot certainly learn, but think it not improbable, that he did; for in a Letter from Mr. Selden to our Author, which bears Date in February 165$\frac{1}{2}$, he writes thus: 'It ſeems not yet, that 'there is any ſuch naming of Men for that Employment; divers are, in Diſcourſe, talked 'of; and there be, I doubt, but a few fit: How to have it proceed without you, I know 'not; but I know too, that it muſt be a great Diverſion to your excellent Studies, and a 'turning them to an illiberal Attendance. Whatſoever you wiſh in it, I ſhall, as far as I 'have Opportunity, ſecond.' Mr. Selden ſeems to have apprehended, that the Editor of this great Work would call for Mr. Pocock's Help in correcting the Arabick, as it came from the Preſs: Nor was he miſtaken. For on the 28th of the following July, Dr. Walton writes to him, deſiring to know, 'Whether his Occaſions would permit him to aſſiſt, if the Impreſ-'ſion went on, either by correcting the Arabick, the Proofs being weekly tranſmitted, or

'by comparing of Copies, or otherwiſe.' But Mr. Pocock had too much Work upon his Hands to undertake the Correction of the Arabick from the Preſs. He had, at Mr. Selden's moſt earneſt Sollicitation, already begun to tranſlate the Arabick Annals of Eutychius into Latin. Beſides which, he was buſy with Maimonides's Porta Moſis, and conſequently had but little Time to ſpare for a new and laborious Employment. He conſented, however, to collate the Arabick Pentateuch, with two Copies of Saadias's Tranſlation, the one a Manuſcript, the other printed in the Conſtantinopolitan Bibles, noting the Differences of each. And he alſo drew up a Preface concerning the Arabick Verſions of that Part of the Bible, and the Reaſon of the various Readings in them; which Preface, together with the various Readings themſelves, are publiſhed in the Appendix to the Polyglott Bible.

It ſeems, from Dr. Walton's Letter abovementioned, that Mr. Pocock's Advice related to every Part of this Deſign, not excepting the Apparatus or Prolegomena, and the Appendix, all which Conſiderations the Doctor aſſures him he had weighed, and ſhould, to his Power, follow. The particular Directions are but few of them come to our Knowledge: I find, however, that he had informed Dr. Walton about one very neceſſary Point, viz. the Antiquity and Authority of the Arabick Verſion, as it ſtands in Michael de Jay's Heptaglott, or Paris Edition of the Bible in ſeven Languages. 'He conceived, as he tells Mr. Pocock, 'that the Editor of this Work had followed that Arabick Verſion, which the French Em-'baſſador brought out of the Eaſt, which Scionita and Eſronita were then tranſlating into 'Latin, and which Erpenius ſays, is elegans & antiqua; but Mr. Pocock convinced him, 'that the Arabick, in Jay's Edition, was no other than the Verſion of Saadias, which is 'printed in the Conſtantinopolitan Bible.'

The Doctor deſired further, to know what Copies, or ancient Manuſcripts of Oriental Verſions, were in the publick Library at Oxford, or in Mr. Pocock's own private Collection: What the former produced, I know not; but from the latter came a very good Supply: As, firſt, the Goſpels in Perſian, which had never before been printed, were now publiſhed wholly from a Copy that was ſent in by him, being a Manuſcript above 300 Years old, of a Tranſlation made from the Syriack, and therefore preferr'd to Mr. Wheelocke's, which was of later Date, and only a Verſion from the Greek: Of this, that learned Gentleman was ſo ſenſible, while he was preparing his Edition of the Perſian Goſpels, that, upon the Lent of Mr. Pocock's Copy, he declared in a Letter to him, that had it not been for his Fear of oppreſſing his Amanuenſis, he would, upon Sight thereof, have begun his Work again.

2*dly*, His Syriack Manuſcript of the whole Old Teſtament, and two other Manuſcripts of the Pſalms in the ſame Language; the Supply of this was the moſt ſeaſonable, becauſe one of Primate Uſher's Syriack Copies of the Pentateuch was in the Hands of Dr. Boote, then in France; who, ſoon after the Beginning of this Work, died there: So that if ever this Manuſcript was recovered, it came too late for the Service of the Polyglott Edition. And tho' the Lord Primate's other Copy is declared by Mr. Thorndike to be more truſty than Mr. Pocock's, yet he owns it was ſometimes to be helped thereby: And with reſpect to that Part which correſponds with the ſecond Tome, Dr. Walton profeſſes, that they found his Copy to be more exactly written, than my Lord Primate's, and therefore more uſeful.

3*dly*, An Æthiopick Manuſcript of the Pſalter, which Dr. Walton pronounces to be ſo exactly written, that they made it a Rule whereby to correct the Faults of the two printed Copies.

But to return to Dr. Walton's firſt Letter to our Author upon this Subject. He acquaints him, that 'the Council of State, before whom, ſome having Relation to them, 'brought this Buſineſs, hoping they would have born the Charge out of the Publick, have 'lately given their Approbation and Recommendation of the Work, with Hopes of ad-'vancing 1000 Pounds to begin the Work; which, if they do, (adds he) I hope to get the 'reſt advanced by private Hands, who will take Satisfaction in Copies.' That the Council of State advanced the Sum here mentioned, or any Part thereof, I much queſtion; becauſe I find no more Mention of it in Dr. Walton's Letters, and chiefly becauſe not the leaſt Notice is taken by him of any pecuniary Gift, in his Preface to the Polyglott Bible. It muſt, however, be confeſſed, to the Honour of that uſurping Government, that they granted an Exemption from Duty to all the Paper, which was imported for the Uſe of that Edition. This Favour is owned by Dr. Walton in the Preface afore-mentioned, where, among other Benefactors to the Work, they are mentioned, Quorum Favore Chartam à Vectigalibus immunem habuimus. But that this high Piece of Service to Religion and Learning was the Act of the grand Uſurper, Cromwell himſelf, I come to the Knowledge of, thro' the Goodneſs of a [u] Reverend and Learned Gentleman, who imparted to me a Copy of Dr. Caſtle's Petition to the Protector for the like Indulgence to the Publication of his Heptaglott Lexicon; the Matter of which Petition, after a Preamble ſetting forth the Uſefulneſs of that Lexicon, and in particular its Subſerviency to the better Underſtanding of the Polyglott Bible, is as follows.

[u] Mr. Baker, of St. John's College in Cambridge, who likewiſe was pleas'd to impart to me the Memoirs I have given of the Cambridge Writers, that were eminently concerned in the Polyglott Edition of the Bible.

'MAY it pleaſe your Highneſs, for the Countenance and Encouragement of your Petitioners, that they may the better be enabled to accompliſh the Undertaking, according to Expectation, to vouchſafe them the like Favour and Privilege, that your Highneſs hath formerly granted to the Publiſhers of that famous Work, (viz. the Polyglott Bible) and others, who were printing ſome Commentaries in relation thereunto, (viz. Bee's Critici Majores) that your Petitioners may have the Import of five Thouſand Reams of Royal Paper, Exciſe and Cuſtom free.'

WHO or what induced Cromwell to ſhew ſo much Munificence, we know not, but ſurely the Act was good and laudable; eſpecially, conſidering that the Deſign thus encouraged, was conducted by a Set of Epiſcopal Divines, moſt of whom were known Enemies to his Adminiſtration, and the reſt rather paſſive under the Uſurpation, than Approvers of it. It may be too invidious to enquire, how it comes to paſs, that this commendable Example has been ſo ſeldom followed by ſucceeding Governments, that were legal, and in other Reſpects gracious. But great Men in general are very apt to forget, that their Power extends no farther than their own Times, and that the Sons of Art are the Men, who muſt ſhow them to Poſterity. What, therefore, our Saviour ſaid of Charity to Prophets, may, with proper Alterations, be applied to every Encourager of Learning. A Patron of Scholars ſhall have a Scholar's Reward; Juſtice and Gratitude will oblige them to tranſmit to Futurity, ſuch ſignal Benefactions, with all due Advantage, tho' the Authors of them were otherwiſe the vileſt of Men.

BESIDES this Favour from the Protector, large private Promiſes, and Subſcriptions of Money, were made early in this Year, 1653, towards the Work. When the Propoſals were ſent abroad, viz. March 1, $165\frac{2}{3}$, 4000 Pounds are affirmed to have been ſubſcribed, which Sum was more than doubled in about two Months Time: For in a Letter from Mr. Thomas Greaves, dated the 4th of May following, he acquaints Mr. Pocock, 'that Dr. Walton had 'aſſured him, that 9000 Pounds had then been promiſed, and that much more was likely to be 'added, and that he hoped within three Months to begin the Printing thereof.' But it was the latter End of September, if not the Beginning of October, before the Impreſſion of the firſt Tome, containing the Pentateuch, was entered upon: One Reaſon of this Delay was, that the Arabick Letters were not ready, and the Hebrew Types were mending; ſome Defects having been obſerved therein by Mr. Pocock; beſides which, many of the Subſcribers failed the Editor, neither advancing their firſt Payment, nor one Farthing afterwards; and he was too circumſpect to begin till 1500 Pounds were paid in, to defray the Charges of the firſt Tome, according to the 7th Article of the Propoſals. After which the Undertakers proceeded chearfully with the Work.

THE firſt Diſcouragement they met with, was the Death of Mr. Abraham Wheelocke [x], the firſt Profeſſor of the Arabick and Saxon Tongues in the Univerſity of Cambridge, which happened juſt before the firſt Tome was committed to the Preſs; ſo that they had not the leaſt Uſe of him in that Work; his Province was, jointly with Mr. Caſtle [y], to correct the Syriack and Arabick at the Preſs; but his Room was filled by Mr. Hyde, at the Recommendation of Mr. Pocock, who was deſired by Dr. Walton to procure a fit Perſon for that Work.

BY

[x] Abraham Wheelocke was born at Loppington, in Shropſhire, (of which County likewiſe was his Patron and Founder, Sir Thomas Adams) and admitted of Trinity-College in Cambridge: There he became Bachelor of Arts, An. 1614; Maſter of Arts, An. 1618, and was admitted Fellow of Clare-Hall the Year following; he was made one of the Univerſity Preachers, An. 1623, and commenced Bachelor of Divinity in the Year 1625; he was Miniſter of St. Sepulchre's Church in Cambridge from the Year 1622 to the Year 1642.

About the ſame Time, (viz. 1622) he read the Arabick Lecture for Mr. (afterwards Sir Thomas) Adams, tho' it was not then ſettled; he receiving for the ſame 40 Pounds per Annum, remitted to him by quarterly Payments.

He read alſo the Saxon Lecture for Sir Henry Spelman, for which he received an annual Stipend, not ſettled, but voluntary; together with this, he gave Mr. Wheelocke the Vicarage of Middleton, in Norfolk, worth 50 Pounds per Annum, which was intended to be augmented out of the appropriate Parſonage, and to be the Ground of his intended Foundation, if Sir Henry's Death, which happened October 1, 1641, had not prevented it.

Multiplicity of Buſineſs probably ſhortened this learned Man's Days; for he died at London, whilſt he was printing his Perſian Goſpels, in the Month of September 1653. I need only add, that after Sir Henry Spelman's Death, his Son, and upon his Death, his Grandſon, continued to pay the Stipend of 20 Pounds per Annum for reading the Saxon Lecture at Cambridge, ſo long as Mr. Wheelocke lived.

[y] Edmund Caſtle, or Caſtell, was born at Eaſt-Hatley, in the County of Cambridge, being a younger Son of Robert Caſtell, of Eaſt-Hatley, Eſq; He was matriculated a Penſioner (of Emmanuel-College, Cambridge) July 5, 1621; became Art. Bac. of the ſame College, 1624; Art. Mag. 1628; Theol. Bac. 1635, and S. T. P. by the King's Letters, An. 1660.

According to Mr. Newcourt, he was Vicar of Hatfield-Peverell, in Eſſex, which he reſigned, An. 1638, and Rector of Wodeham-Walter, in the ſame County, which he alſo reſigned, An. 1670, and was made Prebendary of Canterbury, An. 1667, by the King, to whom, two Years after, he dedicated his great Work, viz. Lexicon Heptaglotton, and ſays of himſelf in his Epiſtle Dedicatory: Mihi vero in Molendino hoc per tot annorum luſtra indefinenter occupato, dies ille tanquam feſtus & otioſus viſus eſt, in quo tam Bibliis Polyglottis, quam Lexicis hiſce promovendis, ſexdecim aut octodecim horas dietim non inſudavi. An Account almoſt incredible, had it not come from a Man of great Veracity, as well as Modeſty. He farther aſſures that Prince, that in the Work then preſented to him, he had entirely ſpent both a competent patrimonial Fortune, and all that he had been able to acquire himſelf, who was then in the 63d Year of his Age.

Together

By the 30th of October this Year, Mr. Pocock ſent back to Dr. Walton, the firſt Sheet of the Pentateuch, with his own various Readings upon it, of which the Doctor owns the Receipt in a Letter, dated the firſt of the following December, and acknowledges them to be very uſeful. In the Cloſe of the ſame Letter, he adds, 'I have ſome Hopes from a Friend 'at Rome, to get the Armenian Bible, and the Coptick Pentateuch and New Teſtament, which 'are in the Vatican, tranſcribed; which, if it can be had in any reaſonable Time, may be 'added to theſe we have, and may make the laſt Tome.' That theſe Pieces did not come in Time, is certain, becauſe they are not extant in the preſent Polyglott; and whether they ever came at all, I have not been able to learn.

About this Time, Mr. Pocock wrote to Dr. Walton and Mr. Thorndike, or both, upon two Points of Importance, relating to the Edition in Hand: The firſt was, a Propoſal to have his own Copy of the Syriack Goſpels, of another Tranſlation, printed together with that of the Paris Edition; the other concerned the Latin of the Arabick Verſion, its Uncorrectneſs, and a Motion to have it mended. In anſwer to the former of theſe, Dr. Walton replies, Feb. 22, 165$\frac{3}{4}$, 'Your Syriack Goſpels may be of Uſe for the various Readings, eſpe-'cially in the moſt material Places; but my Lord Primate thinks it not neceſſary to print 'both the Tranſlations at large: If they be of any Antiquity, of which none can better 'judge than yourſelf, they will be the more acceptable: If the Difference from the other 'Tranſlation be not great, they may be printed at the End of every Column, as we have 'done with Tecla's and the Roman Septuagint.' The Truth of the Caſe was, that two Syriack Tranſlations of the Goſpels would have increaſed the Expence of the Work, which, without any Addition to the firſt Deſign, was like to fall very heavy; and this Mr. Thorndike, in Effect, ſays in a Letter to Mr. Pocock, dated only two Days after Dr. Walton's; 'I have conferred, (ſays he) with my Lord Primate and Dr. Walton about your Motion of 'the other Syriack in the Goſpels, as, perhaps, Dr. Walton may write to you about it here-'after, upon Conſideration of the Charge which lies upon him, and makes a Difference in 'the Buſineſs.' Notwithſtanding all which, Dr. Walton, two Years after, offered, that if Mr. Pocock's Syriack Goſpels ſhould, in his own Judgment, be fit to be tranſlated, and joined with the other Tranſlation, he would publiſh it with the reſt in the New Teſtament; but, after the Intimation above given by Mr. Thorndike, our Author had too much Candour and Modeſty to preſs the Matter any further. And thus it fell out, that no Manner of Uſe was made of Mr. Pocock's Syriack Goſpels in the Polyglott, they not having been ſo much as collated for various Readings. The other Motion for mending the Latin of the Arabick Verſion was certainly of much more Importance, and a Propoſal truly worthy of Mr. Pocock's ſound Judgment and good Senſe. For the Latin of an Arabick Verſion could be of no Service, but to ſuch as were ignorant of that copious Language, and ſo long as it was incorrect, muſt often greatly deceive them; and accordingly in Fact, if we may believe Pere Simon [z], the Latin of the Arabick and other Eaſtern Verſions led Mr. Pool, in his Synopſis, into frequent and grievous Miſtakes. To this laſt Propoſal, only Mr. Thorndike made a Reply, which inclines me to think, that Mr. Pocock mentioned it only to Mr. Thorndike, who ſeems never to have imparted it to Dr. Walton, for Reaſons, which I think evidently appear in his Letter to Mr. Pocock on this Subject, in which he ſays:

'As to the Latin of the Arabick, I conceive the like might be ſaid of the Syriack; but 'I do not hear you adviſe, that any Thing be done to rectify it; that is a Work that would 'be profitable, but troubleſome; and I know not how plauſible in another Man's Work: 'And truly I am of Advice, that the Buſineſs of this Work is, rather to ſettle the Origi-'nals, reſting contented with giving the Tranſlations anciently printed; it would be too much 'to undertake to do that, for all, which were fit to be done, in Time.'

True it is, that the Motion was made too late; otherwiſe the complying with it would have been highly ſerviceable to the World; particularly, had the Latin of the Oriental Verſions of the New Teſtament been exact and literal, it would let us into the Reading of thoſe ancient Copies, from which thoſe Verſions were made, of which, by Reaſon of its preſent Laxneſs and Inaccuracy, no certain Judgment can be formed, but by ſuch as competently underſtand the Originals. The ſame Advantage would have ariſen from a true and ſervile Latin Verſion of ſuch Eaſtern Tranſlations of the Old Teſtament, as were made from the Septuagint, towards aſcertaining the ancient Readings of it: But ſuch is the Infelicity of all human Counſels and Undertakings, that thoſe which ſeem neareſt to Perfection, appear ſtill capable

Together with the Prebend, the King gave him a Diſpenſation of Abſence, in order to attend his Arabick Lecture at Cambridge; where he became the firſt ſettled Arabick Lecturer, by an Inſtrument under the Hand of Sir Tho. Adams, the Founder, dated June 20, 1666, after a 13 Years Vacancy of that Lecture, which, during Mr. Wheelocke's Life, had been voluntary only. His Lectures were heard at firſt with great Applauſe, but, in a few Years, were ſo much neglected, that, being then eaſy, and diſpoſed to be pleaſant, he put up this Affix upon the School-Gates; Arabicæ Linguæ Prælector cras ibit in Deſertum. During this Period he was a Member of St. John's-College, being admitted there October 27, 1671.

He died at Higham-Gobyon, in Bedfordſhire, An. 1685, whereof he was then Rector, where he lies buried, with a modeſt Epitaph.

capable of Improvement, and no ſooner is one Defect ſupplied, but others immediately diſcover themſelves.

In the Year 1654, Dr. Walton acquaints Mr. Pocock, that after the Text of the Pentateuch ſhould be printed off, which, he ſuppoſes, would be about Bartholomew-Tide, they had ſome Thoughts (if all Things could be got ready in Time) of printing the New Teſtament next, 'both becauſe it is the principal Part, and would give Satisfaction to the moſt: So, adds 'he, Erpenius did with his Arabick, and ſo I perceive they did by the Pariſian; that ſo, if any 'Thing ſhould intervene, the chief Parts of the Bible might be firſt done. He concludes: 'By your next, I pray you let me have your Opinion.' What Mr. Pocock's Judgment was, concerning this Point, no where appears; but ſoon after Dr. Walton ſaw Cauſe to alter his Purpoſe, as he afterwards writes to our Author. 'I find, ſays he, tho' much deſired by 'many, this is ſo much diſtaſted by Mr. Selden, and ſome others, whoſe Judgments I value, 'that, I think, we ſhall go on now with the other Books in Order, and the rather, be-'cauſe I find I ſhall hardly get all Things ready for the New Teſtament in ſo ſhort a 'Time.'

And now they were preparing for the ſecond Tome of the Polyglott Bible, which contains the Hiſtorical Books; at which Time, Dr. Walton was put upon a fruitleſs Inquiry after the Chaldee Paraphraſe upon the Chronicles, which Ravius affirmed he had ſeen in the Bodleian Library at Oxford; but he was ſoon convinced, that Ravius was miſtaken, there being no ſuch Targum at Oxford, 'nor, adds he, in Cambridge, tho' ſome of Erpenius's Books be 'there.' However, it appeared afterwards, that they were both in an Error, as to this Targum on the Chronicles; Ravius, in affirming he had ſeen it at Oxford, and Dr. Walton, in ſuppoſing it was not at Cambridge, where Mr. Samuel Clarke afterwards found, and tranſcribed it; of which more in its proper Place. In October this Year, the firſt Tome was finiſhed, maugre the malicious Surmiſes of ſome envious and diſaffected Perſons, of whom Dr. Walton complains. It ſeems, the Zealots of thoſe Days, not contented with getting into the warm Places of the ejected Clergy, envied them, even while they were ſtarving in the Cauſe of Religion and Loyalty: They had effectually excluded them from ſerving God, and promoting his Holy Truths, as Churchmen, and they were uneaſy at their glorious Efforts to do this, as Scholars.

In July, 1655, they entered on the third Volume of the Bible, which contained the Writings of David, Solomon, and the Prophets, and finiſhed the ſecond Tome before the End of that Month; from which Time, we are unable to give a particular Detail of the Progreſs of this great Work, or to ſay any more, than that it was entirely finiſhed towards the Cloſe of the Year 1657, and that on the 12th of May 1658, Dr. Walton ſent Mr. Pocock the remaining Parts of the Polyglott Bible, which he had not before preſented him withal, as alſo thoſe Manuſcripts and Books, which he had lent them, except the Æthiopick Pſalter, which Mr. Caſtle deſired either to buy, or borrow.

And thus, in about four Years, was finiſhed the Engliſh Polyglott Bible, the Glory of that Age, and of the Engliſh Church and Nation, a Work vaſtly exceeding all former Attempts of that Kind, and that came ſo near Perfection, as to diſcourage all future ones. One would therefore think, that, at home at leaſt, it ſhould have been well entertained by all, that had any Regard for Religion and Learning; and yet, no ſooner was it publiſhed, than ſome principal Men among the prevailing Party were very much offended at it; fearing, perhaps, the Indignation of Foreigners againſt them, for having, with little Merit, and againſt all Law and Title, taken the Places of ſuch Prodigies for Learning and Induſtry, as Dr. Walton, Mr. Pocock, and Mr. Thorndike, &c.

Amongst theſe was Dr. Owen, who, the next Year, together with a Latin Tract againſt the Quakers, I know not by what Rules of Congruity, was pleaſed to publiſh one in Engliſh againſt the Polyglott Bible: Many Things injurious to the Reformation, and even to Chriſtianity itſelf, he pretended to diſcover in it, eſpecially in the Prolegomena and Appendix; and, accordingly, made no ſmall Outcry againſt it: But how far Envy engaged him to meddle with Things above his Knowledge, how frequently he contradicted himſelf, and really fell into thoſe Crimes, which he only fancied others to be guilty of; and particularly, how he miſrepreſented and miſapplied ſome Things aſſerted by Mr. Pocock, in his Preface to the Arabick various Readings before-mentioned, was, in a ſhort Time, unanſwerably ſhewn by Dr. Walton, in a Diſcourſe he publiſhed for that Purpoſe [a]. Indeed, it is not eaſy to conceive, how ſad the Caſe was of the true Sons of the Church of England in thoſe Times. As a great Variety of Means were made uſe of to oppreſs and ruin them, ſo they were treated with all Kinds of Calumny and Reviling; yea, thoſe very Performances, which were of the greateſt Service to the Church of God, and will be Monuments of their Piety and Zeal for Divine Truth, as long as the World ſhall laſt, their unreaſonable Perſecutors were not aſhamed to charge with a Deſign to promote Atheiſm or Popery. A much later and more learned Perſon has cenſured Mr. Pocock, for ſomething in his Preface to the Arabick various Readings, ſo oft mentioned, viz. Abbe Renaudot: He (Hiſt. Patriarch. Alexandr. p. 77, & ſequ.) charges Abulfeda with Ingnorance, in not knowing that the Old Teſtament had been tranſlated lated into Arabick [in his Time] which, adds he, deceived the learned Pocock, when he grounded his Conjecture, as to the Antiquity of the Arabick Verſion, on his Teſtimony. But that learned Perſon appears herein to have committed a double Miſtake: For, firſt, Abulfeda, in the Place referred to by Renaudot, ſays nothing of the Antiquity of the Arabick Verſion, but only that the Verſion into that Language had not then been written in Arabick Characters. 2dly, Even in this Mr. Pocock does not follow Abulfeda, declaring, in that very Preface, that he would not raſhly affirm, what the other did, that the ſaid Verſion was at that Time firſt put into a Saracenick Dreſs, ſince Aben Ezra aſſerts of Saadias himſelf, that he turned the Law into the Iſmaelitick Tongue and Character. But this Saadias died above 300 Years before the Time of Abulfeda [b].

THE Pleaſure Mr. Pocock received from ſeeing ſo uſeful a Work, and in which himſelf had ſo great a Share, brought to a happy Concluſion, was ſadly abated towards the End of the ſame Year, by the Death of Dr. Gerard Langbaine, the very learned and ingenious Provoſt of Queen's-College in Oxford. Our Author, in very moving Terms, laments this Loſs to himſelf and the Publick, writing thus to Ludovicus Forgius, Doctor of Phyſick at Saumur. Oxonium triſti admodum nuntio ad Funus Amici (vel ſi quod ſanctius Nomen eſt) chariſſimi Gerardi Langbanii, magni Academiæ noſtræ Luminis & in quo Res Literaria irreparabilem paſſa eſt Jacturam, Rure evocatus, literas a te ——— accepi. Indeed, the Loſs Mr. Pocock ſuſtained, by the Death of this excellent Man, was very great: For, by his Prudence, Activity, and Intereſt, he had been ſupported and encouraged throughout thoſe difficult Times, which, without ſuch Aſſiſtance, muſt have overwhelmed a Man ſo little practiſed in the Affairs of the World, as our Author. And as he greatly needed ſuch Friends, ſo the good Providence of God ſtill ſupplied him with them, from Time to Time, till the Reſtoration brought Peace and Settlement, and ordinary Prudence was ſufficient to ſecure an honeſt Man from Violence and Vexation. The Polyglott was ſcarce finiſhed, before two other Projects appeared, that were Grafts upon that noble Undertaking, and carried on by ſome learned Aſſiſtants to it. The firſt was, an additional or ſeventh Tome of the Polyglott Bible, containing many Pieces not taken into the former ſix; among which was, Mr. Pocock's Syriack Goſpels, of a different Tranſlation, from that followed by Dr. Walton: This was finiſhed, but, for what Reaſon I know not, never publiſhed, and is, by the Oxford Hiſtorian, reckoned among Mr. Samuel Clark's Works, with this Title, Septimum Bibliorum Polyglottων Volumen, cum Verſionibus antiquiſſimis, non Chaldaicâ tantum, ſed Syriacis, Æthiopicis, Copticis, Arabicis, Perſicis contextum. The other was a Lexicon to the Oriental Languages of the Polyglott Edition, known by the Name of the Heptaglott Lexicon, carried on chiefly by the very learned and indefatigable Dr. Caſtel, and publiſhed by him ſeveral Years after. In both theſe learned Deſigns Mr. Pocock's Aſſiſtance was deſired, and readily granted.

IT has been already obſerved, Page 35, that, in the Year 1652, Mr. Pocock, at the Importunity of Mr. Selden, began the Tranſlation of a large hiſtorical Diſcourſe, viz. the Annals of Eutychius, Melchite Patriarch of Alexandria, out of Arabick into Latin, which Tranſlation was publiſhed, together with the Original, in two Volumes, at Oxford, in the Year 1658. And tho' this had been conſidered by learned Men abroad, as a very uſeful Work, and as ſuch, was recommended to Erpenius, by Iſaac Cauſabon [c], with all imaginable Earneſtneſs; yet, Mr. Pocock declares in the Preface, that it was not undertaken by him from his own Inclination; but upon the Perſuaſion and Importunity of Mr. Selden. Doubtleſs, he did in no Sort affect that Cauſe, for the Sake of which Mr. Selden was ſo fond of Eutychius, and therefore was unwilling to give any ſeeming Ground for being thought a Partner in it. That learned Man, having been cenſured by the High Commiſſion for ſome offenſive Paſſages in his Hiſtory of Tithes, became not a little diſpleaſed with ſome Biſhops of the Church of England: And tho' afterwards, for ſeveral Years, he met with a great deal of Reſpect from them, on account of his very great Learning, yet the Reſentment of that former Uſage lay deep in his Mind, and was at length ſufficiently diſcovered by him, as he found an Opportunity for it. For in the Year 1642, to bear down Epiſcopacy, which was then ſinking in this Nation, he publiſhed, what he would have to be thought, a mighty Argument againſt it; namely, the Account which this Eutychius gives of the Church of Alexandria, during the three firſt Centuries: But tho' Mr. Selden, in a large Preface to that Paragraph of Eutychius, and a larger Commentary upon it, did all he could to make it ſerve his Deſign, it hath been fully proved to be in no Sort ſufficient for it. Abraham Echellenſis, a learned Maronite, in a Book for this Purpoſe, publiſhed ſome Time after at Rome [d], ſhewed, among other Things, that Mr. Selden was no fair Tranſlator of Eutychius's Arabick, and appealed to Mr. Pocock and Mr. John Greaves for the Truth of what he aſſerted: But, ſuppoſing the Tranſlation juſt; that the whole Paſſage is a perfect Fable, hath been abundantly made out by ſeveral learned Men [e]. It was no wonder therefore, that a Man of Mr. Pocock's Temper and Principles ſhould need the moſt importunate Perſuaſions to tranſlate and publiſh a Book, which Mr. Selden had made ſuch Uſe of: However, by performing that Work, he hath been very far from doing any Diſſervice to the Cauſe of Epiſcopacy: For, as he hath put that Paragraph in a truer Light [f]; ſo, by his Latin Verſion of the whole Book, he has enabled thoſe, who before could be no Judges of the Matter, fully to perceive, how little Credit is due to an Author, who, as Mr. Pocock declares in the Preface to him [g], has many fabulous Things relating to ancient Hiſtory, and gives us abſurd Accounts of the Tranſactions in the Weſtern Parts of the World, as our Writers commonly do in thoſe of the Eaſtern. Mr. Selden, indeed, ſpeaks very magnificently of this Arabian; he eſteems him, he ſays, as an Egyptian Bede, [h] and makes no Doubt at all, but that his Annals were for the moſt Part taken out of the Archives of the Church of Alexandria: But that learned Man did not conſider what another Arabian Writer [i] (whoſe Hiſtory Mr. Pocock afterward tranſlated and publiſhed) hath made manifeſt, namely, that in the tenth Age, wherein Eutychius lived, there were no Archives of that Church; for when that City was taken by the Saracens, many Years before in the Reign of Sultan Omar, his General, Amrus Ebnol As, by a particular Order from his Maſter, commanded all the Books and Writings in it to be ſent to the Baths, as Fuel for heating them, where they were all conſumed. Indeed, he that hath read theſe Annals of Eutychius, cannot but be fully ſenſible, how ignorant he was of the Antiquities of his own Church. No-body was more famous within the Time, which the Paragraph publiſhed by Mr. Selden relates to, than Origen: Now this Man, who lived in the former Part of the third Century, Eutychius thruſts down to the Middle of the ſixth, makes a Biſhop of him, and brings him to the Council of Conſtantinople, called by the Emperor Juſtinian, to be there condemned [k]. Of what Uſe, therefore, ſoever theſe Annals may be, either in ſome chronological Points [l], about which other Writers are ſilent or defective, or in the hiſtorical Account he gives of the Perſians, and other Oriental Nations, it is certain, his bare Authority cannot be ſufficient in any Matter to overthrow the general Conſent of the Greek and Latin Fathers, and Church Hiſtorians.

THIS Edition of Eutychius was carried on at the ſole Charge of Mr. Selden, as appears by ſeveral Letters ſent to him by Dr. Langbaine, in one of which the Doctor, upon Mr. Pocock's diſliking one of the Characters of the Arabick Font at Oxford, deſiring him to procure, at London, a new Punchion and Matrice, with five or ſix Pounds of Letter, thus pleaſantly addreſſed him in the Words of the Frier in Chaucer, who begged Money for compleating their Cloyſter,

Now help Thomas, for him that harrow'd Hell,
Or elſe mote we all our Books ſell.

But what puts it more out of Diſpute, that the Impreſſion of Eutychius was entirely made at Mr. Selden's Expence, is, that, by a Codicil made to his Will the Year before his Death, he bequeathed it as his ſole Property to Dr. Langbaine and Mr. Pocock.

IN Juſtice, therefore, to Mr. Selden's Memory, who died three or four Years before this Book was publiſhed, his Picture was put before it, and the following Words, on Dr. Langbaine's Requeſt, were added in the Title Page, Illuſtriſſ. Joanne Seldeno τῷ μακαρίτῃ Chorago: And tho' nothing more was meant by them, than that Mr. Selden was at the Expence of this chargeable Work, the Choragus in the Play being, as a very learned Man [m] hath obſerved on this Occaſion, the Perſon who was at the Charges of exhibiting the Scenes [n]; yet it hath given ſome Ground to ſeveral Perſons (and particularly to the Compiler of the Catalogue of printed Books in the Bodleian Library publiſhed in the Year 1674) to imagine, that Mr. Selden began this Tranſlation, and that Mr. Pocock only finiſhed it; whereas, the former never tranſlated any other Part of Eutychius, than that ſhort Paragraph already mentioned, which he publiſhed many Years before, and which Mr. Pocock hath corrected. To this Miſtake concerning the Tranſlation, it may not be improper to add another about the Author himſelf: His Name, at firſt, was Said Ibn Batrick, which, when he was made Patriarch, he changed into that of Eutychius, as expreſſive in the Greek Language of what he was called in Arabick [o]: And this Greek Name, I believe, was that which gave Occaſion to Dr. Heylyn, in his Life of Archbiſhop Laud, to mention this Eutychius, as a Greek Writer [p]. The Doctor is followed in this Error by Mr. Ant. Wood, in the Account he gives of Mr. Selden's Life, where he alſo falls into ſome others; for, in the Catalogue of Mr. Selden's Works, having NOTHING elſe, particularly relating to our Author, occurs to us, till March $16\frac{59}{60}$, when, the ſecluded Members of the Houſe of Commons being reſtored to their Seats in Parliament, had appointed a Committee to conſider of Dr. Reynolds (afterwards Biſhop of Norwich) his Reſtitution to the Deanery of Chriſt-Church, from whence he was removed, for not taking the Ingagement; Dr. Wallis, the ever-memorable Savilian Profeſſor at Oxford, hearing this, and that Dr. Mills's Caſe removed from a Canonry in that Church on the ſame Account, lay alſo before the ſame Committee, and thinking Mr. Pocock's Caſe, who loſt his Canonry on the like Score, fairer than either of theirs was, recommended it to Major Fincher, probably a Member of that Parliament. This he did unknown to our Author, who was then at Childrey, and whom, in that Exigence, he had not Time to conſult: And becauſe Dr. Wallis's Repreſentation of Mr. Pocock's Caſe contains many Facts worthy of the curious Reader's Notice, I ſhall give it in the Doctor's own Words.

'THE Diſpoſal of the Deanery and Canonſhip in Chriſt-Church were heretofore reputed 'to belong to the King, who did accordingly from Time to Time diſpoſe of them. In the 'Time of King James, he did, by his Charter, annex one of the Canonſhips to the Divinity 'Profeſſor, and his Succeſſors for ever; and King Charles another of them to the Hebrew 'Profeſſor, and a third to the Univerſity Orator, which were accordingly enjoyed. Upon 'the Death of Dr. Morrice, Hebrew Profeſſor, the Committee of both Houſes (who did then 'manage the Affairs of the Univerſity) did put Mr. Pocock into his Place and Canonſhip, 'who did accordingly enjoy it for ſome Time, till, for refuſing to ſubſcribe the Ingagement, 'he was (at the ſame Time with Dr. Reynolds and Dr. Mills) put out of his Canonſhip; but 'remained (as ſtill he doth) Hebrew Profeſſor. Upon the Death of Dr. French, (who was 'put into his Place) the Ingagement being before that Time taken off, it was thought, that 'Mr. Pocock's Right did again revive, and that he ought to be reſtored to that Canonſhip, 'as Hebrew Profeſſor for the Time being, there being now no Bar in the Way. And while 'there were Motions in the Univerſity to petition for it, Dr. Owen (then Vice-chancellor, 'and in Favour with the Protector) undertook to manage that Buſineſs himſelf, and went up 'to London about it. But thereupon, inſtead of Mr. Pocock, Mr. Pointer was put into that 'Place by the Protector, who was ſuppoſed to have no Power to diſpoſe of it to any other 'Perſon, than the Hebrew Profeſſor for the Time being: And beſide this, by an Act of the 'Parliament before the laſt Interruption, all Grants of the Protector were made void, and 'therefore this among the reſt: And before that Act they were yet preſumed ſo weak, that 'Dr. Wilkins and others got new Grants (to the Places which the Protector had beſtowed 'on them) from the Parliament, and the like was endeavoured for Mr. Pointer, but could 'not be obtained; ſo that, upon the whole Matter, there ſeems very little to be ſaid, why 'Mr. Pocock ſhould not be reſtored. That which is to be done in order to it, is, that a 'Motion be made in the Houſe, for this Buſineſs to be referred to the ſame Committee with 'that of Dr. Reynolds, and that (if Need be) Summons be ſent to Mr. Pointer to appear, 'if he have any Thing to ſay, why Mr. Pocock ſhould not be reſtored.' This Letter was dated March 6, $16\frac{59}{60}$.

WHETHER the Houſe would have hearkened to this Remonſtrance or no, there was not Time to judge: For in ten Days after the Date of Dr. Wallis's Letter, this long Parliament paſſed an Act for its own Diſſolution, and for calling a new one, to meet on the 26th of the following Month. They met accordingly; and God having now ſufficiently tried the Faith and Patience of his ſuffering Church of England, was pleaſed to put it into the Hearts of this Convention to invite the King to his Throne. And thus, by a Turn of Providence, never enough to be adored and acknowledged, our ancient Conſtitution was reſtored to us, at a Time too, when that Bleſſing was thought very diſtant, if not utterly deſpaired of.

SECTION IV.

THE Year 1660 was auſpicious to Mr. Pocock on more Accounts than one: For I find him congratulated by a Friend at this Time, upon his Recovery from a Fit of Sickneſs, which he calls the Prodrome to the publick Reſtauration. In the Month of June he attended the Vice-chancellor, when he waited on the King to preſent him with the Oxford Verſes on that happy Occaſion; nor was it long before our Author, among other oppreſſed Loyaliſts, felt the Benefit of that national Deliverance: For the Canonry of Chriſt-Church annexed to the Hebrew Lecture at Oxford, by King Charles the Firſt, and from which he had now been removed, for Refuſal of the Ingagement, about ten Years, was reſtored to him; the Intruder having been turned out by the Delegates, appointed to viſit that Univerſity, verſity, preſently after the Reſtoration. It has been already ſaid, that Mr. Pocock, on the Death of Dr. Morris, was, upon the Recommendation of Dr. Shelden and Dr. Hammond, nominated to the Hebrew Lecture, and the Canonry thereto annexed, by King Charles the Firſt, then (1648) a Priſoner in the Iſle of Wight, but that he was not conſtituted by Patent, the King not having the Great Seal then in his Power: But Dr. Sheldon, then Dean of the Chapel Royal, and ſoon after Biſhop of London, took Care to have that Defect ſupplied the very Month after the King's Return: For this Purpoſe, Letters Patents were granted (bearing Date June 20, An. Duodec. Car. 2ndi) conſtituting Mr. Pocock Hebrew Profeſſor, and Canon of Chriſt-Church, by Virtue whereof, he was ſolemnly inſtalled on the 27th of the Month following. The Difficulties alſo that formerly attended Degrees, being now removed by the late happy Change, he took that of Doctor of Divinity on the 20th Day of September, in the ſame Year.

It has already been obſerved, that Mr. Pocock, tho' he ſucceeded Dr. Morris in the Hebrew Lecture at Oxford, by Order of the Committee of Parliament, was not promoted to his Canonry, which had been annexed to that Lecture, but to the Canonry of Dr. Payne, who, together with Dr. Fell, the Dean of Chriſt-Church, and ſome others of the Prebendaries, was removed by the ſaid Committee, for a pretended high Contempt of the Authority of Parliament. By theſe Means it came to paſs, that Mr. Pocock was forced to accept of another Houſe or Manſion, and not that which belonged to the Canonry, that had been annexed to the Hebrew Lecture by King Charles the Firſt. It has been related likewiſe, how he and his Friends laboured to get him Admiſſion to his proper Houſe and Canonry, and, upon Failure of Succeſs, how he entered his Proteſt, with a Salvo to the Rights of the Hebrew Profeſſorſhip. I need not repeat the little Regard that was paid, in thoſe Times, to Royal Grants, nor how the ſame Committee afterwards deprived him of his Canonry, while they ſuffered him ot retain the Lecture, to which a Canonry had been inſeparably annexed. And tho' at the Reſtoration, as hath been already ſaid, he was again inſtalled a Canon of that Church, he had yet the Mortification to ſee another in Poſſeſſion of thoſe Lodgings, which belonged to his Predeceſſor in the Hebrew Profeſſorſhip, Dr. Morris. The Intruder at this Time was John Mills, Doctor of Law, and then Member of the Houſe of Commons: This Dr. Mills, tho' moſt evidently a Lay-man, had been Canon of Chriſt-Church [q], and was removed thence at the ſame Time with Dr. Reynolds and Mr. Pocock, and on the ſame Pretence; namely, for refuſing the Ingagement. At the Reſtoration he got Poſſeſſion of Dr. Morris's Houſe, and detained it from Mr. (now Dr.) Pocock, in Right of his Pretenſion to the Canonry, out of which he had formerly been ejected. In order to the Recovery of theſe Lodgings, the Univerſity of Oxford joined with Dr. Pocock in a Petition to the Delegates, appointed by the King, ſoon after his Return, to viſit that Univerſity, for a Hearing before them, or before any of the Judges, to whom their Honours might think fit to refer the Conſideration of it. The Reſult of this Affair was, that the Delegates firſt removed Dr. Mills from the Canonry for which he was unqualified, and put Dr. Pocock into the Lodgings proper to the Stall that was annexed to the Hebrew Profeſſorſhip, and into which he was put, by Virtue of the Letters Patents he had ſo lately obtained.

And now the remaining Part of Dr. Pocock's Life being of one Tenor or Way, ſpent in Study, and doing Good, without thoſe Travels or Sufferings, which have ſo much lengthened this Diſcourſe, what we have further to do, will, for the moſt Part be, to give ſome Account of thoſe other Books he publiſhed, according to the Order of Time in which they were printed, and then, to lay thoſe Things together, which may ſerve to give ſome imperfect Idea of his very great Worth.

In this Year 1660, he printed his Arabick Verſion of Hugo Grotius's Treatiſe concerning the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion: That excellent Book, which deſervedly met with the higheſt Applauſe from learned Men, had been already tranſlated into ſeveral Languages, particluarly Engliſh, Dutch, French, Swediſh and Greek; but in no Tongue could it be thought more uſeful, than in the Arabick, being a Language underſtood, not only in the Ottoman Empire, but in Perſia, Tartary, and all thoſe Parts of India and Africa, where Mahometiſm has prevailed. Among the Profeſſors of that Superſtition, doubtleſs there are ſome well-meaning People, who would entertain favourable Thoughts of Chriſtianity, were they ſufficiently made acquainted with the Reaſonableneſs and Excellency of it. The Converſion of ſuch, Dr. Pocock had in View, when he firſt reſolved upon this Work; and not only that, but the Inſtruction and better Eſtabliſhment of the Chriſtians, that are very numerous in ſome of thoſe Countries, who, by Reaſon of the Bondage they are under, know but little of the holy Religion they profeſs, and the Evidence on which it is built; and therefore, to mend their worldly Condition, are too often tempted into Apoſtaſy. And to make this Tranſlation more fit for theſe Purpoſes, he took the Liberty, which the learned Author allowed him (in

[q] Mr. Ant. Wood, in his Hiſt. & Antiq. of the Univ. of Oxford, accounts for the whole Matter: He acquaints us, that Dr. Mills was put into the Canonry of Dr. Morris, the Hebrew Profeſſor, by the Committee of the two Houſes, who probably had no Scruples about the Legality of a Lay-Canon of Chriſt-Church. Being, therefore, reſtored by the long Parliament, juſt before they diſſolved themſelves, to that Canonry, which he afterwards loſt, by refuſing the Ingagement, he came again of courſe into the Lodgings belonging to it.

a Viſit he made to him at Paris, when he returned the laſt Time out of the Eaſt) of making ſuch Alterations, as he thought neceſſary: Grotius's Introduction being only an Account addreſſed on a particular Occaſion to Hieron. Bignonius, of a Work of the like Nature, which he had formerly publiſhed in Dutch, and alſo containing in it, ſome Expreſſions relating to the Mahometans, which in the Entrance might, perhaps, diſcourage thoſe People from peruſing the Book, Dr. Pocock thought fit to leave out, and inſtead thereof, he inſerted a Preface entirely new. In this Preface he propoſes the Deſign of the whole Treatiſe, which was, he ſays, to enquire concerning the true Worſhip of God, and the Arguments of its Truth; ſhews the vaſt Importance of ſuch Reſearches; prays for the Divine Illumination, which is neceſſary to render them effectual. He gives ſome Account of the Perſons to whom this Work would be eſpecially ſerviceable, which are not only thoſe, who are miſtaken in religious Matters, but ſuch alſo to whom God, in his Mercy, hath ſhewn the Way of Truth, who, if of competent Underſtandings, might be furniſhed by it, with proper Weapons to conquer Error; but, if of meaner Capacities, would yet be enabled, by the Peruſal of it, to continue ſtedfaſt, reſiſting the Aſſaults of thoſe, who ſhould labour to pervert them. Moreover, he ſhews of what Kind the Arguments made uſe of in it, are; namely, ſuch as, being collected from the Books both of ancient and modern Anthors, who have written on this Subject, are ſure and convincing, and alſo eaſy to be underſtood. Beſides this new Preface, he alſo made ſeveral Changes in the 6th Book, wherein the Author applies himſelf to the Confutation of Mahometiſm, amending ſome Things, and leaving out others, both in the 5th and 10th Sections of it, and particularly the pretended Miracle of the Flying of the Dove to Mahomet's Ear, as having no Foundation, either in the Writings or Opinions of his Followers: About which, when he diſcourſed with Grotius, that learned Man freely acknowledged [r] his taking the Story only from our own Writers, eſpecially from Scaliger, in his Notes on Manilius.

THIS Verſion, as I have formerly ſhewn, Dr. Pocock had intended to publiſh many Years before, and the Reaſon of his delaying it ſo very long, undoubtedly was, the Coſt of Printing it: For the Copies of it being not for Sale, but charitable Uſes, a Sum was required for this, much beyond his own Ability: But this Difficulty was now removed by the generous Offer of the Honourable Robert Boyle, Eſq; that great Promoter of all uſeful Knowledge, both Divine and Human, who, as ſoon as he underſtood this Deſign of Dr. Pocock, aſſured him, that he would bear the whole Charge of it. Indeed, that pious and learned Gentleman, on whom God had beſtowed a double Bleſſing, a plentiful Eſtate, and therewith a Heart to uſe it well, never omitted any Opportunity, that preſented itſelf, of doing Service to the Intereſts of true Religion. At his Coſt, the Iriſh New Teſtament was reprinted, and he was chiefly at the Expence alſo of reprinting the Old. Upon his Deſire, and by his Encouragement, that Catechiſm, which the learned Mr. William Seaman tranſlated into Turkiſh, was printed; and, as appears by a Letter of Mr. Seaman's to Dr. Pocock, the ſame honourable Perſon gave 60 Pounds towards Printing the New Teſtament turned by him into the ſame Language: And at this Time, the Zeal he had for the Propagation of Chriſtianity, engaged him to all the Expence, which was neceſſary, that Grotius's admirable Defence of it might be read in a Tongue generally ſtudied in all thoſe Countries, which have embraced the Superſtition of Mahomet.

IT is heartily to be wiſhed, that the Succeſs of a Work ſo truly Chriſtian, had been anſwerable to the Zeal, with which it was both undertaken and promoted: But of that, indeed, after all poſſible Enquiry, we are able to give but a ſlender Account. Mr. Boyle writes to Dr. Pocock, Jan. 24, 166$\frac{8}{9}$, that 'He had diſcourſed with a very underſtanding and religious Gentleman, a chief Member of the Council for Trade and the Plantations, and one 'that had a great Intereſt in the Merchants, who promiſed his Aſſiſtance in getting this 'Tranſlation properly diſperſed.' I find likewiſe, by the ſame Letter, that Mr. Baxter ſtrenuouſly imployed his Intereſt with the Turky Company to the ſame Purpoſe; that it was propoſed at a Meeting of the Merchants trading to thoſe Parts, who well liked it, and readily offered to diſperſe, as diſcreetly as they could, as many Books as ſhould be put into their Hands. By another Letter of the ſame honourable Perſon to Dr. Pocock, we likewiſe learn, that a Quarter of a Hundred of theſe Books had been already delivered to ſome Merchants, and that a much greater Number would be committed to their Care, as ſoon as it ſhould be determined at Oxford, what Sort of Binding would be moſt proper for the Eaſt. But for what particular Places theſe were intended, or in what Manner they were to be diſpoſed of, I cannot find: That very few were diſtributed at Conſtantinople, the very learned Dr. Thomas Smith, who went to reſide there in the Year 1668, had Reaſon to believe. He affirmed, 'That he did not know of ſo much as one ſingle Copy in that Place, except that, 'which he carried out of England himſelf, and which he preſented there to a Turkiſh Imam, 'or Prieſt of his Acquaintance, who was well-ſkill'd in the Language of his Prophet.' And, indeed, the ſame learned Perſon gives but little Hopes of Succeſs from that, or any the like Books, among ſuch Turks, as he converſed with in that City: 'For, generally ſpeaking, he 'ſays, their unreaſonable Prejudices, their groſs Stupidity in Matters of Speculation, and their

[r] Spec. Hiſt. Arab. p. 186.

'equally prodigious and intolerable Obſtinacy and Pride, had hardened them againſt all Con'viction, and rendered them impenetrable to any Argument.'

I CANNOT, on this Occaſion, avoid delivering it as my Opinion, that the Sight of theſe Arabick Tranſlations of Grotius without his own, the Tranſlator's, or any other Europæan Name prefixed to them, was what, in great Meaſure, deceived Mr. Watſon, the Scotch Gentleman mentioned in Wheeler's Travels, p. 200, who ſeriouſly affirmed, 'That Hugo Grotius had 'ſtolen all his principal Arguments for the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion out of Arabian Au-'thors.' Whoever conſiders, what little Acquaintance Grotius had with ſuch Arabick Books, as have not yet been tranſlated into other Languages, and how diligent Dr. Pocock was in enquiring out, what the Eaſt afforded before he engaged in that Verſion, can hardly think of any likelier Ground for ſuch a Declaration, than what has been above aſſigned.

AT Aleppo, and the Parts about it, I find a conſiderable Number of theſe Books were diſpoſed of: And yet, certain it is, that either Grotius's Latin Tract, De Veritate Religionis Chriſtianæ, or that other Work of his of like Nature, which he formerly publiſhed in Dutch, (mentioned in his Introduction to Hieron. Bignonius above-mentioned) it is certain, I ſay, that one of theſe two Tracts, many Years before the Printing of this Arabick Tranſlation, had got into the Eaſt: For the Derviſe Ahmed, writing to our Author, ſoon after his Return home from Aleppo, promiſes, among ſome Oriental Manuſcripts which he had bought for him, to ſend him a Book concerning the embracing the Chriſtian Religion, the Work of Groot, the Brother of Gole. Mr. Smith, whether by Conjecture from the Derviſe's Mention of Gole, or from better Authority, I cannot ſay, ſets it down as Fact, that Golius had ſent thither ſome Copies of Grotius, which is not improbable: But it ſeems to me, from the Derviſe's Mention of that learned Man's Dutch Name, Groot, moſt likely that he had lighted on the Dutch, and not the Latin Treatiſe, concerning the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion. Many Copies of this Arabick Verſion were likewiſe afterwards ſent to Dr. Huntington, whilſt Chaplain to the Engliſh Factory at Aleppo, and yet theſe were not ſufficient: For having diſpoſed of them, he deſired another Parcel, in a Letter written by him to Dr. Pocock, which were accordingly ſent to him: It appears from one of his Epiſtles, publiſhed together with his Life (Huntingtoni Epiſtolæ, N° 2.) that he preſented one of theſe Copies to Stephanus Petrus, Maronite Patriarch at Antioch, to whom alſo he gave Aſſurance, that if he approved it, and thought a good Number of them of Uſe, they ſhould be ſpeedily ſent to him; and, doubtleſs he did not neglect to make the like Overture to Moſe, another Biſhop of the Eaſt, with whom he correſponded. But it is too manifeſt, that he met with no ſmall Difficulty in this Matter, from ſome Romaniſts in thoſe Parts, who envied the Honour of a Deſign ſo truly Chriſtian, to thoſe of a different Communion from themſelves: For tho' the Doctors of the Sorbone, who read this Treatiſe of Grotius, before he publiſhed it, diſapproved nothing in it, but that one Paſſage, [Lib. ii. Sect. 7. concerning Things which imply a Contradiction] which bears, as they thought, too hard upon Tranſubſtantiation; and tho' ſome Papiſts had ſuch an Opinion of it, that they undertook a Tranſlation of it into Perſian, for making Converts in thoſe Countries, where that Language is ſpoken; yet, Dr. Huntington now found, 'That 'the moſt innocent and uſeful Attempt will be diſliked by ſome Perſons, when made by 'ſuch Inſtruments, as they do not approve of.' Notwithſtanding all the Kindneſs, which (as appears from his printed Epiſtles) paſſed between him, and the Fathers reſiding in thoſe Countries, and the Offices of Friendſhip they mutually performed, he complained to Dr. Pocock, 'That as he diſperſed this Treatiſe, he had much greater Apprehenſions from their 'Malice, than from the unprompted Accuſations of the Turks themſelves.' He told him further, that upon this Account he was obliged, for his own Safety, to cut the laſt Book, wherein Mahometiſm is confuted, out of ſome Copies, before he diſtributed them. And, if ever the Society for Propagating Chriſtian Knowledge in Foreign Parts ſhall think of another Edition of this Work in Arabick, it may, perhaps, be found expedient to have ſome Copies of it printed without the laſt Book, to be diſpoſed of in ſuch Places, as will not endure a direct Oppoſition to the Tenets of Mahomet: For tho' it is much to be wiſhed, that his Followers might have that Part of this Treatiſe eſpecially put into their Hands, which was ſo particularly intended for them; yet, where that cannot be attempted, with any Proſpect of Safety, the other Parts of it alone may prove, by God's Bleſſing, of conſiderable Advantage to them. And, indeed, if they ſhall but once perceive the Certainty of the Truths, which are in the other Parts ſo fully made out, they will, probably, begin to make ſome ſerious Reflections on their own Superſtition, and, at length, diſcern the Follies and Abſurdities of ſo groſs an Impoſture.

THE next Thing that Dr. Pocock publiſhed, was, an Arabick Poem, intitled, Lamiato'l-Ajam, or Carmen Abu Iſmaelis Tograi, with his Latin Tranſlation of it, and large Notes upon it; a Poem which is held to be of the greateſt Elegancy, anſwerable to the Fame of its Author, who, as the Doctor gives his Character, was eminent for Learning and Virtue, and eſteemed the Phœnix of the Age, in which he lived, for Poetry and Eloquence: Dr. Pocock's Deſign in this Work was, not only to give a Specimen of Arabian Poetry, but alſo to make the Attainment of the Arabick Tongue more eaſy to thoſe, that ſtudy it; for his Notes, containing a Grammatical Explanation of all the Words of this Author, are very ſerviceable for promoting the Knowledge of that Language. Theſe Notes being the Sum of many Lectures, which he read on this Poem, the Speech that he delivered, when he began to explain it, is prefixed to it, which, perhaps, contains, tho' a ſuccinct, yet as accurate an Account of the Arabick Tongue, as is any where extant. After the general Hiſtory of it, he there ſpeaks of the Things that recommend it, and particularly of theſe four; Perſpicuity, Elegance, Copiouſneſs and Uſefulneſs; an Inſtance of the firſt of theſe, he gives in that prompt Way the Arabians have of expreſſing many Things clearly in a very few Words, which is hardly to be imitated in any other Language; and the ſecond, he ſays, appears both from the Care employed in it, either by the adding, taking away, or Change of Letters, to ſuit Words to the Nature of the Things they ſignify, and alſo from the Sweetneſs or Softneſs of the whole Language, in which there never is a Colliſion of two or more Conſonants, but the Sound of a Vowel always intervenes. As to the Copiouſneſs of this Tongue, he ſhews, that there is no Compariſon between it, and any other: The ſtrange Variety it has of ſynonymous Words, being ſuch, as one would ſtand amazed at: There are in it 200 Names for a Serpent, which he there gives us, 500 for a Lion, and, to omit ſome other Inſtances, ſo many for Calamity, that, as he obſerves out of an Arabick Writer, who endeavoured to make a Catalogue of them, it is no ſmall Calamity to recite them. The whole Number of Words, that make up this Language, is reckoned, as he aſſures us, by Hamezah Aſpahanenſis, from an eminent Lexicographer, at twelve Millions, three hundred and fifty Thouſand, fifty and two: But that which chiefly recommends any Language, is the Uſefulneſs of it, which, for the moſt Part, conſiſts in the valuable Things, that are written in it; and in this Reſpect he ſhews it to be very conſiderable, and but little ſhort of the moſt celebrated Languages. The ancient Arabians, long before the Days of Mahomet, were not altogether ignorant of ſome Parts of Learning; ſeveral of them had Skill in Aſtronomy, ſeveral in Phyſick, and not a few in Poetry; which laſt was in ſuch Requeſt among them, that when any one began to be eminent for it in any Tribe, it was Matter of publick Congratulation, and all the Kindred and Friends of it met together to rejoice, in the moſt ſolemn Manner, as for the greateſt Happineſs in the World. Indeed, whatſoever Knowledge they then had, it could not be very uſeful, for Want of Letters, which was an Invention ſo late amongſt them, that when the Alcoran began to be publiſhed, ſome Time after Mahomet's Death, there was not found in all Arabia Felix a Perſon ſufficiently qualified to read or write it: However, ſomewhat more than a hundred Years after, when the Empire of the Saracens came to the Abbaſidæ, all the Grecian Learning found a ready Entertainment with them, and began to be cultivated; and within the Compaſs of a few Ages, infinite Books were written by them in Philoſophy, Aſtronomy, Geometry, Medicine, and all Kinds of Sciences: And that we may not make a Judgment of theſe Books, from the barbarous Tranſlations of ſome of them, which were made, when Ignorance ſo much prevailed in Europe, the Doctor tells us, that whoſoever ſhall read the Writings of Alfarabius, Avicenna, Avenpace, and many others, will ſoon find Reaſon for a very different Opinion of them, from that which is now commonly received amongſt us. In ſhort, he aſſerts with much Aſſurance, that, with reſpect to human Learning, the Arabians do not more want the Knowledge of other Languages, than other Nations do that of theirs, and that there are as many Things, which they can teach others, as there are, which they can learn from them; particularly for the Study of Divinity, he proves, that it may receive great Aids from this Language; for by the Help of this, Divines will be able to know the true Opinions of Mahometiſm, that they may confute them. The Arabick alſo will very much contribute to their Skill in Hebrew, and conſequently, to the Knowledge of the ſacred Text of the Old Teſtament; as appears from the Books of Aben Ezra, Maimonides, Kimchi, and others of the wiſer Rabbins, who, upon every Difficulty, refer their Readers to the Arabick Language: By this too, they will be able to peruſe the greateſt Part of thoſe Things, which are worth reading, amongſt the Jews, ſuch as the Writings of Maimonides, Cozari, Chobath Lebaboth, Emunoth, Saadias, and ſeveral more, which are for the moſt Part in Arabick; and alſo to conſult the ſeveral Verſions of the Holy Scriptures made into this Language, both by Jews and Chriſtians, together with many Chriſtian Books of good Account, that are written in it. Finally, by Means of this Language, the Piety of thoſe who are zealous for the Promotion of Divine Knowledge, may make ſome Proviſion againſt the Ignorance of the Eaſtern Chriſtians, who are ſo miſerably oppreſſed under Turkiſh Bondage.

I HAVE been more particular in this Detail of the Uſes of Arabiſm, from the greateſt Maſter of it, that our Europæan World could ever boaſt of, in Hopes, that ſuch a Diſcourſe may incite the Young and Studious among our Candidates for holy Orders, to apply themſelves thereto, and to revive a Branch of Learning, that ſeems to have been gradually decaying for many Years among us.

THIS Book, Carmen Tograi, was printed at Oxford, in the Year 1661, by the particular Care and Direction of the very learned Mr. Samuel Clarke, Architypographus of that Univerſity, who not only made a Preface to it, but alſo added a ſuitable Treatiſe of his own, concerning the Arabick Proſodia: The Treatiſe he dedicated to Dr. Pocock in an Epiſtle for that Purpoſe; which he did, as he told him, not only becauſe he thought him the propereſt

Judge

Judge of the Work, but alſo becauſe it was he alone, that firſt encouraged him to the Undertaking, that ſupplied him abundantly out of his vaſt Store with Materials to carry it on, and that conſtantly ſet him right, when involved in ſuch Difficulties, as he knew not how to paſs through.

It is intimated by Mr. Clarke, in the Preface before-mentioned, that Gregorius Abul Pharajius's Hiſtory of the Dynaſties, tranſlated by Dr. Pocock, was, at that Time in, or ready for the Oxford Preſs, the Edition of which was finiſhed in the Year 1663: That Part of this Book, which gives an Account of the Riſe of Mahomet, the Doctor had publiſhed, as it has been ſhewn, ſeveral Years before; and, upon the Importunity of ſeveral learned Men, who were much pleaſed with that Specimen (more particularly of his great Friend, Dr. Langbaine, who had earneſtly preſſed him to it before his Death) the Whole was now printed in the original Arabick, with his Latin Verſion of it.

This Abul Pharajius was a Chriſtian of the Jacobite Sect, of great Fame for Learning, not only among thoſe of his own Religion, but among the Jews too, and Mahometans; and this Work of his is a Compendium of the general Hiſtory of the World, from the Creation to his own Time: It is divided by him into ten Dynaſties or Governments; for ſo many he reckons up, which are theſe following: The firſt is that of the holy Patriarchs, from Adam the firſt Man; the ſecond, of the Judges in Iſrael; the third, of the Kings thereof; the fourth, of the Chaldeans; the fifth, of the Magi or Perſians; the ſixth, of the Greeks, that were Idolaters; the ſeventh, that of the Franks, for ſo he calls the Romans; the eighth, of the Greeks, who were Chriſtians; the ninth, of the Saracens; and tenth, of the Mogul Tartars.

This Work, as is noted above, was publiſhed, An. 1663, and dedicated to his Majeſty King Charles the Second; but the Love of Arabick Learning was now waxed cold, and the entire Piece of Abul-Pharai, in the Year 1663, met with ſmall Encouragement, whilſt a Specimen of it, An. 1649, had given Pleaſure to all the learned World. But ſuch is the Weakneſs and Inſtability of the human Mind, even when improved by Education and Letters, that Cuſtom and Faſhion ſhall, in a few Years, be able to ſway it from one Extream to another: And, perhaps, this Inconſtancy may, in ſome Meaſure, alſo be imputed to the Indiſcretion of learned Men themſelves, who are too apt immoderately to cry up their own favourite Courſe of Studies; and when this once comes to be obſerved, the World is with Difficulty prevailed upon to allow the Idol, even its juſt Commendation.

Of this Change in the publick Taſte, no one was more ſenſible than Dr. Pocock himſelf, as appears by a Letter of his to Dr. Thomas Greaves, which attended a Copy of his Abul Pharagii Hiſt. Dynaſtiarum, and which, at that learned Perſon's Requeſt, he forced, as he tells him, from his Printer's, before the Index was wrought off. 'If you find, adds Dr. 'Pocock, any Thing in it worth the Publiſhing, you muſt be fain to ſpeak for it; for I per-'ceive it will be much ſlighted: The Genius of the Times, as for theſe Studies, is much 'altered ſince you and I firſt ſet about them; and few will be perſuaded, they are worthy 'taking Notice of. My Lord of London aſked me, if there were any remarkable Paſſages 'in the Book? I anſwered him only in general, that I thought there were many; if you 'ſhould fall into any Diſcourſe with him about it, I pray, note ſome Particulars, as, I think, 'you may that of the firſt Riſe of Mahomet's Religion, p. 100, &c. and that of the Riſe 'and Spreading of the Tartars Empire, and their Incurſions, which is in the Latin, p. 280, '&c. or any other Paſſages, that you ſhall think worthy. And if you ſpeak with any of 'your Acquaintance concerning the Book, your good Word may help bear up its Credit.' Dr. Greaves, in his Anſwer to this Letter, dated from Fulham, writes thus upon the unfaſhionableneſs of Arabick Studies; 'How theſe Studies are eſteemed in the Univerſities, I know 'not; in theſe Parts, for ought I obſerve, they are not much followed or regarded, and 'receive ſmall Incouragement from thoſe, who, I thought, would have been Fautors and Pro-'moters of them.' Nor was Arabick Learning then out of Vogue in England only; but beginning to decline in Holland alſo. In the Year 1669, Mr. afterwards Dr. Bernard, complains in a Letter to Dr. Pocock from Leyden, that Harder of that Place, who, ſays he, ſpeaks Arabick readily, had tranſlated the Hiſtory of Saladine, but could not find a Bookſeller, that would venture to undertake the Work, becauſe Oriental Learning decays here, and Books of that Nature will turn to no Advantage; neither, adds he, can Mr. Thevenot find a Bookſeller, either here, or at Amſterdam, to undertake his Abulfeda.

The Declenſion of theſe Studies in the Eſteem of the Publick may in ſome Meaſure account for our Author's riſing no higher in Church-Preferments at the Reſtoration, when ſuch Numbers of vacant Dignities were filled. Barely to be reſtored to what he had ſo many Years been deprived of for his Religion and Loyalty, and to have no other Reward for his Loſſes, Oppreſſions and Proſecutions, beſides his uncommon Learning, and unſpotted Sanctity of Manners, but what was due to him in Equity, was a Hardſhip, which reflects more Diſhonour upon thoſe Times, than any one Caſe of the like Nature, that has come to my Knowledge: For, in Juſtice to the Men that were then intruſted with the Diſpoſal of Church-Preferments, it muſt be owned, that there were very few eminent Eccleſiaſticks, who, upon that bleſſed Change of Things, were not called up to Advancement; ſome were not ſo early preferred as others; but, perhaps, our Author is almoſt the only Inſtance of a Clergyman, then at the higheſt Pitch of Eminence for Learning, and every other Merit proper to his Profeſſion, who lived throughout the Reign of Charles the Second, without the leaſt Regard from the Court, except the Favour ſometimes done him of being called upon to tranſlate Arabick Letters from the Princes of the Levant, or the Credential Letters of Embaſſadors coming from thoſe Parts; for which, yet I do not find, he had any Recompence, beſides good Words and Compliments: But he was as modeſt, as he was deſerving, and probably, after preſenting his Abul-Pharagius to the King, he never put himſelf in the Way of Royal Regards any more.

BEFORE I take my Leave of Dr. Pocock's Hiſtory of the Dynaſties, I ſhall obſerve ſomething, which, tho' it more properly belongs to his Specimen of this larger Work, may not incommodiouſly find a Place here: The Reader, then, is to obſerve, that the celebrated Monſieur Bayle, p. 37, [1] of his Critical and Hiſtorical Dictionary, has obſerved a wide Difference between Dr. Pocock and Mr. John Greaves, about the Time in which Abulfeda was advanced to the Government of Hamah, in Syria: The former of theſe, in his Specimen Hiſtoriæ Arabum, p. 363, makes this to have happened Anno Hegiræ 710; whereas Mr. John Greaves, in his Preface to Binæ Abulfedæ Tabulæ, p. 7, 8, places Abulfeda's Advancement 33 Years later, viz. Anno Hegiræ 743. This Difference Monſieur Bayle complains of, as irreconcileable, and thinks it moſt reaſonable to ſuppoſe Mr. Greaves's Account the true one, becauſe Abulfeda is his principal Subject, whereas Dr. Pocock ſpeaks of him only, comme d'un fort petit Acceſſoire; upon which he proceeds thus: 'But is it not very vexatious, that one of 'Pocock's Conſequence ſhould not be ſafely to be followed in a Point of Oriental Learning, 'and that, whilſt he publiſhed a Thing, a Collegue of his ſhould be making it appear to 'be falſe?' Not content with this, he repeats the ſame Cenſure in his Index, under the Word Pocock, Il eſt etonnant, qu' il ne ſoit un guide ſur en fait d'Erudition Orientale. But, againſt this confident Charge, Dr. Pocock has been thoroughly defended, by the learned Mr. Gagnier of Oxford, in his Preface to the Life of Mohammed, p. 5. For there he affirms, that what our Author, whom he calls Virum integerrimum & ſolide doctum, has ſaid, concerning the Time of Abulfeda's Advancement, is perfectly right, as being exactly agreeable to the Account, which Abulfeda himſelf gives of that Event; and that Mr. Greaves had committed a monſtrous Miſtake in his Chronology, having confounded this Abulfeda with another of that Name, who was the ſixteenth of the Mamaluck Kings of Egypt.

THE Ground of the Miſtake, as the learned Mr. Sale informs us [1], was this: 'Mr. 'Greaves, in an Arabick Manuſcript, entitled, Al Sacerdan (or rather Al Sukkerdân, which 'is a Perſian Word, and ſignifies a Sugar-diſh) found the following Paſſage, as it ſtands in 'his Latin Tranſlation: Rex juſtus, Columna Religionis, al Soltân, Abulfeda Iſmael, Filius Al 'Melec al Naſer, ſedit ſuper Thronum Regni [in Hamah] poſt amotionem Fratris ipſius Al Malec 'al Naſer Ahmed, Feriâ quintâ XXII Die [Menſis] al Moharram, Anno DCCXLIII [Hegiræ] '& regnavit donec obiit VI Die [Menſis] Rabiæ poſterioris, Anno [Hegiræ] DCCXLVI. That 'is, Al Malec al Sâleh Omado'ddin Abulfeda Iſmael, Son of Al Malec al Naſer aſcended the 'Throne [of Hamah] after the Depoſition of his Brother Al Mâlec al Nâſer Ahmed on Thurſ'day the 22*d of al Moharram, in the Year* 743, and reigned till he died, the 6*th of the latter 'Rabia in the Year* 746. This Paſſage Greaves, from a Similitude of Names, (a moſt de'ceitful Guide) immediately, and without further Examination, concluded, muſt belong to 'our Abu'lfeda, and no other, and therefore made no Scruple to inſert the Words [in Hamah] 'which were not in his Author, as a Thing of courſe: But had he looked into what pre'cedes, and what follows, he would have found, that the Author is there giving the Suc'ceſſion of the Mamluc Soltans of Egypt.'

I WOULD not detract from the Praiſes due to Monſieur Bayle's Induſtry and Parts; but, I believe, after what has been ſaid, the World will give me Leave, in this particular Inſtance, to tax him with a Defect, both of Judgment and Candour. When, indeed, two Writers, equally ſkilled in the Matter they treat of, differ in their Accounts, Mr. Bayle's Rule ſeems reaſonable, and we ought rather to aſſent to him, who writes profeſſedly on the Subject, than to him, that ſpeaks of it only by the By; tho', even in this Caſe, a modeſt Critick would hardly think his Point ſo ſecure, as to brand the Author he diſſents from, in the Manner Mr. Bayle has done by Dr. Pocock. But then, he ought to have very good Grounds for thinking the Writers equally converſant in the Matter they treat of; otherwiſe his Determination, tho' it ſhould happen to be right, is raſh and uncharitable: Whereas, had Mr. Bayle known any Thing of Dr. Pocock and Mr. Greaves, he muſt have known, that the former was incomparably ſuperior to the other, in the Knowledge of Eaſtern Writers; he had greater Opportunities of acquiring this Kind of Knowledge, having ſpent more than twice the Time in the Levant, with the ſole View of improving himſelf in Oriental Learning, than Mr. Greaves did for that, and various other Purpoſes. Mr. Bayle's Rule, therefore, had no Room in the preſent Caſe; and Dr. Pocock, tho' ſpeaking of Abulfeda's Advancement to be Prince of Hamah, by the By only, was more likely to aſſign the true Time of that Event, than Mr. Greaves, tho' it was his principal Subject. It was, indeed, a very great and grievous Miſtake in him to conclude, at firſt Sight, from the bare Mention of a Prince, in an Arabick Writer, one of whoſe Names was Abulfeda, that he muſt mean the Prince of Hamah, in Syria, without looking at all into that Writer's Subject and Deſign, but taking that for granted, which a little Enquiry would have convinced him, was an utter Miſtake.

That Mr. Greaves, who, otherwiſe, was a cautious and accurate Scholar, ſhould be prone to an Error, that might eaſily have been avoided, is the more ſurprizing, when we reflect, that but the Year before, Dr. Pocock, in his Notes on his Specimen Hiſtoriæ Arabum, had ſet down the true Date of Abulfeda's Advancement; that Mr. Greaves had this Piece of his Friend's, and highly admired it, as, indeed, he did every Thing, that came from him: But he had, probably, forgot that Particular, and, being then at a Diſtance from his Oracle, could not conſult him on every Emergency. And yet it appears, from the Letters, that paſſed between thoſe two dear Friends, about this Time, that Mr. Greaves had conſulted Dr. Pocock, and received Solution from him of ſeveral Doubts concerning Abulfeda; but then, theſe concerned only the Readings of the various Copies, he was to print from: We further find, that he propoſes to him intended Verſions of Arabick Paſſages, that occur in that very Preface, wherein the grand Miſtake ſtands; and which is more, the very Paſſage from Al Sacerdan, which miſled Mr. Greaves, and his deſigned Tranſlation of it, is extant in a Letter of his to Dr. Pocock, tho' without naming that Writer, or the Uſe he intended to make of the Paſſage from him.

'This following Arabick, ſays he, I think, may be thus rendered into Latin;' then, after giving the Arabick, comes his Latin Rendering, viz. 'Finitum eſt opus Feriâ 5, 22*ndo* 'Die Almoharram.'

After another Arabick Sentence, nothing to the preſent Purpoſe, and its Verſion, we have the other Part of Al Sacerdan's Sentence, which he propoſes to tranſlate thus; 'Sedit 'ſuper Thronum Regni poſt amotionem Fratris ipſius:' How eaſy had it been to add one more Quære, viz. whether the Abulfeda of Al Sacerdan was the ſame with the Prince of Hamah, whoſe Tables he was then publiſhing. But of this he ſeems not to have entertained the leaſt Suſpicion, tho' his only Authority for the affirmative Side of the Queſtion, was that ſlender one of Agreement in Name: So weak and unguarded againſt Deception are the wiſeſt and beſt of Men, at certain Hours! For my Part, I think, we ſhould do well to look up to God's permiſſive Providence on all ſuch Occaſions, and to conſider the Slips of learned Men, as Documents to them, and to the reſt of Mankind, how imperfect human Prudence and Sagacity is, even when moſt improved by Study and Exerciſe, that they may not think of themſelves higher than they ought to think, and learn thence, what conſtant Need they have to beg his Bleſſing and Direction in their Studies, who is the Father of Lights. But was I to account, humanly ſpeaking, for this grievous Negligence in Mr. Greaves, or to offer any Excuſe for him, it ſhould be the Hurry and Diſtraction of his Affair, for thoſe many Years, in which he was preparing the Edition of Abulfeda: The Truth of this Fact we have under his own Hand; for writing to Dr. Pocock, about a Year after that Piece came abroad, he uſes the following Expreſſions: 'I may ſay for myſelf, that theſe five Years I have been ſo in-'cumbered with Law-ſuits, and diverted from my Studies, that, having this Year found 'ſome Eaſe (I know not how) I am unwilling to take thoſe Pains, I have formerly under-'gone.' Having, therefore, when he wrote his Preface to Abulfeda, neither Time, nor Inclination for exact Reſearches, he too eaſily truſted to Appearances, and, as commonly happens in ſuch Caſes, was groſsly deceived by ſo doing.

But to return to our Author: After ſo many and great Proofs of his Abilities in the Writings and Languages of the Eaſt, he began to be eſteemed all over Europe, a Kind of Oracle in that Branch of Learning: Such as entered on thoſe Studies, earneſtly applied for Directions from him, and the Profeſſors themſelves ſought his Advice, with a Deference and Submiſſion, that is hardly to be conceived, but by thoſe, who have ſeen and read their Letters to him. Foreigners, who came into England, with a Deſign of improving their Stock of Oriental Learning, never failed to provide themſelves with Letters of Recommendation to him; and ſuch, as Curioſity alone brought amongſt us, were glad, by the ſame Means, of an Occaſion to ſee, and converſe with a Perſon, who was the Prodigy of his Times, for Eaſtern Learning. Thoſe who had a Taſte for that Part of Literature, never returned without the deepeſt Senſe of his mighty Abilities therein; and even they, who could form no Judgment of Dr. Pocock's peculiar Excellencies, as a Scholar, muſt, doubtleſs, have carried home with them, the moſt advantageous Sentiments of his Modeſty and Humanity: In him, they ſaw a Man, who could preſerve his native Humility, amidſt the daily Careſſes and Compliments, that were beſtowed upon him by the whole learned World; one who had contracted no Moroſeneſs from Study and Retirement; but who, as well as he loved Books, could leave them to diſcharge the Offices of Humanity, and anſwer the Call of his Friends and Correſpondents: Not that the Period of his Life, we are now ſpeaking of, was the Beginning of Applications to him in this Way.

The firſt of this Kind was, a Letter from James Alting, afterwards Profeſſor of Divinity at Groningen, then a young Man, and in England, written in the Year 1641. In this Letter he desires to have Mr. Pocock's Opinion about the Meaning of the Word אריס, Isa. xxiv. 15, rendered Ignes, in the English, and Convalles in the Dutch Translation. N. B. Valleys is also our English marginal Version.

JANUARY the 25th of the next Year, Mr. Pocock had a Letter from another learned Orientalist, viz. Jo. Hen. Hottinger, then a Professor at Groningen, and after that at Zurich, and lastly at Heidelberg: The Subject of it was, an Account of the Progress he (Hottinger) had made in translating the Chronicon Samaritanum into Latin; a Piece which Hottinger had brought with him from Holland into England, and, at the Desire of Primate Usher, had undertaken to translate. He further certifies Mr. Pocock of a Design he had in Hand, of turning the Helvetick Confession into Arabick, requesting his Direction and Assistance in the Work. Lastly, he begs our Author's Advice, where he might collect Arabick Books and MSS. for his Schola, where he was strenuous in cultivating Arabick Learning.

On the first of March, 164$\frac{8}{9}$, Sir Simon D'Ewes, the Collector of Parliamentary Antiquities, wrote him a Letter of Thanks, for having, at his Request, translated into Latin certain Arabick Transcripts.

In the Year 165$\frac{1}{2}$, Feb. 26, Dr. Arnold Boate, then at Paris, employed in collating Primate Usher's Syriack Pentateuch, with Copies of the same Version at that Place, consults Mr. Pocock concerning the Extent of Mount Libanus in Breadth and Length, putting other Geographical Quæries to him.

The same Year, Sept. 30, Mr. John Jacob Stocker, Resident from the Protestant Cantons of Switzerland to the Parliament of England, desires Mr. Pocock to procure a Catalogue of the Arabick MSS. in the publick Library at Oxford, for the Use of Mr. Hottinger, then Professor of the Eastern Languages at Zurich, who was collecting a Library in that Way, and erecting a Press for those Languages. And, to the same Effect, Hottinger himself wrote on the 11th of the Month following.

In October, 1654, our Author was favoured with a Letter from the famous Golius, Arabick Professor at Leyden, the only Man, perhaps, in Europe, that was nearly equal to Mr. Pocock in the Knowledge of that Tongue: He thanks him for his Present, [viz. Specimen Hist. Arabum] and for his Commendation of the Arabick Lexicon, which he [Golius] had lately published, acquaints him, that he intended to publish a second Edition with Improvements; that he had also a Persick Lexicon, already finished; but, finding the Printer afraid of the Expence, he designed first to send an Abridgment of it into the World. He also thanks Mr. Pocock for having recommended to him Mr. Nicholas Stanley, whom he greatly commends for his Parts and Learning. In the Conclusion, he begs Mr. Pocock's Judgment on two Questions; the first, about the religious Principles of Averroes; the second, about the Chatæi, who they were, and what their Religion, Language, and Customs.

On the Calends of August, 1655, Alting writes again to Mr. Pocock, recommending to him the Bearer of his Letter, an Inhabitant of Bern, in Switzerland.

The same Year, in November, Mr. Thorndike returns our Author Thanks in my Lord Primate of Armagh's Name, for his Resolution of past Quæries, relating to Opinions of the Rabbi's on a certain Point, and proposes fresh ones.

In February, 165$\frac{5}{6}$, Matthias Pasor, formerly Instructor to Mr. Pocock, in Arabick, writes his Thanks to Mr. Pocock, for the Present of his Porta Mosis, and offers a Conjecture of his own for reconciling the Septuagint, as cited by the Apostle, with the Hebrew of Hab. ii. 4.

On the 26th of the same Month, Mr. John Tombes, then engaged in Controversy with Dr. Hammond, upon the Subject of Infant-Baptism, writes about a Distinction fathered, as it should seem, by Mr. Selden, upon the Rabbins, and denied by Dr. Hammond, desiring his Resolution of the Question between them.

The Month following, Mr. Alting recommends, by Letter to our Author, a Person whom he calls Reverend. Joannem Zolikoferum, Sangallensem, Helvetium.

In August, 1657, Claudius Legendre, of Paris, who writes himself Conseilleur du Roy, Controller General des Restes en sa Chambre des Accompts, sent a Letter to Mr. Pocock, in which he recommends to him a poor blind Arabian, then at Paris, and very skilful in the Arabick Language and Customs, and also in the Turkish, as one that might be useful to him.

In December or January following, Ludovicus Forgius, Doctor of Physick at Saumur, writes to Mr. Pocock, desiring his Permission to be his Disciple, and that he would explain such difficult Passages, as he (Forgius) should hereafter meet with in reading Arabick Books; which Mr. Pocock answered, with a Promise of his best Services.

Dr. Ralph Cudworth, of Cambridge, the celebrated Author of the Intellectual System, addressed himself by Letter to our Author, March 14, 165$\frac{7}{8}$, desiring an Extract out of Emir Chond, concerning the Persian Kings from Cyrus, to Alexander, their Number, Names, Years of Reign, and chiefest Actions; especially, if any Thing be found there, that is agreeable to what is recorded in Scripture or Greek Histories.

In

In the ſame Month of the following Year, Jacobus Alting, by Letter, recommends to Mr. Pocock's good Offices, two Hungarian Youths, who were travelling for Improvement of their Studies, he ſays, they are pii, eruditi, honeſti.

Again, in the ſame Month of the next Year, Alting ſends to our Author two Copies of his Book de Schilo, which he had dedicated to him, and to his Landlord, Dr. Reynolds, and withal, recommends to him the Bearer D. Pauli, whom he calls a moſt excellent Youth, and the Son of an Orthodox Divine at Dantzick.

MAY 17, 1660, Mr. William Seaman, who, at the Requeſt, and by the Encouragement of the Honourable Gentleman ſo oft mentioned for his noble Zeal to promote and propagate the Chriſtian Religion, Robert Boyle, Eſq; conſults Mr. Pocock, as he had before done in this Work, about the Propriety of ſome Turkiſh Words: By which it appears, that our Profeſſor was looked on, as an Oracle in that, as well as the Arabick Tongue.

THEODORE HAACK, a Dutch Gentleman, who had for ſome Years reſided in London, on the Account of a religious and learned Deſign, wrote to Mr. Pocock, June 18, 1660, recommending to him two Gentlemen, the younger a Baron of Seltz, of near Relation to his Highneſs, the Prince, Elector Palatine, the other Mr. Fabritius, who was like to ſucceed Dr. Hottinger at Zurich: At the ſame Time he acquaints him, that Theodorus Petræus was printing, in Holland, his Pſalterium Copticum. About the ſame Time alſo this Gentleman recommended two Germans, one of Heſſia, a Civilian, the other of Thuringia, Student in Phyſick.

MARCH 16, 166$\frac{0}{1}$, Hottinger writes to Dr. Pocock from Heidelberg, to acquaint him, that he had dedicated a Book to him, which he ſends by one [u] Horneck, a Palatine, one, for his Age, well acquainted with the Oriental Languages, who was coming over to learn Engliſh, and to make an Acquaintance with our Connoiſeurs.

The latter End of the Month following, the Honourable Robert Boyle, Eſq; deſires Dr. Pocock to favour, with his Advice and Directions, Elzevir the Leyden Printer, who was coming into England, and he thinks going to Oxford, to ſee what he can get out of our Books and MSS. touching a new Edition of Joſephus. Which however, I think, he did not publiſh.

AUGUST the 16th of this Year, Alting, in a Letter propoſes a Difficulty in the Prophecy of Balaam, and recommends the Bearer of it, Joh. Jacob de Loſſe, of Berne. In a Poſtſcript, dated Auguſt the 26th, he owns the Receipt of a Letter, ſince the Finiſhing of this, in Anſwer to a former one, in which Alting had propoſed his Opinion of the Word ברא, which ſame Opinion the Doctor tells him, he himſelf had formerly defended, which Alting beſeeches him to believe, he had not before obſerved; otherwiſe he ſhould not have propounded it.

On the 10th of May, 1662, his Serene Highneſs Charles Lewis, Elector Palatine, did Dr. Pocock the Honour of a Letter, ſigned with his own Hand, deſiring him to favour with free Acceſs to him, Frederick Miege, Son to his Vice-chancellor, who was deſirous of improving his Knowledge in Theology, and the Oriental Languages, at Oxford. And to the ſame Purpoſe Hottinger wrote likewiſe, telling Dr. Pocock, that this Gentleman having ſeen the Univerſities of Germany, was now going for England, which he calls Abſtruſioris Literaturæ Sedem.

In the End of the ſame Month, Mr. Thorndike, in a Letter to our Author, recommends a Jew of Amſterdam to him, whoſe Buſineſs at Oxford was, the Vending of a Book, which he had printed, and which Mr. Thorndike conceives to be a fit Entrance into the Reading of the Rabbins. He alſo expreſſes ſome Hopes, that this Jew might be converted to the Chriſtian Religion.

JUNE 3, of this Year, Iſaac Avendano (the ſame, I preſume, who afterwards taught Hebrew in Oxford) brought Letters recommendatory from Dr. Caſtel to Dr. Pocock, in which that learned Perſon calls him an Oracle, unto which, all thoſe who travel with publick Deſigns, are wont to make their Reſort.

Dr. Morley, Biſhop of Wincheſter, wrote to our Author, May 16, 1663, in favour of the Bearer, to whom he deſires he would extend his Care and Kindneſs, and Directions for learning the Hebrew, and other Oriental Languages; adding, that, if he was not much deceived, that Perſon would make very good Uſe of them. He does not name the Party on whoſe Behalf he writes; but, by comparing the Time, and ſome other Circumſtances, I am induced to conjecture, that it was Mr. George Hooper [x], afterwards Dean of Canterbury, and then ſucceſſively Biſhop of St. Aſaph, and Bath and Wells: And, if I gueſs right, Biſhop Morley preſaged of him very juſtly! For he lived, till he had not his Superior for Piety, Extent [u] He was afterwards an eminent Preacher at the Savoy, and Author of ſeveral Books in the devotional Way.

[x] He was firſt, Chaplain to Biſhop Morley, who preſented him to the Living of Havant, near Portſmouth, and afterwards to the Rectory of Eaſt-Wood-Hay, in Hants: After that, he became Chaplain to Archbiſhop Sheldon. This very Year he commenced Maſter of Arts at Chriſt-Church. In ſhort, it is Fact, and certain, that Mr. Hooper, in the former Part of his Life, was both encouraged and aſſiſted by Dr. Pocock in the Proſecution of his Oriental Studies, and in the Application of Arabick Learning, towards clearing up Difficulties in the Holy Scriptures, and more eſpecially in the Book of Job.

tent of Learning, and every good Quality, that could adorn a Biſhop, a Gentleman, or a Scholar.

ON the 28th of the ſame Month, Mr. Boyle ſent a Paper to Dr. Pocock, wherein Mr. Oldenburg, then Secretary to the Royal Society, begs, on the Behalf of an ingenious French Gentleman, his Correſpondent, our Profeſſor's Thoughts upon a certain Inſcription, found at Perſepolis, among ſome Ruins, 'which, adds Mr. Boyle, intelligent Travellers of my Ac-'quaintance, that have viſited them, profeſs to be the nobleſt and moſt worthy of Obſerva-'tion, they ever met with in Europe or Aſia.'

JULY the 25th of this Year, Mr. Oldenburg writes a Latin Anſwer, to that of Dr. Pocock, which gave an Account of the Perſepolitan Inſcription, thanking him for it, and promiſing to tranſmit it to his Correſpondent. He further acquaints the Doctor, that a Friend of his Correſpondent was about publiſhing Petrus Bleſenſis, a Writer of the 12th Century, who had freely taxed the Manners of the Court and Clergy of Rome, deſiring, if any ἀνέκδοτα of that Writer ſhould be found in the Libraries of either Univerſity, to have them procured, and requeſting the Doctor to make proper Inquiries at Oxford. Certain it is, that four Years after this, viz. 1667, the Works of Petrus Bleſenſis were publiſhed at Paris, by Petrus de Guſſanvilla, in Folio, with Notes and various Lections, who, therefore, moſt probably, was the Friend of Mr. Oldenburg's Correſpondent, above-mentioned.

THE 6th of the following Month, Golius writes to our Author, recommending to him a Tranſylvanian of an illuſtrious Family, named John Nadanyi.

AND thus, at one View, the Reader has the Hiſtory of the Applications made to Dr. Pocock, after his ſecond Return from the Eaſt, and the various Recommendations of Foreigners to him, down to the Year 1663; which, I think, will be compleat, after I have told him, that the pious and learned Dr. Hammond frequently conſulted him by Letter, whilſt he was preparing his excellent Annotations on the New Teſtament, and alſo on the Pſalms; that with reſpect to the latter, the Books into which that Work was divided, were conſtantly ſubmitted to our Author's Animadverſions, before they ſaw the Preſs; which ſtood ſtill, ſo long as Dr. Pocock's urgent Affairs witheld him from ſurveying what Copy was ſent to him. So great Deference did even the moſt learned of his Contemporaries pay to the Judgment and Erudition of this humble and excellent Man!

I HAVE nothing to add under the preſent Year, (1663) but that our Author, about the Middle of it, was viſited with Sickneſs, which, as I take it, proved a very ſevere one, being that, which ended in Lameneſs, that continued to the Day of his Death. After he had contracted this Lameneſs, he could not walk for Exerciſe, as before he was wont to do, twice a Day; but was obliged to ſubſtitute, inſtead of Walking, the Exerciſe of Pulling at a Dumb-Bell. Dr. Pocock's eldeſt and very learned Son Edward, in a Letter to Mr. Smith of Dartmouth, places this Sickneſs two Years later, viz. Anno 1665, which was the Year of the Plague, and in which, conſequently, was an entire Ceſſation of Correſpondence. But this is certain, that the firſt Compliments we meet with on Dr. Pocock's Recovery, are in a Letter of Mr. Boyle's, dated June 18, 1668, and then he only rejoices, that Dr. Pocock had recovered a great Meaſure of Strength. Dr. Narciſſus Marſh, ſome Time ago Primate of Ireland, in a Letter, written by him, when Archbiſhop of Dublin, ſpeaks of this long Sickneſs, and of our Profeſſor's eminent Patience and Reſignation under it, but gives us not the Year in which it happen'd; only ſays, it was many Years before his Death; that it was occaſioned by a Humour, which fell into his Thigh, and that thereby he became lame, continuing ſo to his Dying-Day.

AFTER this, we meet with nothing remarkable in the Series of our Author's Correſpondence, till the Year 1666, when Mr. William Seaman [y] publiſhed his Turkiſh New Teſtament, undertaken at the Deſire of the Honourable Mr. Boyle, and greatly forwarded by his Liberality. A Copy of this he begs Dr. Pocock to accept of, in a Letter, dated July 17.

IN April, 1668, Dr. Pocock had a Letter from Sir Joſeph Williamſon, with an Arabick Letter incloſed, from the Emperor of Morocco to King Charles the Second, deſiring from him a Tranſlation of it, they having No-body in Town Maſters enough of that Language, to give the Contents of it.

IN June following, Mr. Boyle, writing to Mr. Samuel Clarke, after the Expreſſion of his Joy at Dr. Pocock's Recovery, deſires him to put him in Mind of the Promiſe he made him, [Mr. Boyle] that he would extract ſome unuſual Explications of Hebrew Texts out of his ancient Grammarians: But I cannot find, that our Author ever perfected any ſuch Deſign, nor that he left the Appearance of it behind him.

THE Year following, Mr. Seaman publiſhed his Turkiſh Grammar and Turkiſh Hiſtory, concerning which, ſeveral Letters paſſed between him, and our Profeſſor, who beſtowed great Care and Pains in correcting it, and in putting the Preface into better Latin, as Mr. Seaman himſelf freely and thankfully acknowledges: The ſame he did by the Epiſtle dedicatory to Mr. Boyle, who advanced twenty Pounds towards the Work, to be paid in Books.

SOME Time this Year, or the latter End of the foregoing one, Peter Clauſton, a learned Dane, as I take it, viſited Oxford, and became acquainted with our Profeſſor: In his Return home he was accompanied, as far as Leyden, by Mr. Edward Pocock, the Doctor's eldeſt Son, then Student of Chriſt-Church; and from thence, Mr. Clauſton writes to Dr. Pocock, giving him an Account of his Son's kind Reception from all the Learned of that Place, on the Account of his Father's great Learning and Humanity. He takes this Opportunity to recommend two of his Countrymen, travelling to England, unto the Profeſſor's Notice, the one a Son of the celebrated Antiquary Wormius, the other Mr. Borneman, whoſe Father had been Secretary to the King [of Denmark,] and each of whom had Brothers, that were Profeſſors in the Univerſity of their Country.

HIERONYMUS HARDER, May the firſt of this Year, conſults our Author on ſeveral Difficulties, relating to the Hiſtory of Sultan Saladine, which he was then preparing to publiſh with a Latin Tranſlation.

JUNE the 17th, Alting writes from Groningen, laments, that he could not ſee Dr. Pocock's Son in thoſe Parts, congratulates him on his Recovery of Health; complains, that his Collegue Mareſius, out of Envy, had charged him with Hereſy and Socinianiſm; that he had given much the ſame Treatment to the Leyden Divines, and particularly to the famous Cocceius; becauſe they would not come into his Cenſure, upon an Appeal to them.

MR. Francis Vernon, then at Paris, in a Letter, dated Sept. the 5th of this Year, at the Requeſt of Mr. Juſtel, acquaints Dr. Pocock, that a Friend of his [Mr. Juſtel's] intended to publiſh the Works of St. Leo Papa, and of Proſper Aquitanus, and deſires the Bodleian Library might be conſulted, to ſee, if any MSS. could be found there, that would be uſeful to his Deſign [z].

MARCH the 3d, $16\frac{89}{90}$, Mr. Bernard, from Leyden, writes, that Gronovius and his Son were preparing a new Edition of Polybius, with the Notes of Caſaubon, Valeſius, and their own, and corrected by ſome Manuſcript Copies, and that they deſired to have that in the Bodleian Library collated with the printed Copy, and tranſmitted to them.

THE 19th of the ſame Month he writes again, and ſays, that Harder, having tranſlated the Hiſtory of Saladine, cannot find a Bookſeller to undertake the Printing of it, ſo great was the Decay of Oriental Learning: For which Reaſon alſo he adds, that Mr. Thevenot cannot find a Bookſeller, either there, or at Amſterdam, to undertake his Abulfeda.

THIS Year was farther remarkable for the Publication of Dr. Caſtel's Lexicon in ſeven Languages, after ten Years immenſe Labour: Towards which, Dr. Pocock had contributed, by lending three Æthiopick MSS. and ten Æthiopick MS. Liturgies. We ſhall hear him hereafter complaining, how ill rewarded all his learned Pains were, which he had expended on this Lexicon. I ſhall only add, that, at the Time of his Death, he had a large Number of the Copies on his Hands; as appears from this Circumſtance, that in his laſt Will, he bequeathed 100 Sets of them to Dr. Compton, then Lord Biſhop of London.

APRIL the 20th, of the Year following, Lud. Ferrandus, a moſt ſurprizing young Frenchman, of whom more by and by, made his Application from Paris, by Letter, to Dr. Pocock, acquainting him, that he had undertaken to tranſlate the Annals of the Kings of France, and the Ottoman Emperors, a MS. in the Royal Library, written formerly in Hebrew by Joſeph the Prieſt, the Son of Jehoſſua, and intending to illuſtrate this Hiſtory with Notes likewiſe taken principally from Arabick Writers, he humbly deſires the Doctor to ſupply him with what ſuch Arabick Books, as he has read, ſay of the French Hiſtory, and chiefly of the Expeditions by them made into the Eaſt, or at leaſt, to direct him to the Books, wherein Memoirs of this Sort are to be found.

THIS Year, Mr. Huntington, a great Friend and future Correſpondent of our Profeſſor, ſet out for Aleppo, to officiate there, as Chaplain to the Engliſh Factory.

MR. Vernon, from Paris, dates a Letter November 12, of the Year we are now in, the chief Deſign of which was to entertain Dr. Pocock with the Hiſtory of Monſieur Ferrand, above ſpoken of, to whom he had juſt delivered the Doctor's Anſwer to his Letter. His Story is as follows:

'MONSIEUR Ferrand is by Birth a Provencal, a Native of the Town of Thoulon, of 'ſome 25 Years of Age: From his Infancy he was always addicted to the Study and Ad- 'miration of Oriental Languages; to which, beſides the Diſpoſitions which Nature had given 'him, Fortune adminiſtred ſome accidental Helps: For being born in a maritime Town, 'where was a great Concourſe of Strangers, and particularly of Levantines, brought thither 'by [z] Father Queſnel actually publiſhed theſe Works at Paris, in 1675, and therefore, probably, was Mr. Juſtel's Friend, here ſpoken of: I am the more confirmed in this, becauſe in the following December, Mr. Vernon owns the Receipt of a Letter from Mr. Bernard, incloſed in one from Dr. Pocock, which had given him great Satisfaction, and becauſe another of Mr. Vernon's Letters, after this, mentions a Preſent of Books ſent by Father Queſnel to Mr. Bernard. Laſtly, Father Queſnel, in his 12th Diſſertation upon St. Leo's Works, pays a Compliment to Mr. Bernard, on his indefatigable Zeal for the Promotion of Literature.

'by the Allurements of Trade and Riches, which they hope to acquire by a Correſpondence 'in France; among much other Acquaintance with thoſe Foreigners, he ſays, he made one 'very intimate with an Arabian Merchant, a Perſon as well furniſhed in his Mind, as he was 'rich in his Fortunes. This Man he repreſents, as one the moſt abounding with Courteſy, 'the moſt obliging in Behaviour, and the moſt learned of any he had ſeen or converſed with 'before; nay, he queſtions, whether he ought to prefer any, that he has ſeen ſince. This 'Man (he ſays) if he had not had natural Longings after Eaſtern Faſhions and Writings, 'which, he profeſſes to have had, would have inſpired him with a Love and Eſteem for 'them; ſo extremely did his Perſon ſeem to recommend and grace, what Mr. Ferrand's 'Fancy had given him great Inclinations to before. To this Arabian, then, he made his 'conſtant Reſort; with him he ſpent all thoſe Hours, which were in his own Diſpoſal, and 'none of his Studies or Recreations were pleaſant to him, except ſuch as he took in his 'Company. This Arabian had great Store of Manuſcripts, and theſe he taught him to read; 'many of theſe were Hiſtorical, and with theſe he diverted himſelf. Thus he ſpent, what 'he calls the happieſt Part of his Life, till the Style of the World, and the Commands of 'his Friends, brought him to Paris, where they intend he ſhall compleat his Studies: He 'hath his Reſidence in the Univerſity, in the College des Threſoriers, where his Friends de-'ſigned him for Phyſick; but his own Genius irreſiſtibly carries him another Way, viz. to 'Oriental Studies, to which, for the moſt Part, he applies himſelf. The main of his Time 'he ſpends in the King's Library; where his great Aſſiduity and eminent Parts have brought 'him acquainted with the learned Perſons that reſort thither: So that now he is not only 'known for a prodigious Proficient in Oriental Learning, among Men of Science, but is alſo 'taken Notice of by Monſieur Colbert, who hath the Care and Superintendency of Learning, 'as well as of what elſe contributes to the Honour and Advantage of the French Nation. 'This able Miniſter looks upon Monſieur Ferrand, not only as an accompliſhed Scholar, but 'alſo as an uſeful Member, and Ornament of the State.'

On the 28th of this ſame Month, Harder, ſhortly after Profeſſor of Oriental Languages at Leyden, probably, in the Room of the great Golius, writes to Dr. Pocock, and gives him a moſt melancholy Account of the Neglect of Arabick Literature in that Univerſity, or rather of the Contempt it lay under there: Two Cauſes he aſſigns for it; firſt, Golius, he thinks, did not exerciſe the Students, not even thoſe that were maintained at the publick Expence, in theſe Studies, nor uſe his Authority to make them take Pains therein: 2*dly*, He blames the Avarice of the Age, which gave no Attention to any Sciences, that were not greatly lucrative.

In the Beginning of the following Year, Hieron. Harder writes, that he was very lately made Reader of the Oriental Tongues by the Curators of Leyden: In which Employment, his Hopes of giving them Satisfaction were founded on our Profeſſor's Direction and Aſſiſtance, which, he flatter'd himſelf, would not be wanting to him upon any emergent Difficulty.

Another Letter from the ſame Hand, dated May 23, 1671, brought a Recommendation of Mr. Furcardus, a Licentiate in Law, and a Man of good Learning, who was going for England.

In this Year, the Profeſſor's eldeſt Son, Mr. Edward Pocock, publiſhed, with a Latin Tranſlation of his own, an Arabick Piece of Ebn Tophail, the Title of which was, Philoſophus Autodidactus, ſive Epiſtola Abi Jaafer Ebn Tophail de Hai Ebn Yokdhan. In quâ oſtenditur, quomodo ex Inferiorum Contemplatione ad Superiorum Notitiam Ratio humana aſcendere poſſit. It is an ingenious Fiction, giving the Hiſtory of Ebn Yokdhan, who, the Author tells us, according to ſome, was produced in one of the Indian Iſlands under the Æquinoctial, where Men come into the World without Father or Mother. Others relate his Beginning in this Manner: Over-againſt that wonderful Iſland was another large one, under the Sovereignty of a proud and jealous Prince, who, having a beautiful Siſter, ſtrictly guarded her from marrying, becauſe he deſpaired of finding her a Huſband of ſuitable Quality: But a Relation of his, by Name Yokdhan, nevertheleſs privately married her, and by him ſhe had the Hero of this Fable, Ebn Jockdhan: As ſoon as he was born, and his Mother had ſuckled him, for fear her Marriage ſhould be diſcovered, ſhe expoſed him to the Sea, in a Cheſt properly contrived, at high Water, which carried him to the oppoſite Iſland above-mentioned; where his Cries brought a She-Goat, which had lately loſt her Kid, and which ſuckled and brought him up. He proved afterwards of a diſcerning and contemplative Spirit, and by progreſſive Reaſonings with himſelf, from what he ſaw, formed a Syſtem of Natural Philoſophy, Morality, and Metaphyſicks. In the 50th Year of his Age, Aſal, a Perſon of a contemplative Diſpoſition, who came thither from a neighbouring Iſland, for the Sake of Retirement, found Yokdhan, taught him Language, and got from him all the Account he was able to give of his Original, and the Hiſtory of his gradual Approaches to a Knowledge of, and intimate Conjunction with God. Dr. Pocock prefixed a learned Preface to his Son's Book, concerning the Name and Age of the Arabian, that wrote the Original, which led Foreigners, eſpecially thoſe of France, to conſider the Whole, as the Father's Performance.

Mr.

MR. Vernon writing to Dr. Pocock, from Paris, Sept. 7, of this Year, tells him, that he had delivered a Copy of this Book to Monſieur Capellain of the Sorbonne, for which he was very thankful, being much delighted with it; he acquaints him, that his own Copy he had preſented to Mr. Huygens, of the Royal Academy; that Mr. Herbelote, and Mr. De la Croix, both eminent Oriental Scholars, had read, and approved it: He adds, that Mr. Thevenot had Abn Tophail (the Arabick Author, tranſlated by Mr. Pocock) his Life in Manuſcript; that he informs him, he was a Philoſopher of great Note and Eminence in his Age, that he was Averroes's Maſter, and that he had like to have made a new Sect among the Mahometans, being withal of an active Spirit.

IN September this Year, 1671, the Learned Mr. Beveridge, afterwards Biſhop of St. Aſaph, writes his Thanks to Dr. Pocock, for having peruſed the Arabick Paraphraſe of the Canons, with his [Mr. Beveridge's] Tranſlation, deſiring the Continuance of his Care, and ſubmitting himſelf wholly to his Judgment.

MR. Vernon, in November of the ſame Year, writes again to our Author, from Paris, acquainting him, that, together with his, would come two more Letters, one from Dr. Capellain, the other from Monſieur Ferrand, to both of whom he had, by the Doctor's own Direction, preſented his Son's Book; he is ſorry he had not begged a Copy for Mr. Thevenot, who was much taken with the Fancy of the Piece, and intended to make the Profeſſor a Preſent of the Life of its Author, Abn Tophail, in Arabick. He adds, that Abbot Panciatichi, by that Time arrived at Florence, would make the Value of it known there, and that he perceived they every where made Account of it. Mr. Ferrand's Letter is yet extant; he gives a handſome Compliment to the Piece, declaring himſelf at a Loſs, which to admire moſt, the Author's Elegance, or his Interpreter's Exactneſs. Mr. Capellain's Letter did not accompany Mr. Vernon's, as will appear from the Date of it in the next Article.

MONSIEUR La Grange le Capellain, a Sorboniſt, and Author of Mare Rabbinicum infidum, againſt Chavigny, to whom Dr. Pocock, as above, ſent a Preſent of his Son's Book, and thanked the Doctor for it; having received a Letter ſince from him, writes, in Anſwer to it, one, dated February 17, 1672, in which he recommends the Bearer Ottſius, a Swiſs, a Perſon well-ſkilled in Biblical and Rabbinical Hebrew, and now going for England to learn Arabick, tanquam ad Fontem unde felicius & uberius hauriri poſſit. He inquires about Rabbi Tanchum, mentioned in the Profeſſor's Letter, whether it was a printed Book, or only a Manuſcript: So little known was that moſt excellent Commentator, till Dr. Pocock apprized the World of him.

OTTSIUS, the learned Swiſs above-mentioned, was alſo at the ſame Time commended to Dr. Pocock's Regards, by Mr. Ferrand: Herein alſo he deſires to purchaſe a Copy of the Philoſophus Autodidactus for the famous Francis Boſquet, firſt Biſhop of Lodeve, and afterwards of Montpellier, who, hearing of the Book, by Letter from Monſieur Ferrand, earneſtly deſired him to procure one, and impatiently expected it.

FROM two of Mr. Bernard's Letters this Year, I find, the Profeſſor was much urged by his Friends, to publiſh his Chiliads of Arabick Proverbs, which had lain by him, finiſhed for the Preſs, between 30 and 40 Years: The Encouragement he had to proceed in it, ſeemed, at this Time, not inconſiderable. Dr. Caſtel had promiſed to ſecure a hundred Books for Cambridge, and a ſtill greater Proportion might be depended upon in Oxford, beſides what the Aſſiduity of his good Friends in London, ſuch as Mr. Boyle, Dr. Gale, Mr. Haack, &c. might get off: But, for Reaſons, of which we can give no Account, nothing was done in the Buſineſs, either then, or at any Time afterwards.

MR. Huntington, in February, 1671, wrote to Dr. Pocock, deſiring, if any yet remained undiſpoſed of, ſome Copies of his Arabick Grotius de Veritate, which Mr. Boyle readily and thankfully ſupplied, to the Number of 30, and with them 12 Copies of Mr. Seaman's Turkiſh Catechiſm: Of theſe our Author gave Mr. Huntington Notice, in a Letter, dated the 23d of Auguſt following: To accompany theſe, he ſent three Dozen of our Church Catechiſms rendered into Arabick, which he had juſt then printed for the Uſe of the young Chriſtians in the Eaſt, intending that more ſhould follow, if God permit. He tells his Friend, he was at a Loſs, out of what Copy to take the Commandments, which, at laſt, he determined to do out of the Polyglott Bible. At the End, he farther tells him, are added ſome Places of Scripture, containing the moſt general Principles of Religion: To which ſhould have been added, the Inſtitution of the Lord's Supper, from 1 Cor. xi. but their Haſte to have it out of the Preſs ſoon enough for the preſent Opportunity of ſending them, prevented it. He proceeds to expreſs his Wiſhes, that the chief Prayers of our Engliſh Liturgy were in Arabick, and his Aſtoniſhment, that he never found the Divine Hymn of Te Deum in the Eaſtern Languages: The Reaſon of which probably was, that this Hymn was the Compoſition of a Latin Father, [St. Ambroſe] whereas, I think, the Eaſtern Liturgies were made agreeably to the Formularies uſed in the Greek Church. However, Dr. Pocock, as his Son informs us, added this Hymn to his Arabick Catechiſm. He repeats his former Requeſt to procure him the Books of which Mr. Huntington had a Catalogue, ſuch as were written by Jews in the Arab. Language. 'But, continues he, my chief Longing is for the firſt Part of Rabbi 'Tanchum's Book, which he calls כתאב אלביאן, Cetab ol Bian, which are his Notes on the 'whole Old Teſtament. That firſt Part he calls אלכליאת, Al Coliyat, i. e. Generalia, 'wherein he treats of all Things neceſſary to the Interpretation of Scripture, as Metaphors, 'Parabolical Expreſſions and Words, either unuſual, or of divers Acceptions and Difficulties 'in Chronology, divers Readings, and the like.' He recommends to him the Methods, by which, when he was in the Eaſt, he got all the Pieces he then had of Tanchum, viz. Joſhua, Judges, Samuel, and the Kings, and Jeremy, Ezekiel, and the twelve minor Prophets.

On the 17th of Auguſt this Year, Mr. Oldenburg, before-mentioned, wrote to Dr. Pocock, on the Behalf of Dr. Fogelius, one of the chief Phyſicians of Hamburgh, deſiring the Profeſſor to give him the Meaning of ſome Turkiſh Names of Medicines, and alſo to inform him, whether the Book de Voluptate Animi, of Badroddini, be at Oxford or Cambridge, and whether it be a MS. or a printed Book.

By ſeveral Letters written from Dr. Caſtel, in March, of the next Year, I find, that our Profeſſor intended then an Edition of his Arabick Chiliads of Proverbs, and that, in order thereto, he printed and diſperſed a Specimen of the Work. Dr. Caſtel earneſtly preſſed the Perfecting of that Piece, and, to encourage it, frequently repeated his Promiſe of becoming reſponſable for 100 Copies. From one of his Letters it appears alſo, that Dr. Pocock was then thought to be preparing ſomething of Rabbi Tanchum and Maimonides's More Nebochim, for the Publick: As to the former of theſe, the Reality of it is intimated by himſelf in a Letter to Mr. Huntington this Year, and that it was the Deſire of a Learned Sorboniſt (De la Grange le Capellain) as likewiſe of ſome at home: But for the latter, I rather take it to have been the Deſign of the Doctor's eldeſt Son, Mr. Edward Pocock. For about this Time, Mr. Locke, ſince that ſo well known to the World, in a Letter to the Father, mentions his having engaged his Son at Saliſbury, in tranſlating and printing a Part of Maimonides, and that he had ſpoken with Mr. Boyle about it: He deſired alſo to have it printed, juſt as that Piece tranſlated by Mr. Prideaux [a] was. He further aſſured Dr. Pocock, that it would greatly encourage thoſe, who wiſhed well to the Work, if he could aſſure them, that it ſhould be done under the Father's Direction. But of all theſe, Dr. Caſtel urged moſt the Publication of the Arabick Chiliads, as moſt grateful to all the truly Learned, offering to leave no Stone unturn'd to effect the Vending of the Edition: 'Not, adds he, of the Proverbs only, but as to the 'other Jewiſh Authors alſo, having a very high Eſteem and Value for them, eſpecially Rabbi 'Tanchum, offering, at the ſame Time, himſelf carefully to correct the Errata.' The ſame Learned Arabick Profeſſor of Cambridge was at this Time labouring to purchaſe the Golian Library for his Univerſity; a private Perſon of his Acquaintance being willing to venture about 700 Pounds for it. But the Executors hoping to make a more advantageous Sale, refuſed the Offer; of which they dearly repented afterward, being compelled, more than 20 Years after, to ſell them by Auction, and probably to leſs Advantage. At which Time, Dr. Edward Bernard made a Journey into Holland, and bought the choiceſt of them for Dr. Narciſſus March, then Archbiſhop of Dublin. See Dr. Smith's Life of Dr. Bernard, p. 50, 51.

This Year, Mr. Huntington travelled to Mount Libanus, in order to make ſome learned Diſcoveries there, but was prevented by ſome Infirmity, which, when he was within two Hours of the Patriarch, came upon him, and diſabled him from Walking. However, he procured R. Tanchum's Morſhed, in three Volumes, and ſome imperfect Pieces of his upon the Scripture, which he ſent, as a Preſent, to our Profeſſor: A better Copy of Al Morſhed was afterwards tranſmitted to Mr. Huntington, from Damaſcus, of which he offered Dr. Pocock his Choice. He had likewiſe found, to his great Joy, Cozari in Arabick, the whole Diſputation.

In March, 1673, Dr. Martin Fogelius, of Hamburgh, before-mentioned, having received our Profeſſor's Anſwer to his Quæries, concerning the Narcoticks of the Turks, by the Means of Mr. Oldenburg: To ſome of which he replied from the Lexicons, to others from his own Uſe and Obſervation, whilſt he lived amongſt them: He now deſires a more diſtinct Account, what Quantities, how oft, to what End, and with what Effect he took them. He further conſults him about a Difficulty in the Nubian Geographer: To which Dr. Pocock obligingly and fully replied. Dr. Fogelius had then a Tract by him ready for the Preſs, De Turcarum Nepenthe, which made him more particularly inquiſitive on theſe Subjects.

In September of the preſent Year, Mr. Huntington wrote a long Epiſtle to Dr. Pocock, which produced his next publick Performance, viz. the Arabick Verſion of our Engliſh Liturgy: It may be remembred, that the Profeſſor, writing to Mr. Huntington, more than a Year before, had wiſhed, that the chief Prayers of our Engliſh Liturgy were in Arabick: Taking Occaſion from hence, and from his Arabick Catechiſm, he repreſents to the Doctor, what excellent Service our Liturgy would do in the Eaſt, if it were univerſally tranſlated into the ſame Language. 'Undoubtedly, adds he, this [the Catechiſm] is but a Specimen of your 'further Deſign, and that thereby you would gueſs, how it might be accepted, before you 'accompliſhed the Whole. Really, continues he, if you will believe the People, they wonder a Frank ſhould underſtand their Tongue, better than the moſt learned among them: 'And they ſee the two Tables, once more intire and perfect, not abuſed and broken, as in 'all

[a] Afterwards Dr. Prideaux, the Learned Dean of Norwich.

'all the Methods and Syſtems of Divinity, that the Romaniſts have hitherto conveyed, for 'ought I know, into theſe Places ——— And, proceeds he, if this be ſo acceptable, what 'would the whole Service be, when the People here ſhall read it ſo fully expreſſed in the 'Language wherein they are born? No one is, nor ever will be, (beſides yourſelf) fit for 'the Employment: For it well becomes the beſt Liturgy in the World, to be beſt tranſlated; 'and in this Caſe, every one that knows your Name, knows where alone to reſt his Ex-'pectation.'

ANOTHER Inducement he offers, which is, that it will convince a Sort of Men, who have brought a Fancy out of Europe, and which they would have believed here, that we have little or no Religion in England, and that what we have, is quite overſpread with Errors and Hereſy: This he thinks the Natives more apt to credit, becauſe (which is a Thing very unhappy) we do not punctually obſerve the ſolemn Days and Times, in which their Religion chiefly conſiſts. To this he adds, the Need that the Greek Chriſtians have of Devotional Books; their Eſteem for the Church of England above all others; their Agreement with it in Doctrine, excepting the Points of the Proceſſion of the Holy Ghoſt and Tranſubſtantiation; concerning the latter of which, they talk very differently, neither agreeing with one another, nor yet, at different Times, with themſelves.

TOWARDS the Expence of this Tranſlation, Mr. Huntington generouſly offered twenty Pounds at preſent, for procuring of Paper, intimating, that he would readily advance the whole Charge, if he lived to be worth ſo much, if it ſhould happen, that no other Benefactors offered their Aſſiſtance.

BEFORE our Author could receive this Propoſal, he had written again to Mr. Huntington, ſtill reminding him of Rabbi Tanchum's Works, for getting of which intire, he was at preſent the more ſollicitous, becauſe the Learned World, both at home and abroad, deſired, that ſomething of that Author might be publiſhed. He likewiſe recommends to him, an Enquiry after what is to be had or known from the Samaritans, and from the Karraim Jews, if any ſuch were in thoſe Parts. Laſtly, he begs, that he would examine the Syrians, what Creature is by them called Yoruro, whether it be not a Jackall: Hereby he hoped to correct a Miſtake in the uſual Rendering of the Hebrew Tannim, by Dragons, which neither howl, nor have Breaſts, both which are attributed to the Animals, called Tannim, in the Hebrew Scriptures. At the ſame Time, he deſires Mr. Huntington would inform himſelf concerning the Noiſe which Oſtriches make. Whoever recollects, what Dr. Pocock has written on both theſe Subjects, in his Commentary on Micah, Ch. i. Ver. 8. which was made publick four Years after this, will think it no improbable Conjecture, that he had now begun that Work, or, at leaſt, was laying together an Apparatus for it.

IN November of this Year, 1673, Monſieur le Capellain paid his Reſpects to the Profeſſor, in a Letter, the Bearer of which was a ſtudious and noble Youth, his Name not mentioned, who came into England to ſee, and be acquainted with, our Men of Letters, and more particularly with Dr. Pocock.

THE next Year, i. e. 1674, appeared the Fruits of Mr. Huntington's Inſtances with Dr. Pocock, for tranſlating our Engliſh Common-Prayer into Arabick: He did not render the Whole of it into that Language, but only the chief Prayers, Hymns, &c. agreeably to what himſelf had, ſome Years before, wiſhed to ſee done. The Title of this Piece, as left with us by his eldeſt Son, in the Catalogue of his Father's Works, is, Partes præcipuæ Liturgiæ Eccleſiæ Anglicanæ, Linguâ Arabicâ. 1674. Mr. Edward Pocock's more particular Account of this Verſion of his Father's is, that it contained the daily Morning and Evening Prayers, the Order of adminiſtring Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper: To which, he likewiſe added, the Doctrine of the Church of England, comprehended in the 39 Articles, and the Arguments of our Homilies. Mr. Huntington had not, as he expected, the Honour of defraying the Expence of theſe uſeful Labours of his Friend: For the Univerſity of Oxford moſt worthily ſupplied the entire Expences of the Book; thereby precluding all private Benefactions. Of which more hereafter.

ON the 20th of March, Peace being then concluded between the Engliſh and Dutch, and the Literary Correſpondence once more open between Dr. Pocock, and his Friends in the Low Countries, Mr. Alting, of Groningen, took the firſt Opportunity of ſaluting the Profeſſor, congratulating the happy Change of Affairs between the two Nations, and recommending the Bearer of the Epiſtle, Anthony Klingler, of Zurich, a Student in Divinity, who, having ſpent a Year at Groningen, and, after that, a Winter at Leyden, was going thence to England.

IN the ſame Month, Dr. Thomas Greaves, in a Letter to our Author, expreſſes his Wiſhes, that ſome one would publiſh the Life of the Pious Cyril, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, together with the Occaſion and Manner of his Death: 'I have, ſays Dr. Greaves, moved Sir 'Cyril Wyche to undertake it, and have offered to contribute ſome Aſſiſtance.' The Reader, perhaps, may remember the Account given of this excellent and illuſtrious Perſon, towards the Beginning of the preſent Hiſtory, and particularly, how he honoured Sir Peter Wyche, then Embaſſador from King Charles the Firſt, at the Porte, with ſtanding Surety to his Son at his Baptiſm there, and giving him the Name of Cyril: And this will ſufficiently explain, how how it came to paſs, that Dr. Greaves applied to that Gentleman, and thought him the fitteſt to write the Patriarch's Story.

THIS Year alſo Dr. Pocock had the agreeable News from Aleppo, that his Friend Huntington had, after long Enquiry, procured for him Abu Wallids Allama.

IT was May, in the Year following, before the Tranſlation of the Engliſh Liturgy into Arabick reached Mr. Huntington, at Aleppo; who, upon the firſt hearing that ſo acceptable a Preſent was in its Way to him, wrote a moſt pious and thankful Letter to the Profeſſor, dated May 13, 1675. 'I find, ſays he in it, the Univerſity envied me the Honour of being 'a Benefactor to ſo good a Cauſe ——— However, I'll recover what I can by the religious 'Diſtribution of the Books.' He proceeds thus: 'I have ſeveral of the Grotius's, yet by 'me, rather out of the Apprehenſion I have of the Malice of ſome Chriſtians (who will 'hardly allow, that a Man of a different Opinion ſhould be inſtrumental to the Propagation 'of the right Faith) than from the unprompted Accuſation and downright Danger by the 'Turks. I did cut out the laſt Book in two or three Copies.'

UPON the actual Receipt of the Common Prayer made Arabick, which happened before the End of May, Mr. Huntington wrote again with a Profuſion of religious Joy to Dr. Pocock for his Labour of Love, as he calls that Work, and the Pledge of his Affection to thoſe People, among which he formerly lived: 'I expect, adds he, it ſhould meet with the greateſt 'Hindrance from the Latin Fathers: For they are unwilling the People ſhould know too 'much, that is, more than they think fit to teach them. Nor is this a needleſs Suſpicion: 'For if they were ſo much aggrieved, as I heard they were, becauſe you printed the Second 'Commandment at length in yours, which very impudently they have expunged out of 'their Catechiſms, how muſt they be concerned to find their Doctrines, ſome of them 'thwarted and poſitively denied? Neither is it reaſonable to expect, they ſhould allow the 'Articles, though of a whole Church, when they contradict their Opinions and Intereſts, 'ſince, upon the ſame Account, they dare renounce an expreſs Law of God!' The good Man proceeds in owning his Obligations, not only to the Profeſſor, but alſo to the Vice-Chancellor and the Univerſity, praying for their Happineſs and Proſperity, and ſucceſsful Progreſs in the like good Works: Nay, ſuch was his Zeal for the Promotion of true Religion, by the Means then put into his Hands, that he wiſhes to have born ſome ſmall Share in the Expence, tho' only in the Binding of the Books in marbled Paper, which he calls the moſt taking and proper Dreſs for them in thoſe Countries.

IN July of this Year, our Author received from Dr. Caſtel his Thanks and Compliments for the Preſent of our Engliſh Liturgy, moſt elegantly transfuſed, as he expreſſes himſelf, into Arabick. The Reader will pardon me, for obſerving on this Occaſion, that this very learned Gentleman, by converſing almoſt conſtantly with the Eaſtern Writers, ſeems to have made their lofty Ways of Expreſſion habitual to him, ſo as not to have been able to forbear them, even in his Epiſtolary Style.

MR. Huntington writes again the following November, and acquaints Dr. Pocock concerning his old Acquaintance, Father Celeſtine, the Carmelite, and Brother to the great Golius, that he was then gone in Miſſion with three others, to the Coaſts of Malabar, to confirm the Chriſtians of St. Thomas there, and to convert Infidels; that he enquired moſt affectionately after him, [Dr. Pocock] and made Mr. Huntington a Viſit, on purpoſe to underſtand the Doctor's Welfare, and to convey his Reſpects unto him: 'Very glad he was, adds he, to hear of 'your Performance in Eutychius, whom Selden, he ſaid, had injured, and in Abul-Pharai, a 'Book he commends mightily, but had not ſeen them in Print. Your Specimen he had per-'uſed, and gives it due Applauſe: He had heard of your Verſion of Grotius, and was 'wonderfully pleaſed with ſome Copies of it, which I preſented him, in your Name, and 'promiſed me a Thomas à Kempis, de Imitatione Chriſti, by him tranſlated into the ſame 'Language, ſome few of which he brought with him from Rome. He hath left a little 'Poem of St. Ephrem there ready for the Preſs, with his Tranſlation into Arabick, Turkiſh, 'Latin, &c. He renews his Age, he ſaith, and altho' 72, is healthy and vigorous, and 'walks as nimbly as ever. One Reaſon, why he was choſen for this Employment, may be 'his Skill in Syriack, the Holy Tongue of thoſe Chriſtians, to whom he is gone. From 'him I could not have expected a fair Account of your late Undertaking; nor is it in the 'Service itſelf, but the Articles and Homilies, where ſuch People find fault: And though 'it was not deſigned for them, they are ready to keep others from eſteeming it; and, 'to raiſe the Reputation of their own Doctrine, they are in Intereſt bound to decry 'ours.

'I SEND hereby two Letters from the Samaritans, in anſwer to Dr. Marſhal's, though 'in both of them, there is but one Paſſage properly anſwered: They are in a ſtrange A-'mazement, and know not what to think; but mighty willing they are to believe, they have 'ſuch Brethren, becauſe they would fain be the better for them. And if ever you hope to 'get any of their few Books, it muſt be upon ſome ſuch Conſideration, wherein, as Care 'ſhould be taken not to abuſe them, ſo neither to cheat yourſelves.'

THE Hiſtory of this Correſpondence between Dr. Marſhal and the Samaritans of Sichem, and of what gave Riſe to it, not being in every one's Hand, I ſhall here briefly lay the whole Matter before the Reader, out of Dr. Huntington's Epiſtles to the famous Job Ludolphus, Author of the Æthiopick Hiſtory. Whilſt the former of theſe was Chaplain to the Engliſh Factory at Aleppo, he took Galilee and Samaria in his Way to Jeruſalem. At Sichem, where, and at Gaza, the ſmall Remains of the Samaritans are found, he viſited them in order to get Information, and, if poſſible, ſome Books from them. The Samaritans aſked the Doctor, if there were any Hebrews in his Country, not meaning Jews, as he afterwards perceived, whom they hate, but Samaritans, to whom only they allow the Name of Iſraelites and Hebrews: The Doctor, ſuppoſing they aſked about Jews, innocently anſwered in the Affirmative; and, at the ſame Time, read ſome Sentences out of their ſacred Books, and written in their own Character. Hereupon they cried out with Tranſports of Joy, Theſe are truly Iſraelites, and our deareſt Brethren. The Doctor took Pains to undeceive them, affirming, that the Perſons, to whom his Anſwer related, were unqueſtionably Jews; but they hugged their Miſtake, and would by no Means be ſet right. After this, the Doctor told them, that they would do well to ſend a Book of their Law, with an Account of their Religion, Times of Prayer, Sacrifices, High Prieſts, Feaſts, Faſts, and all their Books, from which it would certainly appear, whether they were of the ſame Faith or not. Accordingly they ſent a Copy of their Law, and ſuch Letters as he deſcribed, which were tranſmitted to Dr. Marſhal, Rector of Lincoln-College in Oxford, and anſwered by him; and to this they again replied, the Correſpondence continuing many Years, and not ending, but with the Death of that very learned Perſon. See Huntingtoni Epiſt. Lond. Edit. à Th. Smith, S. T. P. An. 1704, p. 55, 56.

HENNINGUS WITTE, who, more than ten Years before, had ſeen and converſed with Dr. Pocock in England, wrote to him, May 24, 1676, on the following Occaſion, from Riga in Livonia, his own Country: He had for ſome Time been ingaged in a Deſign of writing Encomiums on all the moſt famous Writers of that Age, in each Part of Literature, and had already publiſhed ſome Decads, containing Memoirs of Divines, Civilians, and Phyſicians. He was now collecting Panegyricks on the moſt illuſtrious Philologers, Hiſtorians, Orators, and Philoſophers; but wanted Memoirs of the chief Engliſhmen, that, in the preſent Century, have cultivated theſe Sciences, having no Relation of this Sort in his Poſſeſſion, except of Mr. Cambden: He begs, therefore, that our Author would, by the Bearer, tranſmit to him, whatever he had to communicate in this Way.

This Year alſo began a Correſpondence between Dr. Pocock and Dr. Dudley Loftus, of Dublin, a Clergyman of a noble Family in the Kingdom of Ireland, and famous for his Skill in the Oriental Languages: He had been aſſiſting to Dr. Walton, in the Polyglott Bible, having tranſlated the Æthiopick New Teſtament into Latin, and was uſeful to Dr. Caſtel, in his Heptaglott Lexicon, as is owned by each of them in the Prefaces to their ſeveral Works. It is ſomewhat wonderful, that this Correſpondence had not commenced ſooner, conſidering the Nearneſs of theſe learned Perſons, and the Alliance of their reſpective Studies: Nor had it, perhaps, begun ſo ſoon, but for the Accident of a Chaldee Prieſt, who deſired Dr. Loftus's Letter to our Author, ſignifying his good Behaviour in Ireland, and the Succeſs of his Journey, to which Place Dr. Pocock, among others, had given him Commendatory Letters. Having this Opportunity, he deſires the Profeſſor to inform him, what Oriental Writers ſay concerning Dionyſius, the Compiler of a Catena upon the Bible, from Oriental Interpreters; and whether any of this Dionyſius's Works be extant in Oxford. Dr. Loftus had already publiſhed a Tranſlation of this Catena, upon the Goſpel of St. Mark, into Engliſh, and intended an Edition of him upon the four Goſpels, which was all he had of him. There are alſo ſome other learned and curious Quæries in this Letter, too long to be tranſcribed here.

Much about this Time alſo, I conceive, there was a Literary Commerce between Dr. Pocock, and Chriſtian Noldius, of Copenhagen, Author of the Concordantiæ Particularum Hebræo-Chaldaicarum, printed in the Year 1679: Such a Thing is ſpoken of by that learned Perſon, in his Vindiciæ, wherein, upon all Occaſions, he makes very honourable Mention of our Author.

Towards the End of this Year, or rather early in the Year following, viz. 1677, was publiſhed Dr. Pocock's Commentary on the Prophecy of Micah: What induced him to write on this, and afterwards on three more of the leſſer Prophets, rather than on others, is not eaſy to determine: The general Opinion is, that it was purſuant to a Scheme of Dr. Fell, then Dean of Chriſt-Church, and afterwards Biſhop of Oxford, who, intending to oblige the World with a Commentary on the entire Bible, or, at leaſt, of the Old Teſtament, made by the learned Hands of that Univerſity, had divided the Taſk among a ſet Number of them, and that the Books of Micah, Malachi, Hoſea, and Joel, fell to the Share of our Profeſſor. I ſhould be the more ready to give into this Account, becauſe it comes confirmed by his eldeſt Son; and yet it ſeems ſtrange, allowing this to be true, that, in his Dedication of his Commentary on Hoſea to Biſhop Fell, he ſhould particularly mention the Encouragement he had from him, to put that Work to the Preſs, and not take the leaſt Notice, that either this, or the two preceding Commentaries, owed their firſt Conception to him. All that Dr. Pocock himſelf has let us into, in his Preface to his firſt Commentary, that on Micah, is, that his chief chief Endeavour in thoſe Annotations, was to ſettle the genuine and literal Meaning of the Text, i. e. of the Hebrew Original: He had obſerved, that Interpreters often rendered this very differently from what we read in our Engliſh Bibles, and that in them alſo we have various Readings, or rather Rendrings in the Margin. He further acquaints the Reader, what Methods he uſed to come at this literal Meaning: And Tranſlations being a principal Help, he is hence led to ſpeak of them, eſpecially ſuch as are leſs generally known, viz. the Syriack and Arabick. But, becauſe it would be in vain to look after the literal Meaning of the Hebrew Text, ſo long as it was preſumed to be corrupt (a Prejudice that then increaſed much thro' the Writings of Capellus and others, againſt the Antiquity of Vowel Points in the Hebrew Bible) Dr. Pocock labours to ſhew, firſt, The Improbability of ſuch a Surmiſe, and how unlikely it was, that the Jews ſhould have corrupted their own Scriptures, either before or after the Time of Chriſt: As to the Argument for this ſuppoſed Corruption, ariſing from the Difference there is at preſent between the LXX Tranſlation made from the Hebrew ſome Centuries before the Coming of Chriſt, and the Hebrew Copies now extant, he ſhows, that it will prove nothing, till it ſhall appear, 1*ſt*, That the Copy, uſed by the Seventy, was truer than any preſerved among the Jews, and derived from them to us. 2*dly*, That the LXX Interpreters always followed the Letter of their Hebrew Copy, never venturing to give us their Senſe of it in different Words, or had not ſome Notions of the Words, which are not now ſo uſually known. 3*dly*, That the Verſion of thoſe Interpreters has been tranſmitted to us pure, as they made it, and free from Alteration or Mixture: But none of theſe Things, he thinks, has been, or can be ſufficiently proved. In a Word, as the Engliſh Verſion of the Bible, at preſent uſed, generally follows the Letter of the Hebrew Text, which was the main Object of our Author's Enquiry, ſo it became but one Labour to give us the literal Meaning of the Original, and to defend our authorized Tranſlation; which laſt he ſomewhere declares to have been the main End of theſe Commentaries [b].

Besides this, he had, probably, a Deſign to ſhew the Uſefulneſs of Rabbinical Learning towards underſtanding the Old Teſtament; and particularly to give the Learned World ſuch a Taſte of Rabbi Tanchum, as might induce them to encourage the Publication of him, which the Profeſſor had much at Heart, though he could never effect it.

But the predominant View of this great and good Man, in commenting on the Prophets, was to reſcue many noble Predictions, concerning Chriſt and the Times of the Goſpel, from that artful Confuſion into which they had been brought by the Jewiſh Doctors, who ſeldom leave the Letter of Scripture, but when it ſerves the Cauſe of Chriſtianity: In all ſuch Caſes, Grammar is no longer with them the Rule of Interpretation, but the Tradition of their Forefathers, ſet up at firſt out of mere Oppoſition to the Chriſtian Religion, is their ſole Guide. To encounter, therefore, with theſe, ſcarce any one was ſo well qualified, as Dr. Pocock, who had all their Oriental Learning, and knew their Writers better than themſelves did. Here then was a glorious Field for one of his Attainments to diſplay himſelf in. And was there nothing elſe to recommend his Commentaries, the vaſt Service done therein to the Argument for Chriſtianity from Prophecy, will give them Immortality.

In the End of his Preface to the Commentary on Micah, our Author informs us, that the Thing firſt propoſed was, to have given the Meaning of the Text in brief Marginal Notes, but this was laid aſide, leſt the Method ſhould be deemed too Magiſterial: And, indeed, nothing has contributed to render Dr. Pocock's Commentaries leſs perfect, than his inſuperable Modeſty, which ſometimes hindered him, in very material Points, from giving his Judgment upon differing Expoſitions. This, he apprehended, would be objected to his Performance; but at the ſame Time declares, He dared not do otherwiſe. The Generality of Readers, finding this now and then to be the Caſe, have taken up an Opinion, that Dr. Pocock was generally, if not univerſally, thus indeterminate: But how much they have wronged him herein, will be ſhewn hereafter, when we come to form a Judgment of his Commentaries at large.

This ſame Year alſo Dr. Pocock publiſhed his Commentary on Malachi, which, proceeding on the ſame Principles, and being directed to the ſame Ends with that on Micah, requires not a diſtinct Conſideration. Something, however, muſt be ſaid concerning the Appendix to this ſecond Commentary, which ſeems to have been a Latin Sermon, or rather a Part of one preached before the Univerſity of Oxford, upon the Meſſiah of the Jews, whom they call Ben Joſeph, of the Tribe of Ephraim: An Invention of theirs, long after our Saviour's Days, to anſwer ſuch Predictions in the Old Teſtament, as will not agree with him, whom they call Meſſiah Ben David. In this Diſcourſe, our Profeſſor ſhews the Novelty and Abſurdity of this Notion of a two-fold Meſſiah, and that Maimonides, one of their moſt learned Rabbins, ſeems to have been aſhamed of it, never once mentioning the Name of Ben Joſeph when he expounds the Prophecies concerning Meſſiah, but adapting them either to David, or the Meſſiah, who was to ſpring from him.

[b] His Words are: To adjuſt that of our laſt deſervedly approved Tranſlation with the Original, I look on as my main Buſineſs. Comm. on Hoſ. Chap. v. Ver. 2. p. 218.

It was ſome Allay to Dr. Pocock's Satisfaction, in having finiſhed the above-mentioned Commentaries, that he had an Account of the Death of two Friends: One, and the Principal of them, was the learned Dr. Thomas Greaves, Brother to our Author's dear Friend, Mr. John Greaves, and often mentioned in this Hiſtory; the other, Mr. Francis Vernon, of Chriſt-Church, between whom and Dr. Pocock many Letters paſſed, whilſt the former reſided at Paris. This unhappy Gentleman afterwards travelling into Perſia, juſt before he entered Spahan, was hurt in a Rencounter, upon a very trifling Occaſion, and died of his Wounds in that City, two Days after. Intelligence of this came in a Letter from Mr. Huntington, dated at Aleppo, June 1, 1677.

The ſame learned and pious Gentleman writes again to our Author, July the 4th of the following Year, thanking him for the Preſent of his Commentaries on Micah and Malachi. He adds, that he got the Samaritan Chronological Hiſtory from them with much ado, and hoped likewiſe for a Comment on their Law; of which Affair he had wrote at large to Dr. Marſhal. He concludes with an Account of the dreadful Havock made at that Time in the Levant by the Plague: At Smyrna there died 400 in a Day, and ſome Places were ſaid to be depopulated by it.

HENRY William Ludolph, Nephew to the famous Job Ludolph, Author of the Æthiopick Hiſtory, then upon his Return from England to his Unkle in Germany, deſires, by Letter, to carry what Commands Dr. Pocock had for that Country. Mr. Boyle had told him of the Correſpondence they had at Oxford with the Samaritans, at Sichem: Of which he deſires to carry ſome Account to his Unkle; and therefore prays an Anſwer to the following Quæries; Whether there was an Anſwer ſent from Oxford? Of what Contents? Who managed the Correſpondence? In what Language? By what Means it was conveyed, and if there came ſince a ſecond Letter from the Samaritans? To all theſe he received ſatisfactory Anſwers, which encouraged the Unkle afterwards to addreſs Letters to the ſame Sichemites, by a Portugueſe Jew, that lived in their Neighbourhood, to which he received Anſwers, which he printed in the Year 1688, with a Latin Tranſlation and Notes, adding thereto a Latin Verſion of the Letters from the ſame People to Oxford. Soon after the Arrival of the younger Ludolph at Frankfort, his Unkle wrote to Dr. Pocock a Letter of Thanks, for the Favours he had done his Nephew, during his late Reſidence in England: And taking this Opportunity, he deſires ſome Arabick Tranſcripts from Oxford, relating to the Æthiopick Hiſtory, which he [Job Ludolph] was then preparing, and begs an Explanation of ſome Paſſages in the Doctor's Abul-Farai, and his Notes thereupon, pertinent to the ſame Purpoſe. And leſt this Letter ſhould have miſcarried, he ſent another about a Month after, repeating the principal Matters contain'd in the former, and adding thereto, one more Requeſt, viz. to have an Arabick Manuſcript in the Bodleian Library, mentioned by Mr. Selden, in his Uxor Hebraica, tranſcribed and tranſmitted to him, for which, as well as the other Arabick Extracts, he would thankfully pay the Tranſcriber.

About this Time, Dr. Narciſſus Marſh, firſt Fellow of Exeter-College, and afterwards Principal of Alban-Hall in Oxford, and an intimate Friend of our Author's, was preferred to be Provoſt of the College of Dublin, the ſame who became Biſhop of Leighlin and Fernz, and afterwards ſucceſſively Archbiſhop of Caſhiels, Dublin, and Armagh. He was himſelf eminently learned, and a great Encourager of Learning in others: After his Settlement at Dublin-College, he wrote to Dr. Pocock, who either wanted Leiſure to write, or elſe a good Opportunity to ſend his Anſwer, till February in the Year $16\frac{79}{80}$, at which Time, he expreſſed his great Want of Dr. Marſh's good Converſe and Company. As to Literary News, Dr. Pocock writes to his Friend in the following Manner: 'I look not abroad among the new Books; 'I have not ſo much as ſeen Voſſius's Tract of his Sibyls, and ſuch others as are with it; 'but I am told, that he ſpeaks therein Things that are derogatory to Rabbinical Learning '(but that matters not much, as for other Things) and particularly (which is magis dolendum) 'to bring Diſreſpect and Contempt on the Hebrew Bible; and all authoritative, without good 'Proof or Reaſon: And I hear, that by ſome at Coffee-Meetings, it is cried up. It may 'be ſuſpected, that the Intention is to bring it into Doubt, whether we have any ſuch 'Thing, as a true Bible at all, which we may confide in, as God's Word. It is, I ſee, by 'ſome wiſhed, that the Verity of the Original Text might be vindicated from ſuch ſceptical 'Arguments, by ſome of Learning and Vigour, ſuch as yourſelf. However, I doubt not, 'but that, by God's Providence, as the Hebrew Text hath hitherto ſtood firm, ſo it will 'ſtill ſtand on its own Bottom to wear out all Aſſaults againſt it, and be, what it always was, 'received as the undoubted Word of God, when all the Arguments and Objections againſt it 'are vaniſh'd into Smoke.'

I have been the larger in this Tranſcript for Reaſons, which will appear hereafter.

The ſame Letter gives us Reaſon to believe, that Dr. Pocock had no ſooner publiſhed his Commentaries on Micah and Malachi, but he turned his Thoughts upon that of Hoſea, in which, at this Time, he appears to have made a conſiderable Progreſs. 'If you aſk, adds 'he, what I am doing, I am now in the Preſs with the Concluſion of the fifth Chapter of 'Hoſea; and, perhaps, the Beginning of the ſixth muſt be joined with it, to make up the 'entire N n in the ſecond Alphabet; ſo that what is already done, is longer than thoſe

'other

'other Commentaries of Micah and Malachi together, and, perhaps, is too long. I muſt 'be forced for a while to make a Pauſe, and hope, if God give Life and Leave, to go over 'the other Chapters in a ſhorter Way.' But the Doctor found himſelf in the End miſtaken: For the remaining Chapters take up as much Room, in Proportion, as the five firſt did.

To this Letter, Dr. Marſh wrote an Anſwer, dated April 17, 1680; in which he complains of the Want of new Books, occaſioned by the Ignorance and Obſtinacy of the Dublin Bookſellers. As to Dr. Pocock's Complaints againſt Iſaac Voſſius, and his Abettors, 'I am 'very much grieved, replies Dr. Marſh, at what you ſay concerning ſome Mens Deſign to 'invalidate the Authority of the Hebrew Text, and thereby of all the Old Teſtament. And 'certainly, it would not be hard to make them ſenſible of their Error (if not Ignorance 'therein) and retract: But ſuch a Work will never be undertaken by any Man of ordinary 'Modeſty, whilſt you live, if you do it not yourſelf: And certainly, were it not for the 'other Work, wherein you are engag'd, you would find it a hard Matter to reſiſt all the 'Importunity, that would be made uſe of to that Purpoſe.' After this, he propoſes a Critical Expoſition of his own upon James v. 12. deſiring our Author's Opinion about it: He alſo puts a Querie to him, what might be the Ground of the Rabbins (Ben Gerſom eſpecially) ſuppoſing Phinehas to be Elias.

On the 29th of this ſame Month, Dr. Marſh writes again to our Profeſſor, chiefly on the ſame Subject, but more largely, than in the former: And as I truſt the Reader will not be diſpleaſed to have the ſedate Thoughts of ſo great a Man, on a Subject of great Importance, I will lay the Whole of it here before him.

'I find, Dr. Voſſius's laſt, as well as former Books, have not done much Good (I wiſh 'they have not done the contrary) here: We have not many, that can judge of the Original; but I hope to breed up good Store that Way, ſince we have an Hebrew Profeſſor's 'Place lately ſettled on the College, to which Lecture I make all the Bachelors of Arts 'attend, and be examined thrice every Week, and they are likewiſe to be publickly examined in Hebrew, before they can take their Degree of Maſter in Arts, which I ſometimes do 'myſelf. I ſay, I think, we have not many in the whole Kingdom, that can judge of the 'Original Hebrew; and therefore, whatſoever Dr. Voſſius ſays, becauſe his Name is Voſſius, 'ipſe dixit, is enough to make it be believed; which ſeems to me the more inſufferable, be'cauſe they cannot, or elſe will not make any Diſtinction between Gerard and Iſaac Voſſius, 'nor conſider, which Way a Man's Talent lies, and whether he deals in a Subject, which he 'can maſter, or in one that maſters him: If they would do but thus much, I believe, ipſe 'dixit, would quickly ſtand for nothing, and that Iſaac would not long pride himſelf with 'the Plumes, wherewith Gerard's Fame has adorned him. Sir, I make the ſame Wiſhes and 'Prayers with you, and have the ſelf-ſame Hope, that God will raiſe up ſome able Man to 'vindicate (I may ſay) his own Cauſe: But I muſt add, that all Mens Eyes are fixt upon 'you; and I dare ſay, none will have the Confidence to think of putting Pen to Paper on 'ſuch a Deſign, whilſt you live.'

To both theſe Letters, the Profeſſor made Anſwer, the firſt of the following September, having then juſt returned to Oxford, after an Abſence of ſome Weeks, at his Son-in-Law Emes's, in Surrey. To Dr. Marſh's Rabbinical Queries he replies very particularly; but as to his Expoſition of James v. 12, he only ſays, that it ſeems very ingenious, but that he dare not interpoſe his Judgment concerning it. He greatly approves, both in this and his next Letter, of Dr. Marſh's Deſigns for promoting Religion and Learning in Ireland; but takes not the leaſt Notice in either, of his Intimation, that the World expected from him an Anſwer to Voſſius de Sibyllis, unleſs he intended, as a tacit Excuſe from that Service, what he ſays of the ſlow Progreſs he made in commenting on Hoſea, owing to what he calls the Lazineſs of his Age, and other Inabilities.

On the 24th of May, 1681, Mr. Huntington, from Aleppo, acquaints Dr. Pocock, that he had been in Egypt, where he had in vain ſearched after Rabbi Tanchum's Pieces. Abu-Walid's Dictionary he had met with, under his own Hand, as was pretended, which was tranſcribing; as alſo a Book of the Karaim Jews, which he hoped to receive from Cairo. It ſhould ſeem, that our Profeſſor, in his laſt Letter to Mr. Huntington, had given an Account to him of Voſſius de Sibyllis; concerning which, in the Concluſion of the Letter before us, he anſwers thus:

'I have not ſeen Voſſius de Sibyllis; but to decry the Hebrew Text has long been his 'Deſign and Practice: And it is a great while ſince Hulſius and Horn have taken Notice of 'it; but I am no Judge of the Controverſy. Whilſt Men ſpeak and fight too not for 'Truth, but Victory, we may well expect heterodox Opinions and ſeditious Actions.'

After what has been ſaid of Dr. Pocock's and his Friends Indignation againſt the abovementioned Piece of Iſaac Voſſius, and the Expectation of Mankind, that the Profeſſor, being the firſt Man in the World for Knowledge in theſe Matters, would appear an Advocate for the Hebrew Text, againſt the confident Aſſaults of that Writer, it may ſeem wonderful, that he neither undertook the Service, nor excuſed himſelf to his Friends, who modeſtly incited him thereto, but at the ſame Time earneſtly wiſhed to ſee him engaged in the Controverſy:

But for his Conduct in both theſe Reſpects, many Reaſons may be aſſigned. As to his not entring avowedly into this Diſpute, his natural Averſion to Polemick Writing, had there been no other Hindrance, would alone account for it: And when to this we add his great Age, (being then not more than three Years ſhort of Eighty) it will hardly be deemed a Wonder, that he, who in his Youth and Vigour had always avoided Controverſy, ſhould not chuſe to begin ſuch troubleſome Work in his old Age. His cloſe Attention to the Commentary on Hoſea might be urged, as a third Impediment to an Ingagement of this Kind: He had then but half finiſhed that Deſign, and his Time of Life admoniſhed him to avoid every Interruption thereto. What he had hitherto done in it coſt him three or four Years, and the uſual Courſe of Nature forbad him to hope for more than ſo many to come: Common Prudence, therefore, would reſtrain a Man, under all theſe Circumſtances, from digreſſing into new Employment. Beſides this, I am of Opinion, that if none of theſe Reaſons had ſtood in Dr. Pocock's Way, there were Diſcouragements ariſing from the Perſon, he muſt have oppoſed, and the Nature of the Cauſe he was to defend, which would have deterr'd him from being directly concerned therein. Iſaac Voſſius, though very learned in his Way, was a Man of ſtrong Paſſions, and not over-patient of Contradiction. Could, therefore, Dr. Pocock have prevailed on himſelf to debate publickly a Point of great Importance, both to Religion and Learning, with a cool and candid Adverſary, he knew himſelf too well, to enter the Liſts, on any Occaſion, againſt one of a different Diſpoſition. Beſides, the Warmth and Honeſty of his grateful Mind would at any Time have made him loth to put on the unfriendly Appearance of a declared Adverſary to the Son of his old and infinitely eſteemed Patron, Gerard Voſſius; for whoſe Sake he preſerved a great Regard to his Son Iſaac, though greatly diſapproving many of his Sentiments: Inſomuch, that when Dr. Pocock's eldeſt Son viſited Leyden, he had his Father's expreſs Commands to wait on Dr. Voſſius there, as we have it under his own Hand, in a Letter to Mr. Smith. Laſtly, the Controverſy itſelf, through the Prejudices and Paſſions of Men, on both Sides, became of ſo delicate a Nature, that it was difficult even for a Man of Judgment and Temper to enter into it, without diſpleaſing all Parties. On the one Hand, the Men of Voſſius's Sentiments could be ſatisfied with nothing ſhort of giving up the Hebrew Text, as corrupt, and ſetting up the Septuagint Tranſlation, as the only pure Canon of the Old Teſtament Scripture; which, it appears, Dr. Pocock could by no Means approve of, having declared againſt it, as an Hypotheſis, that would deſtroy the Certainty of the Jewiſh Scriptures. On the other Hand, the Partiſans for the Hebrew Verity were not to be ſatisfied with a Defence of the Hebrew Text, in a reaſonable Sort, as to all its Eſſentials: To pleaſe them, even the Accents in the Maſoretick Text muſt be inſiſted on, as of Divine Appointment, and coæval with the Text itſelf; whilſt the Greek of the LXX was to have no Mercy nor Quarter, but to be deemed a Tranſlation originally bad, and, by frequent Tranſcribing, become ſo corrupted, as to be of no Certainty nor Uſe. But our Author was not diſpoſed to give into either of theſe Points; he rightly judged it, therefore, moſt expedient not directly to ingage in a Diſpute, wherein, after infinite Diſquiet to himſelf, he found no Way to pleaſe either Side; and yet, as we ſhall find anon, he took a Courſe to apprize the World of his Sentiments in the main Parts of this Controverſy, and to convince Voſſius and his Adherents, if they were not hardened againſt all Conviction, that the Hebrew Text was fairly defenſible, and not at ſo great a Diſtance from their favourite Greek Tranſlation, as they were wont to imagine. In order thereto, in his Commentaries on Hoſea and Joel, he entered more largely and more frequently into the Diſcuſſion of the ſeeming Differences between the Hebrew Text and the Septuagint Tranſlation, than he had done in his two former Commentaries, reconciling them, without Prejudice done to either. Happy had it been for the Truth, if others, who oppoſed the Extravagancies of Voſſius, had obſerved the ſame Decorum and Judgment with our Author; if, like him, they had defended the Maſoretick Text, without giving up the LXX Verſion: Particularly Father Simon [c], who, whether from ſecret Scepticiſm, or a Deſign of reducing us to a Neceſſity of admitting the Authority of his Church, as the Baſis of revealed Religion, made free with all the Originals of the Bible in their Turn, the authorized Latin Verſion not excepted, and oppoſed the Tranſlation of the Seventy, without defending the Hebrew Text from any other, ſave wilful Corruption. Among others, who have given our Profeſſor his juſt Praiſes, for conciliating the Hebrew and the Septuagint, in his Porta Moſis and his Commentaries, I muſt have Leave to make particular Mention of the very learned Dr. Lee, in his admirable Prolegomena to that Tome of Dr. Grabe's Septuagint, which contains the Hiſtorical Books, Chapter the firſt. There, proceeding upon the moderate Sentiments of Biſhop Walton, Biſhop Pearſon, and Dr. Pocock, he has laid down Rules, by the due Obſervance of which, all Controverſies between the Zealots for Hebrew Verity, on the one Hand, and the Septuagint Verſion on the other, may be happily extinguiſhed, and thoſe ſacred Treaſures may be rendered each beneficial to the other, and to the Cauſe of Chriſtianity in general.

In July this Year, 1681, Dr. Pocock, in a Letter to Dr. Marſh, acknowledges the Receipt of his Letter and Book of Logick, then publiſhed by him, continuing to complain of the the ſlow Progreſs of his Commentary on Hoſea, and of its Prolixity, neither of which, as Things ſtood with him, would admit of a Remedy.

In October following, Andreas Arnoldus, a German, then in London, writes to our Profeſſor a particular Account of a Work printed at Vienna, the Year before, by Francis a Meſgnien Meninſki, Knight of the Holy Sepulchre at Jeruſalem, Counſellor, and firſt Interpreter to his Imperial Majeſty: It was partly a Lexicon of the Turkiſh, Arabick, and Perſick Languages, and partly Grammars to all thoſe Tongues.

The next Year Mr. Huntington returned from Aleppo, and gave Dr. Pocock the good News of his ſafe Arrival at Paris, in a Letter dated thence, June the 27th, where he had the Pleaſure to meet two old Friends, Sir Richard Graham, then created Lord Preſton, and Embaſſador at the French Court from the King of England, and Mr. Wigan, his Lordſhip's Chaplain, a very good, as well as a very learned Man. He recounts, with a truly Chriſtian Concern, the Perſecution then begun againſt the Proteſtants of that Country, and adds, that he foreſaw ſome untoward Reſolutions would be taken about them, from an Agreement made among the Biſhops, to ſummon all the Miniſters in their ſeveral Dioceſes, and exact an Account of them, for their refuſing the Catholick Aſſemblies; though by ſeveral Edicts they have been exempted from all Epiſcopal Viſitations and Juriſdiction.

In this ſame Month Dr. George Hooper, formerly mentioned, wrote to the Profeſſor on the following Occaſion: He had formed ſome learned and curious Conjectures, concerning the Bleſſing of the Patriarchs, in the 49th Chapter of Geneſis; wherein chiefly, by the Help of the Arabick Tongue, he diſcovered the Bleſſing beſtowed on each Patriarch, to be couched in his Name; deſirous he was to have Dr. Pocock's Judgment on this Performance, which, according to his uſual Modeſty, he himſelf held in ſmall Eſteem: Nor did he prevail on himſelf to have it publiſhed, till a little before his Death, which happened in the Year 1727, forty-five Years after the Date of this Letter; then he put it into the Hands of the Reverend and Learned Mr. Hunt, now the worthy Profeſſor of Arabick in the Univerſity of Oxford, who, according to the Biſhop's Directions, printed it with a Preface and Notes, collected out of the Arabick Manuſcripts in the Bodleian Library. The whole Impreſſion conſiſted but of 100 Copies, deſigned chiefly for Friends, and the Expence of it was defrayed by Mrs. Prowſe, the Biſhop's Daughter. I ſhall only add, that, in this Letter, Dr. Hooper owns the Profeſſor's Favour to him, whilſt he was learning the Arabick Tongue, and modeſtly takes Shame to himſelf, for not having made a ſuitable Proficiency therein: A Particular, which ſtrengthens the Probability of my former Conjecture, that this was the anonymous young Man, whom Biſhop Morley recommended to Dr. Pocock's Direction, in the Study of the Oriental Languages.

Dr. Loftus, of Ireland, wrote to our Profeſſor, April 19, 1683, acquainting him, that he had lately met with a panegyrical Oration upon Abul-Pharaji (whoſe Hiſtory of the Dynaſties Dr. Pocock had publiſhed twenty Years before) written by Dioſcorus, Biſhop of Gakarto, and a Contemporary of his, which clears him from the Imputation of Apoſtaſy; that in this Panegyrick was recited a Catalogue of Abul-Pharaji's Works, which he ſends incloſed. He adds, that he was now tranſlating this Panegyrick, with an Intent to publiſh it.

In the Month following, Mr. Strype (ſince well known to the World, by having written the Lives of the four firſt Proteſtant Archbiſhops, and the Annals of the twelve firſt Years of Queen Elizabeth's Reign) acquaints Dr. Pocock by Letter, with the Deſign of reprinting Dr. Lightfoot's Engliſh Works in one Volume, in Folio; and that they waited only for ſome Manuſcript Pieces and Letters of his, which were to be joined therewith, beſeeching him, if any ſuch were in his Hands, to communicate them to him.

About this Time Dr. Huntington, through the Recommendation of Biſhop Fell to the Duke of Ormond, was preferred to the Provoſtſhip of Dublin-College, which was become vacant by Dr. Marſh's Promotion to the See of Leighlin and Ferns: And from thence, on the 29th of May, in the next Year, he anſwered a Letter of Dr. Pocock's, dated the 13th of the foregoing February. He informs his old and dear Friend, that P. Agathangelo, his Correſpondent at Baſſora, had purchaſed for him, the two Books of the Sabians or Mendæans; one of which, according to the fabulous Tradition of that Country, was given by God to Adam; the other, to John the Son of Zechariah; that there was a third paid for, but not yet received, which was given to the Angels 33000 Years before the Creation of Adam. 'But, 'adds Dr. Huntington, to what Purpoſe am I at all this Expence, if none of you will make 'out the Language? Therefore, pray, Doctor, think of it once again; for I will ſend Dr. 'Piques's Papers to you once more, becauſe I know not a likelier OEdipus to unriddle this 'Sphinx.' This Dr. Piques was a learned Sorboniſt, who, the Year before, had wrote a long Letter to Dr. Huntington upon the Subject of the Sabian or Mendæan Language, and his Conjectures about it [d].

[d] In two of F. Agathangelo's Letters to Dr. Huntington, we have the following Account of theſe Sabians or Mendæans: That they unjuſtly aſſume to themſelves the Name of Chriſtian, deſerving rather to be eſteemed a Tribe of uncircumciſed Jews; that if ever the equivocal Denomination of Chriſtian belonged to them, on the Account

JANUARY the 3d, of this ſame Year, Dr. John Moore, then Chaplain to Lord Chancellor Nottingham, and afterwards ſucceſſively Biſhop of Norwich and Ely, deſired, by Letter, of Dr. Pocock, the Reſolution of a Queſtion (which, he ſays, he muſt hope for from him, or from No-body) viz. Whether there be more Evidence, than the Affirmation of the Arabian in Dr. Wallis's Arithmetick, by Dr. Pocock tranſlated, that the Ægyptian OEba, which is believed to be the Epha, was the ſixth Part of the Egyptian Ardob, which was the Cube of their Cubit?

Dr. Loftus, of Dublin, in September, 1685, having compared the Variations of Dr. Huntington's Syriack Abul-Pharaji from Dr. Pocock's Arabick, gave him ſome Particulars of them, in a Letter, and at the ſame Time acquaints him, that he had lately met with that Arabick Writer's Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, which he had tranſlated, and put to the Preſs in Dublin.

This Year alſo was made publick Dr. Pocock's large and laborious Commentary on the Prophecy of Hoſea, which he dedicated to his old Friend Biſhop Fell, being, as he tells him in the Epiſtle dedicatory, firſt committed to the Preſs by his Lordſhip's Encouragement. He prefixed likewiſe a Preface to this Commentary, the chief Deſign whereof was to account for and excuſe the extraordinary Length of it: Certain it is, that no one Thing contributed ſo much to ſwell the Work, as the Defence therein made, for the Purity of the Hebrew Text, againſt the Objections raiſed from the Diſagreement of the Greek or Septuagint, the Vulgar Latin, and the Chaldee Paraphraſe, therewith. He had in the former Commentaries, as well as in this on Hoſea, left no particular Paſſage unexplained; he had taken in every Help for literal Expoſition from Jewiſh and Chriſtian Commentators and Grammarians; he had quoted Tranſlations, as well ancient as modern; but he had not therein ſo frequently, and with ſuch ſet Purpoſe, conſidered the Differences between the Chaldee, the Vulgar Latin, and more eſpecially between the Septuagint and the Hebrew Text. The late repeated Attempts of Iſaac Voſſius, to depreciate, or rather to decry that venerable Original, as well as thoſe of Capellus, now made it neceſſary to be large and ſpecial in guarding the Maſoretick Text from the Charge of various Readings, which thoſe learned Men were ready and glad to ſuggeſt, upon every ſeeming Difference between it and the ancient Tranſlations and Paraphraſes. Some may think our Author went too far, in ſuppoſing, that the Hebrew Text was always, and in every Particular, read as it is at preſent; but if he err'd in this, he certainly err'd on the right Side, it being ſafer to ſuppoſe the Original Hebrew utterly uncorrupt, than to call its Purity in Queſtion ſo oft as Capellus and Voſſius did. Beſides, the Obſtinacy and Unreaſonableneſs of Gainſayers often drive even wiſe and good Men into too great Lengths of Oppoſition, and the ill Uſe that is made of juſt Conceſſions, when we have to do with contentious Adverſaries, makes it ſeem adviſable to forbear them, and to put the Proof of ſome Things upon them, which we ſhould never diſpute with more candid and better-minded Opponents. To this we may add, that the Knowledge of Biblical Hebrew being that Part of Literature, in which Dr. Pocock chiefly excelled, and in which he moſt delighted, it is the leſs to be wondered at, if he was prejudiced in Favour of it, eſpecially, conſidering likewiſe, that Hebrew Verity was the prevailing Opinion of the Times, in which he was educated, and was then thought by moſt Proteſtants, eſſential to the Intereſts of the Reformation. But after all, perhaps he needs no Apology in this Reſpect. The great Succeſs of his Attempts to reconcile the Hebrew and the Septuagint Verſion, without Recourſe to the Suppoſition of various Readings in the Original Text, manifeſt in the Notes on the Porta Moſis, and his Commentaries, eſpecially the two laſt, would make one hope, that no ſeeming Difference between thoſe venerable Books would have been too hard for him and his conciliatory Scheme, had he been at Leiſure to purſue it thro' the whole Old Teſtament.

It has been Matter of great Pleaſure to me, and, I doubt not, to others alſo, to obſerve, that Dr. Pocock's Zeal for the Purity of the preſent Hebrew Text, even when moſt ſtirr'd by the intemperate Oppoſition of Iſaac Voſſius, never provoked him to depreciate the Septuagint, to which that learned Man ſhowed ſo violent a Partiality. He well knew the Regard that was on many Accounts due to that famous Verſion: Its great Antiquity, and the Nearneſs of its Authors to the Times when Hebrew was a living Language, ſhould, at leaſt, ſcreen it from haſty and contemptuous Cenſure. But above all, the Uſe made of it in the Scriptures of the New Teſtament, and the firſt Ages of the Church, ought to make every learned Chriſtian treat it with Decency, if not with Reverence. Had it been originally ſo vicious a Tranſlation, as ſome Writers, even in cool Blood, have delighted to call it, how came it to paſs, that the Apoſtles and Evangeliſts ſo often argue for the Connection of the Goſpel with count of ſome Chriſtian Symbols and Obſervances, they are now degenerated from all Appearance of Chriſtianity. Their principal Books are three: The firſt they call Sahaf Adam, which our firſt Father Adam, according to them, received immediately from God; the ſecond, Sahaf Hieahie, i. e. the Son of Zechariah, which he received of God; the third they call Divan, which exceeds the others much in Bulk, but is equally eſteemed by the Sect. They are jealous of theſe Books getting into other Hands, and, tho' extremely covetous, are hardly prevailed on to have them tranſcribed, or to part with them for Money, unleſs driven thereto by the moſt preſſing Want. They have no written Grammar, and their Preſbyters teach the Knowledge of theſe Books by Word of Mouth only: Their Idiom differs not much from the Hebrew and the Syriack. The Remains of this Sect are found at or near Baſſora, a populous and trading Port, at the Mouth of the Euphrates, in the Perſian Gulph. See Huntington's Ep. p. 82, 83, &c.

with the Old Teſtament, as it ſtands in the Septuagint Verſion. Jerom's Salvo, that the Verſion of the LXX, with all its Faults, was therefore uſed, becauſe it was already in the Hands of the Helleniſtick Jews, though it has been a thouſand Times urged in Diſputes of this Kind, is far from ſatisfying this important Quæry: For St. Matthew, in his Goſpel, without Regard to the Circumſtances of the Helleniſts, oft makes a Greek Tranſlation of his own, and ſo, doubtleſs, would all the other Sacred Penmen have done, if the Greek of the LXX had been ſo corrupt, as ſome pretend. How eaſy had it been, when the Gift of Tongues was ſo common in the Church, for one or more inſpired Perſons to have drawn up a new Verſion for the Uſe of ſuch, as did not underſtand the original Language of the Old Teſtament, which was the Caſe of the Generality of Chriſtians, both in the Apoſtolical and ſucceeding Ages, and not to have left an important Part of the Scripture Canon to them in ſo bad a Condition, as the Greek of the LXX is by ſome repreſented to be. They had little to fear from the Fondneſs of the Helleniſt Jews, for their accuſtomed Verſion, it being abſurd to ſuppoſe, that the ſame Authority which reconciled them to the Abrogation of the Law, would be inſufficient to recommend a new Verſion of it. In a Word, the ſeeming Differences between the Hebrew Text, and the Tranſlation we are ſpeaking of, are ſcarce wider any where, than in ſome Paſſages cited thence in the New Teſtament; which ſhould incline us to be ſparing of our Cenſures, on Account of ſuch Variations, and to think the LXX, at leaſt in general, a ſound and uſeful Verſion. For theſe and ſuch like Reaſons, Dr. Pocock laboured, in his two latter Commentaries, to reconcile the Hebrew Text with that anciently-received Tranſlation, as the moſt effectual Means to vindicate the Purity of the former, and to remove the dangerous Prejudices, that too many had entertained againſt the latter. The Principles, on which he proceeded in this Attempt, were of inconteſtable Truth in themſelves, and applied by him with great Learning and Judgment; and they were chiefly theſe three: Firſt, That the preſent LXX Tranſlation is in many Places corrupted: 2dly, That the Authors of that Verſion did not always deſign it to be literal: 3dly, That they often followed ſuch Acceptations of Hebrew Words, as are now no longer known, and are irretrievable, without the Help of the Arabick and Syriack Tongues, between which and the Hebrew there is a manifeſt Affinity. Happy would it have been for the Chriſtian and Learned World, if Dr. Pocock had been at Leiſure to execute this conciliatory Scheme on the other Parts of the Old Teſtament. Scarce any one ever was, or perhaps ever will be, ſo compleatly qualified for the Work, as he was: But whoſoever ſhall undertake, and in good Meaſure ſucceed therein, will deſerve the Thanks and Bleſſings of all ſober and intelligent Men.

But to return from this long Digreſſion: No ſooner was our Author's Commentary on Hoſea ſeen by his Friends, but he received their moſt ample Thanks and Encomiums. Two Letters more eſpecially, from Ireland, were filled with Commendations of the Performance; the firſt came from Dr. Huntington, who, after acquainting Dr. Pocock, that he had received his learned Commentary on Hoſea, and delivered Preſents of the ſame to the Biſhop of Ferns and Leighlin, and Dr. Loftus, writes thus: 'Each Man ſpeaks for himſelf, but none of us ſo much as it 'deſerves; no, not the Doctor himſelf, [Dr. Loftus] tho' he ſhould employ all his Tongues '(and I think they talk of twenty) in its Commendation.' In a Poſtſcript to his Letter, Dr. Huntington writes thus: 'I hear nothing of your Son's Arabick Hiſtory, which you once 'told me he had put into the Preſs, with his Verſion of the ſame. If it be confined there, 'let me know what will bring it forth into the open Air, and you ſhall have the Money, 'as ſoon as you let me know the Sum.' This Performance of Mr. Edward Pocock, our Author's eldeſt Son, was unfiniſhed at the Preſs, when his Father died; and was withdrawn thence by him, ſome little Time after, upon a Diſguſt at his being diſappointed of ſucceeding his Father in the Hebrew Profeſſorſhip: The Copy, as much of it as was then printed, and the Manuſcript Hiſtory, is now in the Hands of Mr. Pocock's Son, the preſent Rector of Minall in Wiltſhire. Dr. Loftus in fuller Terms expreſſes his Gratitude for the Preſent of what he calls Dr. Pocock's moſt learned and elaborate Commentary on the difficult Prophecy of Hoſea; he adds as follows: 'Never did Criticiſm more triumph in its Grandeur and Uti-'lity, than in your Expoſition of that Prophecy, which you handle in ſo accurate a Manner, 'as to avoid the proverbial Cenſure on vulgar Commentators, who, when they come to an hard 'Place, ſkip it over, or by too largely handling the Text, become tedious; whereas you, 'omitting nothing that is requiſite, nor enlarging upon any Thing, ſo as to be burdenſome, 'are not to be taxed with either of the Extreams: For there ſeems to be nothing in that 'Prophecy, which you do not give very good Account of, nor is there any Thing in the 'Account you give of it, but what is excellently profitable, and no Way tedious; for after 'your Examination of all various Opinions touching each Part of that Prophecy, you con-'clude with your own, in a perfect Certainty, or in the greateſt Probability, ſeldom omitting 'a Recital of the Opinions of other great Authors, or your Judgment of them, to the ple-'nary Satisfaction of all thoſe, who are Maſters in Criticiſm.' I have tranſcribed thus much from Dr. Loftus, to let the World ſee, what ſo great a Maſter of Languages and Sacred Philology thought of the Commentary on Hoſea, and how little Room there is for the Cenſure, which ſome have paſſed on it, that the Author ſeldom gives us his own Judgment, after reciting the various Opinions of other Expoſitors; whereas, I think, I may ſafely pronounce, that to one Inſtance of this Kind, throughout his Commentary, there are twenty of the contrary, viz. in which he either abſolutely gives his own Judgment, or at leaſt manifeſtly inclines to one Expoſition or Interpretation, rather than another.

In June of the following Year, Mr. Samuel Thomas, from Chard, writes his Thanks to Dr. Pocock for his Preſent of the Commentary on Hoſea, and at the ſame Time propoſes a new Tranſlation of Jer. xxiii. 6, the famous Paſſage on which the Notion of imputed Righteouſneſs, is chiefly founded by thoſe, who eſpouſe it: Inſtead of his Name ſhall be called the Lord our Righteouſneſs, Mr. Thomas would have it rendered, And this is the Name, which the Lord ſhall call him, our Righteouſneſs: For which Change he there alſo gives his Reaſon.

From this Time forward, Dr. Pocock's Correſpondence grew more contracted, which was owing to ſeveral Cauſes; one and the principal was, that Writing became exceeding troubleſome to him, through a Palſy in his Hand, which drinking of Coffee, to which he had uſed himſelf ever ſince his Reſidence in the Eaſt, firſt brought upon him, and which increaſed, as he advanced more in Years: This made his Friends ſparing in their Letters, becauſe they knew his Civility was ſuch, as would not ſuffer him to be behind Hand with his learned Correſpondents, whatever Pain or Trouble it coſt him to anſwer their Queries. Another Cauſe was, the Troubles which ſoon followed in Ireland, the Hurry of the Revolution at home, with the War that broke out abroad in Conſequence of it; all which brought on an Interruption of Correſpondence between Dr. Pocock and his Friends in Ireland, and in foreign Parts. Some Letters however paſſed, between the preſent Time, and that of our Author's Death, the moſt conſiderable of which are as follows.

In the Year 1687, Dr. Pocock wrote to his old Friend the Provoſt of Dublin, Dr. Huntington, and from this Letter it appears, that he had begun his Comment on Joel, and that he then enjoyed a good Meaſure of Health.

In the following January, 168$\frac{7}{8}$, Dr. Whitby, then ingaged in the Popiſh Controverſy, conſulted the Profeſſor upon the Prieſts and Judges ſpoken of in Deuteronomy, chap. xvii. who were to determine hard Controverſies, and to whoſe Judgment the People were to ſtand under Pain of Death, putting ſeveral Queſtions to him thereupon; all which were learnedly anſwered by our Author.

In April the ſame Year, John Betts, of Lime-ſtreet in London, deſired of Dr. Pocock the Solution of a Difficulty from Avenzoar, as he is cited by Shenkius, in his Collections de Febribus.

From this Time to the 14th of October, 1690, we ſee no Traces of that Correſpondence, which had now for 60 Years been held between our Author and his learned Friends, both at home and abroad; and the laſt we have of this Sort was one of the Date above-mentioned, from Dr. Dudley Loftus, of Dublin. In this Letter, that learned and noble Perſon, on Occaſion of Sixtus Senenſis's ſaying in his Bibliotheca, that the whole laſt Chapter of St. Mark was an Addition to the Goſpel, ſhows how the Armenian Copy concluded that Goſpel, which took in the laſt Chapter to the End of the 8th Verſe, and he affirms, that by the beſt Search he could make, no more of that Chapter was ever wanting in any Copy, than from the 8th Verſe excluſive. He further acquaints our Author, how he had ſpent his Time, during their late Troubles in Ireland, viz. in tranſlating eight Syriack Liturgies, each of which they call Anaphora, into Latin. He adds, that he had alſo tranſlated the Æthiopick Liturgy into Latin, though already tranſlated by a Romaniſt, that he might ſhew what abominable Falſities thoſe of that Religion endeavour to impoſe upon this ignorant World: Beſides theſe, he had tranſlated the ancient Form of Prayer, uſed in the primitive Church, for the Cure of Diſeaſes; which, though printed at Rome, in the Time of Pope Paul the Third, had not hitherto been tranſlated. All theſe he intended to print ſhortly, with an Elucidary upon them.

Much about the ſame Time, if I conjecture right, Euſebius Renaudot entertained a Deſign not much unlike this, which ſome Years after he executed, of publiſhing a Collection of all the Oriental Liturgies, as alſo a diſtinct Work, De Fide, Moribus & Inſtitutis Orientalium Chriſtianorum: Of this Intention of his, Renaudot informed Dr. Pocock, in a Letter to him without a Date, but as appears from ſome Circumſtances in it, not long before his Death. In this Epiſtle the Writer profeſſes a very high Eſteem for our Author, deſires the Liberty of conſulting him in all the Doubts, that ſhould occur in preparing the Works above-mentioned, and promiſes, in Return for this Favour, to make a publick Acknowledgment of it, and to preſerve a perpetual Memory of the Obligation. It is highly probable, that Death prevented Dr. Pocock from giving any Aſſiſtance to Renaudot in theſe Deſigns; but I am ſorry to ſay, that the Treatment that learned Perſon has given to the Memory of our Author has not been conſiſtent with the Expreſſions of Reſpect for him, with which this Letter abounds. For when he came to publiſh his Collection of Eaſtern Liturgies, forgetting his own Profeſſions, and the Duty of a Gentleman, a Scholar, and, above all, of a Chriſtian, he goes out of his Way, in the End of his Preface, to reproach him with a Miſtake, which, perhaps, was the only one which could be faſtned upon his Writings, though Renaudot, as above-mentioned, had, without good Grounds, charged him with another; but the Abbot's Zeal againſt Pro-teſtants got the better of his Candour, and though he could treat the Learned amongſt them with Civility in a private Way, it was not, as it ſhould ſeem, adviſeable to obſerve ſuch Meaſures with them in the Eye of the World.

THE next Year, 1691, Dr. Pocock publiſhed his Commentary on the Prophecy of Joel, to which, beſides the Dedication to the then Biſhop of Exeter, Sir Jonathan Trelawney, he prefixed a Preface, the chief Deſign of which was, to give an Account of the Draught or Scheme of the Area of the Temple, and the different Parts thereof, which he had procured to be engraven, and which immediately follows the Preface: It was taken from an ancient MS. of Maimonides, as old as that Rabbi's own Times.

THE Method of this Commentary being the ſame with that on Hoſea, I have no Occaſion to ſpeak particularly to it. One Thing more it may be proper to obſerve, that tho' the chief Intention of our Author, in theſe Commentaries, was to aſſert the Purity of the Hebrew Text, and the Juſtneſs of our authorized Engliſh Tranſlation, yet he was not inflexibly rigid in either of theſe Points: With Reſpect to the former, though he ſeems in general unwilling to admit that, at the Time when the Seventy made their Verſion, there were various Readings in the Hebrew Text, yet he ſometimes allows it to be a probable, though not a neceſſary Suppoſition. And I am much miſtaken, if the Places referred to in the Notes [e] will not juſtify this Aſſertion. As to the latter, the Juſtneſs of our authorized Engliſh Tranſlation, his good Opinion of it, as repreſenting the literal Senſe of the Original Text, does not always hinder him from owning, that better Renditions might have been found. The References at the Bottom will direct the Reader to two Places, [f] where ſuch Conceſſions are to be met with; and probably there are more, which have eſcaped my Obſervation.

WHETHER Dr. Pocock intended a Commentary on any other of the leſſer Prophets, I cannot learn; but if he did, Death prevented him, which happened on the 10th of September in this Year. A gradual Decreaſe of Strength and bodily Vigour, for ſome Time before, were ſure Indications of a Diſſolution; but his Parts continued ſound, and his Memory but little impaired, to the very laſt. His only Diſtemper was great old Age, which hindered him not, even the Night before he died, from praying with his Family, as his Cuſtom had always been, in the excellent Forms of our Church.

THUS died this moſt pious, learned, and venerable Man, when he wanted but two Months of compleating the 87th Year of his Age, after having been for many Years confeſſedly the firſt Perſon in Europe for Eaſtern Learning, and not leſs remarkable for Humanity and Modeſty, than for Profoundneſs of Erudition. How it came to paſs, that Merit ſo great and ſo conſpicuous met with no higher Rewards, has already in Part been accounted for. Dr. Pocock was a Stranger to thoſe Arts, by which the Ambitious wind themſelves into the Affections of Princes and Miniſters of State, chuſing no other Way to be known to the World, but by being uſeful and exemplary in his Profeſſion; and it is ſeldom found, that Merit and Modeſty are forced out of their Retirements into Dignities and Diſtinction. Indeed, the Preferments he died poſſeſſed of, either fell to him by Courſe of Seniority, or were procured for him, without his Seeking, by the Intereſt of Friends; nor was he otherwiſe inſtrumental in his own Advancement, than by deſerving it.

AS to Dr. Pocock's Perſon, he was of a middle Stature, or rather tall and ſlender; his Hair was inclining to black, ſo were his Eyes; he was of a freſh Complexion, had a lively andc hearful Look, a ſound and healthy Conſtitution.

IN his ordinary Converſation, he was free, open, and affable, retaining, even to the laſt, the Briſkneſs and Facetiouſneſs of Youth: He was extreamly civil to all, who applied for Directions in the Study of thoſe Languages wherein he excelled, and his courteous Reception of Foreigners, who in great Numbers reſorted to him, ſpread the Fame of his Humanity, as well as Learning, throughout Europe. His Temper was naturally modeſt, humble, and ſincere, abhorrent of every Thing that had the Appearance of Hypocriſy and Falſehood; but without the leaſt Mixture of Sourneſs or Moroſity, being very obſervant of all common Duties of Civility, ſuch as returning Viſits, anſwering Letters, and the like.

AS for his intellectual Abilities and Acquirements, he was of a quick Apprehenſion, great Memory, and unwearied Induſtry; his Skill in the Sciences, if we may believe his Contemporaries, was not inconſiderable, but his Knowledge of Languages was vaſtly extenſive, and in many of them was more accurate than any could boaſt of, who lived before, in, or ſince his Times. He was profoundly ſkilled in the Hebrew, Arabick, and Syriack Tongues, was well acquainted with the Perſick, Samaritan, Æthiopick, Coptick, and Turkiſh; beſides which, he underſtood Italian, and ſomething of Spaniſh. In Greek and Latin his Friends ſay he was critically converſant, and his Writings and Letters bear Teſtimony to his Abilities in both. His Style, in Engliſh, was clear and expreſſive, but was never cultivated, even from his Youth; whereas, in Latin he wrote not only with Propriety and Perſpicuity, but alſo with a good Degree of Elegance: The Reaſon of which Difference probably was, that he read but few Engliſh Books in his Youth, and wrote nothing in that Language for the Publick, till he was far advanced in Years.

But the moſt meritorious Part of this great Man's Character is ſtill behind, that which concerns his moral and religious Endowments; and ſurely he was one of the moſt uniform and ſteady Exemplars of Chriſtian Perfection, that has bleſſed theſe latter Ages.

All his Words and Actions carried in them a deep and unfeigned Senſe of Religion and true Piety; God was the Beginning and the End of his Studies and Undertakings; to his Glory they were devoted, and profeſſedly finiſhed by his Help, as appears by Expreſſions, ſometimes in Arabick and Hebrew, and at other Times in Engliſh, which we find not only in his printed Works, but alſo in his Note-Books, and Writings of any Account.

In the publick Duties of Religion he was very punctual; all the Time he reſided at Chriſt-Church, which was more than thirty Years, he was ſeldom abſent from Cathedral Prayers, oft frequenting them, when he was not thought well enough to go abroad upon any other Occaſion.

In his paſtoral Capacity, ſo long as he reſided conſtantly at Childrey, he ſhewed the greateſt Diligence and Faithfulneſs, preaching twice every Lord's Day, and catechizing likewiſe, when the Length of Days would permit him. Nor was he leſs exact in diſcharging the private Duties of his Function, ſuch as viſiting ſick and ancient People, and the like; and during that Part of his Life in which his Attendance upon his Profeſſorſhips and canonical Reſidence called him to Oxford for the greateſt Part of the Year, he took a moſt conſcientious Care to ſupply his Abſence by an able Curate, of whom he ſtrictly required the ſame laborious Courſe of Duty, and for his Encouragement, allowed him fifty Pounds per Annum, beſides Surplice Fees, all which amounted to more than a fourth Part of the then Value of that Rectory.

As a Member and a Miniſter of the Church of England, though with all due Charity to thoſe, who, on the Score of Conſcience, diſſented from her, he ſteadily conformed to her Appointments, highly reverenced and approved every Part of her Conſtitution. In ſubſcribing to her Articles his Hand and his Heart went together, being an Enemy to all Prevarication, however coloured or palliated by ſubtle Diſtinctions. He ſeemed from his Youth to have imbibed, among other eminent Divines of thoſe Times, an Opinion of the Illegality of Uſury, or at leaſt to have entertained Scruples about its Lawfulneſs; but this appeared rather from his conſtant Practice of lending Money freely, than from any open Avowal of his Sentiments in that Point: His Friends could never get from him his Reaſons againſt Uſury, and the Cauſe of his Reſervedneſs was, that the Thing being allowed by our Laws, and not diſapproved by the Church, he would diſturb neither by his private Opinion. How many uncharitable Diſputes would be prevented, if every Chriſtian was endued with this laudable Moderation! But ſo long as it is faſhionable to have no Concern for the Peace of the Church, nor Reverence for Authority, Controverſies about Religion will encreaſe, till, without ſome gracious Interpoſition of Providence, they eat out the Vitals of it.

It would be endleſs to enumerate all the Virtues of this excellent Man, or to be particular about the Conſtancy and Frequency of his Devotion, with his Family, and in his Cloſet; his ſtrict Manner of obſerving publick Faſts, his undiſſembled Grief at hearing God's Name profaned, or the Lord's Day unhallowed, or the Recital of any groſs Immorality: But above all, his Charity under each Branch of it, giving and forgiving, was ſo exemplary, that a more ſpecial Mention muſt be made of it.

The Largeneſs of a Family was, in his Judgment, no Excuſe for ſcanty Alms-giving: But beſides the Poor, whom he daily relieved at his Door, he gave to others quarterly Allowances. His charitable Diſpoſition was ſo notorious, and brought ſuch Numbers of neceſſitous Objects to him, that Dean Fell, himſelf a moſt munificent Perſon, uſed complainingly to tell Dr. Pocock, that he drew all the Poor of Oxford into the College.

A noble Inſtance of his Readineſs to forgive Injuries was his Behaviour to thoſe Pariſhioners of his, who in the Uſurpation had laboured to have him ejected and ſtarved; for he treated them with his accuſtomed Humanity, did their Families particular Kindneſſes, and to keep them as much concealed as poſſible from the Knowledge and Reſentment of his Friends, would never mention any Thing of the Trouble they had given him; but on the other Hand, induſtriouſly ſecreted the Papers of their Depoſitions againſt him, as long as he lived; ſcarce any of his Friends or Children having ſeen them before his Death.

In a Word, ſuch was the Uniformity of his moral and religious Character, that his Friends generally eſteemed him to be as much above the common Level for Goodneſs, as he was for Learning.

'Should I begin, ſays Dr. Marſh [g], (ſome Time ago Primate of Ireland) to ſpeak any 'Thing of the rare Endowments of this admirable Man (Dr. Pocock) with whom I had the 'Honour to be very intimately acquainted for many Years, I ſhould not be able to end his 'Character under a Volume: His rare Learning appears in his Writings; his exemplary Pie-

'ty,

[g] In a Letter written by him at the Deſire of a Friend, for Mr. Smith's Uſe, and dated from Dublin, May 5th, 1702.

'ty, Meekneſs, Self-denial and Candour, were viſible to all that converſed with him; his 'Patience and Reſignation to God's Will were diſcernible to all, who viſited him in the Time 'of his long and painful Sickneſs; and his profound Humility was well known and admired 'by all his Acquaintance.'

But of all the Encomiums beſtowed on our Author, after his Death, none was ſo full, as that which was drawn up by the celebrated Mr. Locke, in a Letter to Mr. Smith of Dartmouth, dated July 23, 1703, [h] who was then collecting Materials for writing the Hiſtory of Dr. Pocock's Life. And with ſome Extracts from thence I ſhall conclude his Character.

'So extraordinary an Example, in ſo degenerate an Age, deſerves, for the Rarity, and 'I was going to ſay, for the Incredibility of it, the Atteſtation of all that knew him, and 'conſidered his Worth. The Chriſtian World is a Witneſs of his great Learning, that, the 'Works he publiſhed would not ſuffer to be concealed; nor could his Devotion and Piety be 'hid, and be unobſerved in a College, where his conſtant and regular aſſiſting at the Ca-'thedral Service, never interrupted by Sharpneſs of Weather, and ſcarce reſtrain'd by down-'right Want of Health, ſhewed the Temper and Diſpoſition of his Mind: But his other 'Virtues and excellent Qualities had ſo ſtrong and cloſe a Covering of Modeſty and unaf-'fected Humility, that, though they ſhone the brighter to thoſe, who had the Opportunities 'to be more intimately acquainted with him, and Eyes to diſcern and diſtinguiſh Solidity 'from Shew, and eſteem Virtue, that ſought not Reputation, yet they were the leſs taken 'Notice of, and talked of by the Generality of thoſe, to whom he was not wholly un-'known; not that he was at all cloſe and reſerved, but on the contrary, the readieſt to 'communicate to any one that conſulted him. Indeed he was not forward to talk, nor ever 'would be the leading Man in the Diſcourſe, though it were on a Subject that he under-'ſtood better than any of the Company, and would often content himſelf, to ſit ſtill, and 'hear others debate in Matters, which he himſelf was more a Maſter of. [i] He had often 'the Silence of a Learner, where he had the Knowledge of a Maſter, and that not with a 'Deſign, as is often, that the Ignorance any one betrayed, might give him the Opportunity 'to diſplay his own Knowledge with the more Luſtre and Advantage, to their Shame, or 'cenſure them, when they were gone; but theſe Arts of Triumph and Oſtentation, fre-'quently practiſed by Men of Skill and Ability, were utterly unknown to him: It was very 'ſeldom, that he contradicted any one, or if it were neceſſary at any Time to inform any 'one better, who was in a Miſtake, it was in ſo ſoft and gentle a Manner, that it had no-'thing of the Air of Diſpute or Correction, and ſeemed to have little of Oppoſition in it. 'I never heard him ſay any Thing, that put any one that was preſent, the leaſt out of Coun-'tenance, nor ever cenſure, or ſo much as ſpeak diminiſhingly of any one that was abſent. 'He was a Man of no irregular Appetites: ———— Though he was a Man of the 'greateſt Temperance in himſelf, and the fartheſt from Oſtentation and Vanity in his Way of 'Living, yet he was of a liberal Mind, and given to Hoſpitality; which, conſidering the 'Smallneſs of his Preferments, and the numerous Family of Children he had to provide for, 'might be thought to have out-done thoſe, who made more Noiſe and Shew. His Name, 'which was in great Eſteem beyond Sea, and that deſervedly, drew on him Viſits from all 'Foreigners of Learning, who came to Oxford to ſee that Univerſity: They never failed to 'be highly ſatisfied with his great Knowledge and Civility, which was not always without 'Expence. Though, at the Reſtoration of King CHARLES ———— his Merits were 'ſo overlooked or forgotten, that he was barely reſtored to what was his before, without re-'ceiving any new Preferment then, or at any Time after, yet I never heard him take any 'the leaſt Notice of it, or make any the leaſt Complaint, in a Caſe that would have ſorely 'grated on ſome Mens Patience, and have filled their Mouths with Murmuring, and their 'Lives with Diſcontent: But he was always unaffectedly chearful; no Marks of any Thing 'that lay heavy at his Heart, for being neglected, ever broke from him; he was ſo far 'from having any Diſpleaſure lie concealed there, that whenever any Expreſſions of Diſſa-'tisfaction; for what they thought hard Uſage, broke from others in his Preſence, he always 'diverted the Diſcourſe; and if it were any Body, with whom he might take that Liberty, 'he ſilenced it with viſible Marks of Diſlike.

'Though he was not a forward, much leſs an aſſuming Talker, yet he was the far-'theſt in the World from ſullen or moroſe; he would talk very freely and very well of all 'Parts of Learning, beſides that, wherein he was known to excel: But this was not all; he 'could diſcourſe very well of other Things. He was not unacquainted with the World, 'though he made no Shew of it. His Backwardneſs to meddle in other People's Matters, 'or to enter into Debates, where Names and Perſons were brought upon the Stage, and Judgments

[h] This Letter, (the Original of which is now in my Hands) or a Copy of it, was communicated to Mr. Curll the Bookſeller, who printed it among other Letters of Mr. Locke's, in the Year 1714. [i] Much to the ſame Purpoſe is Primate Marſh's Obſervation, which he makes an Inſtance of Dr. Pocock's profound Humility: 'Though his Learning, ſays he, and Judgment were very great, yet, whenever any difficult Point, in Mat-'ters of Learning, happened to ariſe in Diſcourſe, he would, to my Wonder, conſtantly aſk him he converſed 'with, what his Opinion was of that Matter, before he would give his own. This I found by long Expe-'rience.'

'Judgments and Cenſures were hardly avoided, concealed his Abilities in Matters of Buſi-
'neſs and Conduct from moſt People. But yet I can truly ſay, that I knew not any one in
'that Univerſity, whom I would more willingly conſult in any Affair, that required Conſi-
'deration, nor whoſe Opinion I thought better worth the hearing than his, if he could be 'drawn to enter into it, and give his Advice.

'THOUGH in Company he never uſed himſelf, nor willingly heard from others, any per'ſonal Reflections on other Men, though ſet off with a Sharpneſs, that uſually tickles, and
'by moſt Men is miſtaken for the beſt, if not the only Seaſoning of pleaſant Converſation,
'yet he would often bear his Part in innocent Mirth, and by ſome appoſite and diverting
'Story continue and heighten the good Humour.

'I DO not remember, that in all my Converſation with him, I ever ſaw him once angry,
'or to be ſo far provoked, as to change Colour or Countenance, or Tone of Voice; diſpleaſ-
'ing Accidents and Actions would ſometimes occur, there is no Help for that; but nothing
'of that Kind moved him, that I ſaw, to any paſſionate Words, much leſs to Chiding or
'Clamour. His Life appeared to me one conſtant Calm. To conclude, I can ſay of him,
'what few Men can ſay of any Friend of theirs, nor I of any other of my Acquaintance,
'that I do not remember I ever ſaw in him any one Action, that I did, or could in my own
'Mind blame, or thought amiſs in him.'

I SHALL only ſubjoin, at the Deſire of ſome judicious Friends, the famed Ode of Mr. Edmund Smith, of Chriſt-Church, made immediately upon our Author's Death.

DUM cæde tellus luxuriat ducum,
Meum, Pococki, barbiton exigis,
Maneſque muſam faſtuoſam
Sollicitant pretioſiores.
Alter virentum proruat agmina
Sonora Thracum, donaque Phillidi
Agat puellas, heu decoris
Virginibus nimis invidenti.
Te nuda virtus, te fidei pius
Ardor ſerendæ, ſanctaque veritas
Per ſaxa, per pontum, per hoſtes
Præcipitant Aſiæ miſertum:
Cohors catenis, quà pia ſtridulis
Gemunt onuſti, vel ſude trans ſinum
Luctantur actâ, pendulive
Sanguineis trepidant in uncis.
Sentis, ut edunt ſibila, ut ardui
Micant dracones, tigris ut horridus
Intorquet ungues, ejulatque
In madido crocodilus antro.
Vides lacunæ ſulphure lividos
Ardere fluctus, quà ſtetit impiæ
Moles Gomorrhæ, mox procellâ
Hauſta rubrâ, pluviiſque flammis:
Quod iſta tellus ſi ſimiles tibi
Si forte denos nutrierat viros,
Adhuc ſtetiſſet, nec vibrato
Dextra Dei tonuiſſet igne.
Quin nunc requiris tecta virentia
Nini ferocis, nunc Babel arduum,
Immane opus, creſcentibuſque
Vertice ſideribus propinquum,
Nequicquam: amici diſparibus ſonis
Eludit aures neſcius artifex,
Linguaſque miratur recentes
In patriis peregrinus oris.
Veſtitur hinc tot ſermo coloribus,
Quot tu, Pococki, diſſimilis tui
Orator effers, quot viciſſim
Te memores celebrare gaudent.
Hi non tacebunt quo Syriam ſenex
Percurrit æſtu raptus, ut arcibus

Annon paveſcis, dum tuba pallidum
Ciet Sionem, dum tremulum polo
Caligat aſtrum, atque incubanti
Terra nigrans tegitur ſub umbra?
Quod agmen! heu quæ turma ſequacibus
Tremenda flammis! quis ſtrepitantium
Flictus rotarum eſt! O Pococki
Egregie, O animoſe vatis
Interpres abſtruſi, O ſimili fere
Correpte flamma, te, quot imagine
Crucis notantur, te, ſubacto
Chriſticolæ gravis Ottomannus
Gemens requirit, te Babylonii
Narrant poetæ, te pharetris Arabs
Plorat revulſis, & fragoſos
Jam gravior ferit horror agros.
Quà geſta nondum cognita Cæſaris,
Quà nec Maronis ſcripta, Pocockius
Ploratur ingens, & dolenda
Neſtoreæ brevitas ſenectæ.

LECTOREM.

SI quid ſit in his à nobis editis, quod illis qui Rabbinica cum Arabicis ſtudia conjungere cupiunt, prodeſſe poterit, ſatis tam pro muneris, quam pro inſtituti noſtri ratione feciſſe videamur; adeo ut Lectorem, cui iſtiuſmodi cordi ſint, ulteriori præfatione deſtinere opus non ſit, quin rectà portam, quâ patet, ingrediatur, ut quæ ab hoc fine non prorſus aliena fore ſperamus, an noſtrûm utriuſque votis reſpondeant, ipſe legendo perſpiciat. Sed cùm in ea oculos forſan conjecturi ſint & alii ſeverioribus occupati curis, quò ſuis etiam uſibus aliquid inde decerpant, liceat aliqua de totius operis ratione hiſtorico more præfari.

Quæ è Lingua Arabica in Latinam à nobis verſa ſunt, Maimonidem habent authorem, virum nominis tam apud Chriſtianos quàm Judæos meritò celebris, (qui quid de ipſo & cenſuerint & dixerint licet conſulere tum alios, tum imprimis Cl. virum Johannem Buxtorfium in ſua ad Moreh Nevochim præfatione) nec minus apud Mohammedanos; apud quos, teſte authore hiſtoriæ Medicorum) موسي الرييس Moſes Princeps audit: quòd ſcil. Judæis in Egypto degentibus aliquando præfuerit, cum eſſet من احبارهم وفضلايهم ex eorum doctiſſimis & præſtantiſſimis, idémque non ſolùm عالم بسنن اليهود Juris Judaici peritiſſimus, ſed & اوحد زمانه في صناعة الطب وفي اعمالها ſæculi ſui in arte medica, eáque facienda, Phœnix (quo nomine & Regi Salahoddino ejúſque filio Ali, cujus juſſu librum في تدبير الصحة de regimine ſanitatis compoſuit, notus fuit) nec non متفنن في العلوم omni ſcientiæ genere clarus. His artibus cum tantam apud Mohammedanos (in diverſæ profeſſionis homines ſatis plerunque obliquos) gloriam adeptus fuerit, minime mirum eſt eum apud ſuorum alios, eas, quas nemo ferè alius, conſecutum eſſe laudes, à quibus נר ישראל Lucerna Iſraelis, אור מזרח ומערב חכם עבר וערב Lumen Orientis & occidentis, Hebræorum & Arabum Sapiens, Moſes cui poſt Moſen primum haud alius ſimilis fuerit inſignitus eſt: apud alios verò (ut fieri ſolet) tantæ nominis celebritati invidentes, odium plus quam Vatinianum in ſe concitâſſe, quo perciti nihil non & contra ipſum & ipſius ſcripta molirentur; à quorum ipſum tanquam religionis Mohammeticæ, quam aliquando ſimulaverat, deſertorem accuſantium calumniis, unâ [a] Al Kadi Al Fadel Abdirrahimi fidi amici ope & gratiâ (referente Gregorio Abil Farajio) liberatus eſt. Sed non eſt nobis animus, tam quæ ad Authoris perſonam, quam quæ ad præſentis operis rationem ſpectant, in medium proferre. Inter prima quæ edidit magnus iſte Doctor ingenii ſui monumenta, eſt ipſius in ſex Miſhnæ ordines, ſeu univerſum textum Talmudicum commentarius, qui quando ab ipſo conſcriptus ſit, non aliunde meliùs diſcemus quam ex ipſius verbis quibus opus ſuum obſignavit, quæ tum in C. Opus iſtud, ut & cætera quæ ſcripſit, pleraque, excepto magno iſto Syntagmate Yad Chazakah, quare linguâ Arabicâ compoſuerit facilè patet, nempe, מפני הרחבת הלשון וביורו כי רחב הוא מאד ומפני שאנשי דורו גם כן הורגלו לדבר בו ונתפשט לשון הערבי בכל אותן הארצות Ob-

Ob linguæ iſtius amplitudinem, & perſpicuitatem, quòdque latè ſe diffunderet, eique aſſueti eſſent ejus ſæculi homines, ac in omnibus regionibus iſtis obtineret (ut verbis R. Jacobi, qui Commentarium ipſius in Seder Naſim Hebraicè interpretatus eſt, utar.) Quantam autem in deſuetudinem, apud Judæos Orientales præſertim, abierat tunc temporis lingua Hebraica, liquet ex eo quod refert R. Solomon Joſephi filius, Hiſpanus, in præfatione ad librum Præceptorum à ſe Hebraicè verſum: ſcil. quendam è Babeli degentibus literis ad R. Moſen miſſis ipſum rogaſſe ut librum ſuum Miſhneh Torah [ſeu Yad] in linguam Arabicam transferret; ſe enim Hebraicè non callere; reſpondiſſe autem R. Moſen, ſe nullo modo induci poſſe ut hoc faceret: quin potiùs ſi tantum ipſi otii ſuppeteret, ſe Commentarios ſuos in Miſhnaioth, & librum Præceptorum, quos Arabicè contexuerat, in linguam ſanctam verſurum. ונראה כי לא היה לו פנאי כי לא השלים דברו videtur autem (inquit) otium haud conſecutus, cum promiſſum ſuum non præſtiterit. Atque hoc pacto factum eſt, ut non minus iſti cum cæteris ab eodem Arabicè ſcriptis libris, aliarum regionum, quibus lingua Arabica vernacula non eſſet, Judæis, ignoti prorſus atque inutiles aliquandiu jacerent, quam prædictus ille, Babylonio iſti qui Hebraicè neſciret. בהיות נדחינו בקצות הארצות ובאיים רחוקים שאינם מכירים בלשון ערבי היו אצלם כל אותם חבורים כאילו אינם אלא שבכל דור ודור עומדים מכירים בשתי הלשונות ומעתיקים אותם ללשון הקדש להאיר עיני המעינים, Cum ſint diſperſi noſtri in ultimis terræ partibus inſuliſque longè remotis quæ linguam Arabicam neſciant, eo modo ſe habuerunt omnes libri iſti apud ipſos ac ſi non omnino [ſcripti] eſſent; niſi quod ſingulis ſæculis extiterint utriuſque linguæ periti, qui illos in linguam ſanctam verterent, ad illuſtrandos legentium oculos. ut loquitur Solomon Joſephi filius in Præfatione ad verſionem Seder Nezikin, tum de aliorum, tum de his Maimonidis ſcriptis verba faciens. Commentarius autem, de quo loquimur, iſte in Miſhnaioth, non totus ſimul ac ſemel, ſed per partes, diverſis in locis, atque à diverſis hominibus in linguam iſtam traductus eſt. Primus, ni fallor, omnium Samuel filius Judæ, filii Tibbon (ille qui vivo adhuc Maimonide Moreh Nevochim in linguam Hebraicam tranſtulit) rogatu Judæorum in urbe Lunel degentium, capita ea quæ præmiſit Magnus Doctor ſuis in Pirke Aboth Commentariis, unà cum ipſis, vertit. hoc eſt quod ipſe præfatur, כאשר ראו חכמי לוניל עיר מולדתי פירוש זאת המסכתא והפרקים אשר הקדים הרב [c] בחבור עניניה בקשו ממני להעתיקו להם כאשר עשו במאמר מורה הנבוכים Cum viderent Sapientes Luniel, urbis in qua natus ſum, explicationem tractatus iſtius, unà cum capitibus quæ præmiſit Doctor ille, quibus ſenſus ejus comprehendit, petierunt à me ut ipſam illis verterem, quemadmodum in libro Moreh Nevochim fecerant. Idem & ejuſdem Commentarium in cap. 10. tractatus Sanhedrim interpretatus eſt, teſte R. Jacobo Ben Moſe Ben Accaſi, ideoque ab ipſo aliiſque אבו המעתיקים Interpretum Pater, non immerito appellatus. Deinde R. Juda filius Solomonis (qui vulgo Charizi audit) rogatu Judæorum Maſſilienſium (uti ipſe in præfatione teſtatur) totius operis interpretationem aggreſſus eſt. כאשר דבריהם הבינותי חשתי ולא התמהמהתי ומצותם הקימותי והעתקתי פירוש זה הרב ללשון הקדש מלשון ער"ב Cum eorum verba intellexiſſem, feſtinavi, & ſine mora ipſorum mandata implens Commentarios Doctoris iſtius in linguam Sanctam ex Arabica tranſtuli. Ex his, univerſum opus iſtud Hebraicum facere, ipſi in animo fuiſſe liquet. quod tamen præſtiterit necne neſcimus, cum non amplius ipſius operâ traductum (quod ſciam) extet, quam præfatio Seder Zeraim præmiſſa, cum quinque ejuſdem tractatibus prioribus. Fuit hic vir & ingenii & ſtili elegantis, Poéta eximius, quique Moreh Nevochim etiam in linguam Hebraicam tranſtulit, licet verſio ipſius alteri illi ab Aben Tibbon concinnatæ poſthabita fuerit; non forſan, quòd illa Samuelis Tibbonidæ elegantior, ſed materiæ quæ libro iſto tractatur (utpote Philoſophicæ) congruentior: cum ut ait ipſe Charizi, חכמי כל אומה הסכימו כי אין לאדם להעתיק ספר עד ידע שלש הדברים סוד הלשון אשר יעתיק מגבולידה וסוד הלשון אשר הוא מעתיק אליה וסוד החכמה אשר הוא מפשר מליה in hoc omnium gentium Sapientes conſpirârint, non eſſe idoneum libro alicui transferendo, qui non tria hæc calluerit, linguæ è qua vertit, linquæ in quam vertit, & ſcientiæ cujus notiones explicat, myſteria. Ipſe igitur in rebus (ut videtur) Philoſophicis non adeo verſatus, minorem eo ex opere laudem reportavit, cum aliàs eloquentiæ & Poëſeos laude celeberrimus eſſet. Ut & verſio ipſius Makamat, ſeu Sermonum Al Hariri, qui penu elegantiarum Arabicarum locupletiſſimum, eáque quæ ipſe Hebraicè ad ejus libri imitationem compoſuit, abunde teſtantur. [Sed & hîc ſe diſciplinæ Talmudicæ haud ſatis gnarum confiteri videtur, obſervaturum tamen omni diligentiâ לשמור הענין ולתקן הבנין, ut ſenſum retineat rectéque omnia digerat.] Eodem hic ferè tempore quo Samuel iſte floruiſſe videtur, ídque ſuperſtite

tionum atque appendicum vice toti corpori inſerviant, ſermones integri, & eorum nonnullæ, etiam olim, viris doctis dignæ atque idoneæ viſæ quæ ſeorſim transferrentur, ut de octo capitulis tractatui Aboth præmiſſis, & capitis Chelèk ſeu decimi Sanhedrim appendice jam dictum. Cauſa nobis eas Arabice edendi ea fuit, quam innuit R. Nathanael, Ben Almeli, verbis jam antea laudatis; ſcil. quod cum lingua Arabica apud Judæos in deſuetudinem abierit, metus ſit, ne prorſus perirent theſauri iſti. Neſcio enim quo pacto factum ſit, ut paucorum jam manibus terantur quæ Arabicè ſcripta ſint, blattiſque ſolùm & tineis comedentur, iis etiam in regionibus ubi ante aliquot ſæcula, non aliam, ut vidimus, dialectum facilè intelligerent vel eorum doctiſſimi. Neſcio, inquam, quo pacto, cum fatum illud non ſolum Judæorum libris contigerit, ſed & aliorum Arabicè ſcribentium monumentis magna ex parte commune ſit: nempe, ut nec eâdem jam diligentiâ conſerventur, vel poſteritati propaganda tranſcribantur, quâ olim cum apud ipſos eâ linguâ quaſi vernaculâ gauderent, unáque cum ejus ſtudio florerent literæ, utriſque idem ferè jam fatum paſſis, magnáque veteris gloriæ parte privatis: non quod vel in anguſtiores limites redacta ſit lingua iſta quam olim erat, cum vel latiùs unà cum religione Mohammedana, cui neceſſario ſacra eſt, propagata fuerit; nec quòd qui ſummâ jam rerum apud ipſos potiuntur minori erga literas ſtudio ferantur; ſecus enim, quicquid vulgo ſtatuatur, ſe rem habere comperiet qui Turcarum annales conſuluerit, ac pluris fieri, majoribus ſumptibus ali, & ad majores honores provehi apud ipſos, quam alibi, doctos; ſed potiùs quòd turbatis ad tempus inter arma ſtudiis, cum jam fato ceſſiſſent literarum Antiſtites, nec in promptu eſſent, qui eaſdem labantes ſuſciperent, & ipſæ unà occubuiſſe videantur, vel grave ſaltem deliquium paſſæ, poſt quod imperio ad homines linguâ pariter & ſede diverſos jam tranſlato, in integrum nullâ medicorum ope adhuc reſtitui potuerint. Quæ animo perpendenti veriſſimè ac graviſſimè dictum videtur illud quod Ali à quibuſdam acceptum fertur, زوال العلم اهون من موت العلما Scientiæ ipſius quàm doctorum leviorem eſſe occaſum, cum utroſque non rarò idem ſepulchrum contumulet, nec illa his ſuperſit: adeo ut nihil gravius pati poſſit ſæculum eruditorum jacturâ, utut incolumes plerumque contemptui, ſi non odio manifeſto habere ſoleat. Sed ne ad limen perductos in diverticula abducamus; Quòd & characteribus Hæbraicis imprimenda curavimus Arabica, ea in re autorem ipſum (è cujus autographo parum abeſt, quin mihi perſuadeam edita eſſe horum aliqua) imitati ſumus; idque conſilio, ſtudioſis, ſi quid ſentiam, non inutili, quò ita ei ſcribendi rationi aſſueſcant, quâ quotquot ferè è Judæis Arabicè ſcripſerunt uſi, ut nunc ſolent, & olim videntur. In horum, aliorúmve hoc genus Autorum, librum aliquem qui inciderit, pede magis inoffenſo perget, ſi mori ſcribendi iſti aſſuetus priùs fuerit. Quem in finem, ſi quid alicui contulerit opus iſtud, Academiæ Oxonienſis beneficium gratus agnoſcat, quæ typographiam ſuam ea ipſa de cauſa typis ad hanc rem idoneis inſtrui curavit, quibus plus jam hoc in genere quam aliàs adhuc, quod ſciam, unquam in publicum prodiit. Quod prodiit ne ſine ulteriori examine contemptui habeat, ſuadet magnum Maimonidis nomen, qui ut præcipuis reip. literariæ Antiſtibus viſum eſt, nugari non ſolet. Nec dubito quin & hæc penitiùs introſpecta eundem quem cætera ipſius ſcripta genium ſpirent, ſed & in iis repertum iri nonnulla quæ ab ipſo primùm in ordinem redacta, pleniúſque ac fuſiùs quàm ab aliis tradita ſint; quod de fundamentis fidei Judaicæ hîc ab ipſo in articulos ſuos diſtributis teſtatur Abarbinel. Quis totius operis Talmudici rationem & hiſtoriam tam dilucidè alibi enucleavit? Si quis interim eadem cum Hebraicis conferens, me à doctis iſtis Judæis, qui in eam linguam ipſa verterunt, in non paucis diſcrepare viderit, antequam vel in hanc vel alteram partem ſtatuat, utraque cum authoris (quæ hic dedimus) Arabicis diligenter conferat. Nam & eorum plerique errores quos ſibi exemplarium quæ ſecuti ſunt vitio, aliiſve de cauſis neceſſario committendos perſenſerunt, magna equidem cum modeſtia deprecantur; neque ipſe eò immodeſtiæ perveni ut quempiam mecum errare velim. Lector, quo utilitati ſuæ (cui poſt Dei gloriam dicatus eſt labor noſter) conſulat, in ea, quæ veritati maximè conſentanea eſt, interpretatione eligendâ judicio ſuo utatur; & ſi in utrâque erratum deprehenderit, tertiam ipſe reponat.

In Appendice notarum verè miſcellaneâ, neque ad ſtrictas methodi leges ubique exigendâ, quid præſtitum ſit haud facile erit uno intuitu ob oculos ponere. Ad hunc ferè ſcopum collimant omnia, ut ſtudiorum Rabbinicorum & Arabicorum in genuino S. Scripturarum ſenſu eruendo, iiſque explicandis uſum, prolatis exemplis, oſtendant, & commendatiorem reddant. Quod vel bonarum literarum amantioribus perſuaſum dare, forſan non adeo facile erit; multo minus illis, quibus vel quid ultra vernaculam ſapere, iis rite interpretandis maximum ſtatuatur impedimentum. Genus hominum planè ἄτοπον καὶ ἄλογον, atque hujus ſæculi lues; à quibus quid paſſus fuerim, (quanto majora, niſi apparuiſſet Deus μετανόμιος, paſſurus! nec tam aliâ forſan de causâ, quàm quod & doctos amem, & à doctis, licet indignus, amer) qui noverit, haud adeo mirabitur ſi impræſentiarum, nec plura, nec meliora præſtiterim. Sed liberavit me Deus, virorum inſignium, quibus meliora cordi ſunt, ope ultro oblatâ: quibus gratias quantas poſſum maximas refero, aliáſque, quibus impar ſum, plures adhuc debere me hîc palam teſtatum volo. Deus, qui hanc mentem illis indidit, bona ipſis omnia rependat, & boni omnes bene cupiant. Scitum eſt illud Poëtæ,

من يفعل الخير لا يعدم جوازيه ۞
لايذهب العرف بين الله والناس ۞

Qui fecerit bonum, non deſtituetur mercede ipſius.
Non perit beneficium inter Deum & homines.

Quòd ſi in notis iſtis à viris ſummis in diverſum aliquando abeam, non eſt quod quis vel me illis detractum ire putet, vel veritatem à tanto illis inferiore prolatam faſtidioſè reſpuat. Obtinuit ſemper atque obtinebit illud etiam Poëtæ, COngregamini, ſapientes, & in ſtatione veſtra conſiſtite, dote enim bonâ vos donabo. Accedite, filii, & auſcultate mihi, timorem Domini docebo vos: diligenter auſcultate mihi & comedite bonum, ſitque inſtar horti irrigui anima veſtra. Quis eſt vir qui delectatur vitâ, qui amat dies quibus videat bonum, qui non extulit ſuper ſe regem aliquem magnum, nec ſub ipſo ſe incurvavit; quem non ſeduxerunt ſeductores ejus, neque fuit inter eos qui ab ipſo pellecti ſunt, qui in corde ſuo ſtatuit non pollutum iri ſe portione eſcæ regis, aut vino compotationis ipſius? divertat huc ad victimam meam quam mactavi, ad vinum meum quod donec inveteraſceret ſervavi, ad eam quam inſtruxi menſam. Adeſte, veſcimini cibo meo, vinum quod miſcui bibite. Ecce in eo eſt ex omni genere fructuum pretioſorum, recentium ſimul & veterum, vinúmque conditum, ſuccus malogranatorum loqui faciens labia dormientium. Eſt autem ipſum oblatio ſpontanea vini mei, primitiæ omnis frumenti mei, tritura mea, & proventus areæ meæ. Vinum ipſius è vinea collis præpinguis, & panis ipſius panis fortium, ſiquis ederit ipſum, portio ejus pinguis erit; ſapor ejus ut ſapor olei recentis. Comedite pinguia, & bibite dulcia, filii mei. Comedite, ſocii, bibite, & inebriamini, intelligentes mei. Hæc eſt menſa quæ eſt coram Domino. Eſt autem ipſa interpretatio Miſhnæ, quam expoliverunt patres veſtri, explicatio maceriarum, quas ſtruxerunt paſtores qui fœtas veſtras ducunt, & fundamentorum ſuper quæ fundati eſtis, radicum, nec non conſuetudinum, decretorum & conſtitutionum, quæ conſtituerunt veſtrum potentiſſimi, à die quem præcepit Dominus, ac deinceps per generationes veſtras. Atque ecce eſt illa inſtar turris Davidicæ ſuper tumulum ſuum conſtitutæ, in quâ mille ſuſpenſi ſunt clypei, cum omnibus electorum inſtrumentis bellicis, omnia potentium ſcuta. Ego Moſes f. Maimonis Hiſpanus ipſam extruxi, è mari Talmudis extraxi, è ſapphiro Toſiphtæ fundamenta ejus jeci, ipſam carbunculo Siphræ ſtravi, auróque Siphri oblevi, verbis excellentium fulcivi, argento puro conſtrinxi, & in argilla cordis mei fudi. Eſtque, ecce, illa ſicut vinea deſiderabilis, quam plantatione deliciarum conſitam interdiu ac noctu cuſtodivi, & ad momenta irrigavi, donec conſummati fuerint flores ipſius, & maturuerint botri, omniſque uva parva ſe aperuerit, & omnis in ea arbor gemmas emiſerit, dederíntque mandragoræ odorem. Portas ejus quas aperui non obſeravi, neque interdiu aut noctu clauſi, ſed omni recto & mundo liberè ipſam permiſi, & pro munere diſcipulis miſi. Atque ecce alligavi ipſam omnibus qui verba tranſcribunt, ſedentibus coram Domino, ut ſit ex quo comedant ad ſaturitatem, & operimentum durabile.

SCIAS omnia legis præcepta quæ à Deo ad Moſen magiſtrum noſtrum demiſſa ſunt, demiſſa ad ipſum fuiſſe una cum interpretatione ſua, eloquente Deo ipſi primùm textum, deinde explicationem & interpretationem ejus, & quid comprehenderet textus iſte authenticus. Modus autem edocendi illa Iſraelem ejuſmodi erat qualem tibi deſcripturus ſum. Recipiente ſe [Moſe] in tentorium ſuum, primus ipſum conveniebat Ahron, cui textum ad ſe [cœlitùs] demiſſum ſemel enarrabat, ipſúmque ejus interpretationem docuit; illo deinde ſurgente atque ad dextram Moſis ſe ſiſtente, ingrediebantur Eleazar & Ithamar filii ipſius, quibus etiam dictabat Moſes idem quod dictaverat Ahroni; tum ſurgentibus ipſis, cedentibúſque uno ad ſiniſtram Moſis magiſtri noſtri, altero ad dextram Ahronis, ingrediebantur poſtea ſeptuaginta Seniores, quos docebat Moſes eo modo quo docuerat Ahronem & filios ipſius. Ingrediebatur poſtea cœtus populi promiſcuus, omnis nempe quærens Dominum, quibus etiam idem recitavit, donec omnes ab ipſo [illud] audirent. Audierat autem jam Ahron à Moſe textum illum quater, filii ipſius ter, Seniores bis, reliquus cætus ſemel. Deinde diſcendente ab ipſis Moſe, repetebat Ahron textum iſtum, quem memoriâ tenebat à Moſe quater auditum, uti deſcripſimus, omnibus qui aderant: tum diſcedebat etiam Ahron: atque ita duo etiam Ahronis filii jam quater audierant [illud quod dictum eſt;] à Moſe ter, & ab Ahrone ſemel. Poſt Ahronis igitur diſceſſum, repetebant Eleazar & Ithamar eundem textum, quem quater audierant, uti explicavimus, coram toto preſentium cœtu, atque à docendo ſurrexerunt. Atque hoc pacto factum eſt ut etiam ſeptuaginta Seniores jam textum iſtum quater audierint, bis à Moſe, ſemel ab Ahrone, nec non ab Eleazaro & Ithamaro ſemel. Recitabant ergò & ſeptuaginta Seniores textum iſtum populo ſemel, ut & omnes quater illum audirent, primò à Moſe, ſecundò ab Ahrone, tertiò à filiis ipſius, quartò à ſeptuaginta Senioribus, qui tum diſcedentes alii alios docebant illud quod à Dei nuntio acceperant, textum autem voluminibus inſcribebant. Tum diſperſi ſunt primores populi per totum Iſraelem ad eos docendos atque inſtituendos, donec memoriâ tenerent textum illum, ejúſque lectionem callerent. Deinde docebant etiam illos interpretationem textûs iſtius à Deo demiſſi, quæ ſenſus ejus univerſos contineret. Textum autem ſcripto, traditionem memoriæ mandabant; atque ita dicunt ſapientes (quibus pax) Lex quæ ſcripta eſt, & Lex quæ ore tradita. Dixerunt etiam in Baraitha, Et allocutus eſt Dominus Moſen in monte Sinai. Quid ſibi vult quod dicit, In monte Sinai? Annon tota lex tradita eſt de Sinai? Verùm hoc dictum eſt ut tibi indicet, quòd ſicut præceptum de anno intermiſſionis, cum generalibus, particularibus & minutiis quæ ad ipſum [ſpectant] datum ſit è Sinai, ita & reliqua præcepta cum generalibus, particularibus & minutiis ſuis data ſunt è Sinai; ut e. g. tibi dicam quòd dixerit ipſi Dominus, In Tabernaculis habitabitis ſeptem diebus, tum docuerit ipſum neceſſaria eſſe tabernacula iſta Viris non, Fœminis, neque obligari ad ea ægrotos, neque itinerantes, neque tecta ipſis de aliis [rebus] quàm quæ è terra germinant [imponenda.] Neque enim obtegenda eſſe vel lanâ, vel ſerico, vel vaſis, etiamſi ex iis quæ producit terra [confectis,] veluti ſtoreis aut veſtibus: nec non, edendum, bibendum, atque dormiendum in ipſis eſſe ſeptem dies integros; neque debere minus quàm ſeptem palmas longitudine, ac totidem latitudine continere, altitudine autem non minus quàm decem palmas. Veniens ergò Legatus Dei (c. p.) attulit [ſecum] hoc præceptum cum interpretatione ipſius; eodémque modo 613. præcepta una cum interpretationibus. Præcepta autem voluminibus inſcribebantur, expoſitiones ore tradebantur. Fine autem anni quadrageſimi, initio menſis Shebat, convocavit ipſos Moſes, (c. p.) dicens, Appropinquavit jam tempus mortis meæ; ſi quis ergo traditionis alicujus à me acceptæ oblitus fuerit, accedens petat ut eam ipſi declarem, & ſi quæſtio aliqua cuipiam intellectu difficilis videatur, accedat ut eam ipſi explicem. Hoc eſt quod dicit Scriptura, [a] Voluit Moſes explanare legem iſtam, dicendo, &c. atque ita dixerunt ſapientes in [libro] Sifre, Si quis oblitus fuerit conſtitutionis alicujus, veniat & eam ſecundo audiat, & ſi quis opus habeat explanatione, accedat ut ipſi explanetur. Traditionum ergo veritatem ab eo didicerunt, atque explicationes acceperunt toto illo temporis ſpatio quod inter initium menſis Shebat & diem ſeptimum Adar intercedit. Cum autem jam prope eſſet ut moreretur, manum deſcribendis libris admovens, tredecim exaravit legis exemplaria, in pergameno omnia, à litera B vocis Bereſhith uſque ad L, vocis Iſrael [quâ terminatur lex,] quorum ſingula ſingulis tribubus, quibus uterentur, diſtribuit, decimum tertium autem dedit Levitis, dicens illis, Accipite librum legis, &c. Tum montem circa meridiem ſeptimi Adar (uti traditione verâ acceptum eſt) conſcendit. Fuitque hoc mors ejus reſpectu noſtri, eo quod ipſo privati ſumus, at ipſius reſpectu vita, ob eum ad quem evectus eſt [gradum] atque ita dixerunt [magiſtri] (q. p.) Moſes Doctor noſter non eſt mortuus, verum aſcendit ut ſerviret [Deo] in excelſis. Verùm ſermo de his valdè prolixus eſt, nec hujus loci. Mortuo ergo Moſe, cum Joſuam iis quæ ad ipſum demiſſæ fuerant explicationibus inſtructum reliquiſſet, Joſua ejuſque ſæculi homines ſecundum eas ſententiam dixerunt. Quidquid autem Moſi acceptum ferret ipſe aut ſeniorum aliquis, nulla de eo controverſia, nulla incidit diſſenſio, at ſi quid erat è ramis de quo nihil à Moſe acceptum fuerat, quid de eo ſtatuendum eſſet eliciebatur collatione, ope tredecim regularum quæ ipſi [Moſi] tradita ſunt in Sinai; iſtis nempe tredecim argumentandi modis quibus legis ſenſus eruitur. Eorum autem, quæ iſto modo eliciebantur, quædam erant de quibus nulla omnino incidit diſſenſio, cum unanimi omnium conſenſu recepta eſſent, alia verò de quibus accidit inter duas conjecturas diſcrepantia, prævalente apud unum quod ipſe opinatus fuerat, apud alium quod ipſe conjectando aſſecutus. Hoc enim inter ſententias, quæ è locis probabiliter argumentandi eruuntur, evenire ſolet. Accidente autem hujuſmodi diſſenſione in plurium ſententiam itum eſt, juxta Dei mandatum quo ad plures inclinare jubet.

Scias autem ad diſquiſitionem in explicanda lege & eliciendis ope tredecim modorum conſectariis nihil conferre prophetiam, ſed quod fecerunt Joſua & Phineas reſpectu diſquiſitionis & ratiocinationis, idem eſſe quod fecerunt Rabina & Rab Aſhe. Quod ad ex-

[a] Deut. i. 5.

excellentiam autem Prophetæ ſpectat eorúmque quæ circa legem fecerit, cujuſcunque tandem generis fuerint, eſt illud certe magni momenti fundamentum ex iis quibus fundatur religio. Porrò videtur mihi hic locus eſſe explicandi fundamentum iſtud, quod tamen fieri nequit niſi præmiſſâ diſtinctione modorum quibus prophetiam ſibi vendicant Prophetæ, quáque ratione vera comprobetur prophetia: cum hoc etiam magnum ſit fundamentum in quo errant, non ſolum univerſum hominum vulgus, ſed & potioris notæ non pauci; putantes, ſcil. non credendum prophetiam ſibi vendicanti, niſi poſt editum miraculum par alicui è miraculis Moſis Doctoris noſtri; & neceſſe eſſe ut ordinarium rerum curſum perrumpat, ſicut fecit Eliab in reſuſcitando viduæ filio, aut ut factum eſt in deprædicatis Eliſhæ miraculis. Regula autem hæc minimè vera eſt, cum omnia quæ patrarunt Eliab, Eliſha, cæteríque Prophetæ, non in eum finem fecerint ut iis Prophetiam ſuam confirmatum irent; cum jam antea de eo certo conſtaret: ſed ea poſcente neceſſitate ediderint, cum pro ea quâ apud Deum erant propinquitate, voluntatem ipſorum perfecerit, juxta illud piis promiſſum, [b] Et cum ſtatues verbum, ratum erit tibi. Vera autem comprobatur prophetia eo modo quo hoc, quem exorſus ſum, ſermone deſcripturi tibi ſumus. Dico igitur, primò, canones in lege noſtra de prophetis traditos, ita ſe habere: ſc. eos, qui prophetiæ munus ſibi vendicant, in duo diſtingui genera, eorum qui in nomine Idoli, & eorum qui in nomine Domini vaticinantur. Prophetia autem in nomine Idoli duplicis rurſus eſt generis, primum, cum ſurgens Propheta dixerit, Hujuſmodi ſtella influxu ſuo ſpirituali in me demiſſo, dixit, Hoc modo me colite, vel, hoc modo me invocate, nec non cum ad Idoli aut Teleſmatis alicujus cultum invitat dicens, Hoc mihi illud indicavit, hoc mihi nuntiavit, vel præcepit mihi ut juberem ipſum tali modo coli, quomodo facere ſolebant Prophetæ Baal, & Prophetæ Luci. Secundum, cum dixerit quiſpiam, Venit ad me à Deo revelatio, colendum eſſe Idolum tale, aut ſpiritualem ejuſmodi influxum tali modo eliciendum (rationem interim aliquam cultus, & actiones aliquas deſcribens quibus utuntur qui tali dediti ſunt cultui, quemadmodum inter fundamenta legis noſtræ traditur) hic etiam inter Prophetas Idololatricos cenſendus eſt, cum hoc nomen comprehendat non ſolum illos qui dicant ipſum Idolum ſe coli juſſiſſe, aut aliud aliquid mandâſſe, ſed & eos qui dicant Dominum creaturæ alicujus cultum præcepiſſe. Cum igitur audierimus quempiam quolibet horum modorum ſe Prophetam venditâſſe, atque hoc manifeſtò de ipſo probatum fuerit, debet ille ſtrangulatione è medio tolli, ſicut dicit Deus, [c] Propheta autem ille, vel ſomnians ſomnium, morte afficietur: neque habebitur ratio [muneris] quod ſibi vendicat, neque requiretur ab ipſo ſignum; imo etſi miracula ediderit ad profeſſionem iſtam confirmandam, quibus nihil unquam magis mirum audivimus, nihilominus ſtrangulabitur, nullâ miraculorum iſtorum habitâ ratione. Cauſa enim ob quam rata fuerint iſta miracula, ea eſt quam aſſignat Scriptura (dicens,) [d] Quoniam tentat vos Dominus Deus veſter, &c. Teſtimonium enim intellectus, qui profeſſionem ejus falſi arguit, oculi qui miracula ipſius viderit teſtimonio firmius eſt, cum apud intellectu præditos demonſtratione certa probatum ſit, non debere magnificari, neque coli præter unum qui omnia condidit, & ab omnibus perfectione ſumma diſtinctus eſt.

Porrò, qui in nomine Domini vaticinantur, duplici etiam ſunt in genere. 1. Cum quis in nomine Domini prophetans ad ipſum homines allicit, & ad eum colendum incitat, dicens, Deum præceptum aliquod præceptis ſuis addidiſſe, aut præceptum aliquod de numero eorum quæ continet liber legis detraxiſſe. Neque intereſt quicquam addiderit an abſtulerit, ſive iis quæ in textu legis habentur, ſive ipſorum explicationi traditione acceptæ. Uti ſiquidem addat vel detrahat iis quæ in textu habentur, hoc modo, Dixit mihi Deus, Spatium quo pro præputiatis habendi ſint fructus, duorum tantum annorum eſſe, poſt quos fructibus ſativis veſci licitum: vel dicendo, Dixit mihi Dominus, quatuor annis illicitum erit illis veſci, loco ejus quod dixit Dominus, Tribus annis incircumciſi erunt vobis, &c. atque ita in ejuſmodi aliis. Nec non ſi aliquam, quamcunque tandem, in traditione mutationem fecerit, etiam favente ipſi textus literâ: e. g. ſi dicat, dictum ejus in lege, Et abſcindes manum ejus, non parcet oculus tuus, de abſciſſione reverâ intelligendum eſſe, non autem de mulcta pudore [alium] afficienti conſtitutâ, prout traditione acceptum eſt; atque hoc prophetiæ acceptum ferat, dicens, dixit mihi Dominus dictum ſuum, [e] Et abſcindes manum ejus, prout ſonat intelligendum: hic etiam ſtrangulatione tollendus erit, cum Propheta mendax ſit, Deo illud affingens, quod Deus ipſi non dixit; neque ejus ob ſignum aut miraculum ab ipſo patratum ratio habebitur; cum Propheta ille, qui miraculis ſuis totum mundum ad ſtuporem adegit, cuique ut crederemus, fidémque haberemus infixit Deus cordibus noſtris, (aſſerente ipſo Deo, cum dixit, Et tibi credent in ſæculum) jam antea nobis denunciaverit, non proditurum à Deo aliam ab iſta legis lationem. Atque hoc eſt quod dicit, [f] Non eſt in cælis ipſa ut dicas, Quis aſcendet pro nobis in cælum, &c. Et quod dicit, In corde tuo, & in ore tuo, hoc innuens, vel ſententias quæ ore traduntur, vel concluſiones quæ ſpeculatione, (unâ ex potentiis è corde oriundis) eliciuntur, quibus etiam aliquid vel addi vel detrahi vetuit, dicens, [g] Non addes illi, neque diminues de eo. Ideóque dixerunt Majores, quibus pax, Non eſt Prophetæ conceſſum ut aliquid ab iſto tempore immutet. Cùm ergò ſciamus ipſum in eo quod ſibi vendicat, in Deum mendacem eſſe, eíque affingere quod ab ipſo non ſit illi dictum, neceſſe eſt ut eum morte afficiamus, declarante Scriptura dum dicit, [h] Propheta qui addiderit, &c. morietur Propheta ille.

Secundò. Cum [quis] ad Deum [colendum] homines invitat, atque ad præceptum ejus cuſtodiendum incitat, nec non ut legem obſervent denunciat, ídque citra additionem, vel diminutionem, (ſicut dixit ultimus eorum, [i] Mementote Legis Moſis ſervi mei, cui mandavi in Horeb ſuper omnem Iſraël, ſtatuta & judicia) ei qui ipſam obſervaverit, bona promittens; at tranſgredienti pœnam interminans; uti fecerunt Iſaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, cæteríque: alia interim à lege præcipiens

[e] Deut. xxv. 12. [f] Exod. xix. 14. [g] Deut. iv. 2. & xii. 32. [h] Deut. xviii. 20. [i] Mal. iv. 4.

& prohibens: e. g. ſi dicat. Expugnate nunc regionem iſtam, aut ſectam iſtam: ſicut olim mandavit Samuel Sauli ut Amalecum occideret; aut [ſi quem] prohibeat morte afficere; ſicut [k] Eliſha interdixit Jehoramo, ne exercitum Hazaëlis, qui Samariam ingreſſus eſt, deleret, (uti notum eſt;) &, ut vetuit Iſaiah aquam intra muros derivari; &, ut interdixit Jeremiah Iſraëlitis ne egrederentur extra Jeruſalem; cum ejuſmodi aliis. Cùm ergò prophetiæ [munus] vendicaverit ſibi Propheta, ita ut illud Idolo alicui acceptum non ferat, neque Legi quicquam addat aut ſubtrahat, verùm alias quaſdam inſiſtat vias, eo modo quo explicavimus, tum opus eſt, ut eum probemus, quò vocatio ipſius nobis ſit comperta; quoniam cùm de alicujus vocatione conſtat, tenemur omnia quæ jubet, tam minoris quàm majoris [momenti] præſtare; & quicunque tranſgreſſus fuerit aliquod ejus mandatum, tenetur morte per manus Dei [infligendâ] ex dicto Domini de eo qui tranſgreſſus fuerit mandata Prophetarum, [l] Ego requiram ab illo. Quòd ſi vera non comprobetur vocatio ejus, ipſe ſtrangulatione perimendus eſt.

De veritate autem vocationis [Prophetarum] conſtabit hoc, quo deſcripturus ſum, modo. Scilicet, cùm quis prophetiam ſibi vendicaverit, ſicut declaravimus, eóque idoneus fuerit; utpote qui fuerit doctus, religioſus, continens, intellectu & omni morum probitate præditus, juxta illam apud nos regulam, Non reſidet prophetia niſi ſuper ſapientem, fortem, & divitem. Multæ autem ſunt notæ ad hoc propoſitum ſpectantes, quas omnes comprehendere nequimus, & de quibus ſermone inſtituto ſingulas probare conari, allatis textibus è Sacra Scriptura dictiſque Sapientum, librum potiùs integrum per ſe requirerent. Qualem forſan [ut aliquando componamus,] cum omnibus quæ eódem ſpectant, auxilium ſuppeditabit Deus. Cùm ergò idoneus huic muneri fuerit, prout oportet, ipſúmque ſibi vendicaverit, dicemus illi, Ede nobis promiſſa, & refer nobis aliqua eorum quæ nota fecit tibi Dominus; quo referente, ſi vera evaſerint promiſſa ejus omnia, hinc prophetiæ ejus veritatem percipiemus: quòd ſi in aliquo ipſorum, vel minutiſſimo, mendax fuerit; hinc mendacem eum eſſe cognoſcemus: atque hæc expreſſa eſt legis de hujuſmodi probatione ſententia: [m] Et cùm dices in corde tuo, Quomodo cognoſcemus verbum quod non locutus eſt Dominus, quod loquetur Propheta in nomine Domini, & non erit verbum, &c. Quinetiam etſi verum dixerit nobis in uno aut altero promiſſo, nondum tamen certi erimus prophetiam ipſius veram eſſe, ſed manebit apud nos dubiæ fidei, donec veracitas ipſius in omnibus quæ à Deo refert, vicibus continuis exhibeatur: unde de Samuele dicitur, (Poſtquam notum ac certum fuerat quodcunque diceret, ratum fieri,) [n] Et novit omnis Iſrael à Dan uſque ad Beerſhebam quod fidelis eſſet Samuel in Prophetam Domino; neque accidit illis negotium aliquod de quo non ſciſcitarentur Prophetas. Niſi enim ita fuiſſet, ut prophetas de omnibus rebus ſuis conſulerent, non adiiſſet Saul in principio Samuelem, de eo quod amiſerat ſciſcitaturus. Minimè autem dubium eſt ſic ſe rem habere, quoniam Deus Prophetas [mittendo,] fecit ne opus haberemus Aſtrologis & Divinatoribus & Ariolis; quoniam illos consulere possumus de rebus nostris, vel simul universis, vel divisim singulis, ut nobis à Deo vera nuncient; sicut isti ea quæ forsan vera, forsan falsa, renunciant. Hoc est quod dicit Scriptura, [o] Quia gentes istæ, quas tu expellis, præstigiatores & divinos audiunt: at tu non sic: Dedit tibi Dominus Deus tuus Prophetam è medio tui, &c. Atque has ob rationes appellabant Prophetam, Videntem; quòd res futuras, antequam existerent, prævideret. Sicut dicit, [p] Quoniam Propheta hodie, antea appellabatur Videns.

Forsan autem [ita] apud se putet quis ac dicat, Num ergò ex veritate prædictionis eorum quæ eventura sunt, vera censebitur Prophetia eorum qui eam sibi vendicant? Si ita se res habet, possunt Arioli, Astrologi, omnibúsque potentiis animalibus præditi, arrogare sibi prophetiam, cùm quotidiè oculis nostris videamus futura prædicere. Atqui (novit Deus) hic locus est magni momenti, quem oportet ut explicemus, quò appareat differentia inter illas quas Propheta à Deo refert, eorúmque qui potentiis istiusmodi præditi sunt prædictiones.

Dico igitur, Ariolos, Astrologos, atque ejus sectæ homines prædicere quidem futura, sed ita, ut necessariò partim vera, partim falsa sint; quod & perpetuò videmus, & confirmant ipsi qui eas artes profitentur; neque negare possunt, dum hinc gloriam captant, si cujuspiam mendacia pauciora quàm alterius fuerint: sed ut verum dicat quisquam eorum in singulis, hoc impossibile est: neque id sibi arrogant iis potentiis præditi; verùm ubi dixerit quis, Futura est hoc anno siccitas, nullâ per eum cadente pluviâ, si parum in eo pluat; vel ubi dixerit, Cras pluet, si postridiè pluat, &c. habetur hic admodum excellens, atque ex illustris famæ hominibus, quos celebrant historiæ. Atque hic est sensus ejus quod dicit [q] Isaiah Babeli, Stent nunc & servent te speculantes cælos, contemplantes stellas, cognoscere facientes menses, ab iis quæ ventura sunt super te. Et dixerunt sapientes [Me asher, ab iis] non [Col asher, ab omni quod.] Non sunt autem promissa Prophetarum ejusmodi, sed penitus vera, quorum non intercidit quicquam sive parvum, sive magnum, per totum seculorum decursum in omnibus quæ nunciat Propheta quis à Domino: ideò si quando irritum fuerit eorum aliquod, noverimus eum mendacem. Atque hoc est quod dicit Scriptura, Quoniam non cadet è verbo Domini in terram. Quod & innuit Jeremiah, ubi [loquitur] de iis, qui cum in somniis vera viderent, ea de quibus ita moniti fuerant, ac si prophetiæ essent, enarrârunt; dum eos reprehendens, & eorum prætextus labefactans, dicit, [r] Propheta, cui est somnium, narret somnium, & cui sunt verba mea, loquatur verba mea in veritate. Quid paleæ cum tritico? dicit Dominus. Cujus dicti sensum hunc reddunt Sapientes, quòd prophetia quid purum sit, nec admistum habeat falsi aliquid, instar frumenti à palea puri; at somnia, aliáque ejusmodi indicia, mendacium habent admistum, instar paleæ, in qua grana quædam frumenti sunt: unde dixerunt, Sicut impossibile est ut sit triticum sine palea, ita fieri non potest ut sit somnium absque verbis falsis. Supereſt autem hic locus magni momenti, qui explicatione indiget: scil. Quòd siquis propheta mala populo merenti merenti comminetur: e. g. famem aut gladium, aut inundatum iri ipsorum regionem, vel descensura in illos fulmina, atque ejusmodi alia, quorum deinde nihil eveniat, verùm remisso ipsis peccato res prosperè succedant; non tamen inde constet de mendacio Prophetæ illius, ut Pseudopropheta, qui morte mulctandus sit, habeatur, quòd pœnituerit Deum mali, cùm forsan pœnitentiam egerint, aut à peccatis suis destiterint, aut distulerit eos Dominus pro longanimitate sua, atque in aliud tempus rejecerit; (sicut fecit Achabo, cui per Eliam dixit, [s] Non adducam malum in diebus ejus, in diebus filii ipsius adducam malum super domum ipsius) aut remiserit ipsis ob merita antecedentia. Neque enim de hujusmodi rebus loquitur cùm dicit, Neque fuerit res illa, neque eveniat. Quòd si bona tempore constituto eventura promiserit, dicens, Futuram hoc anno pacem, evenerit autem bellum; aut, Futurum hunc annum pluvium & fertilem, fuerit autem sterilis & siccus, &c. erit hic Pseudopropheta, de cujus prætextuum falsitate & mendacio constat. Atque hic est de quo dixit Dominus, [t] Per superbiam loquutus est illud Propheta, non timebis ab eo, i. e. Non terrebit neque avertet te à cæde ejus, religio, bonitas, aut scientia ipsius, cùm per superbiam magna professus, falsa de Deo loquutus fuerit. Nam quoties Deus populo per Prophetas bona promiserit, fieri non potest, quin ea perficiat, ut ita prophetiam ipsorum apud homines confirmet: atque hoc est quod dixerunt [Majores nostri] Omne verbum quod prodierit ex ore Domini in bonum, etiam conditione additâ, non tamen revocat. Quod ad illud autem quòd timeret Jacob, postquàm ipsi Deus bona promisisset, cùm diceret, Et ecce ego tecum, &c. (invenimus enim illum timuisse perditionem, dicente [Scriptura] & timuit Jacob valdè) dixerunt Sapientes, timuisse eum ne prævaleret ipsi peccatum, quò perditione dignus fieret: atque hoc est quod dicunt, Putavit forsan peccatum in causa futurum, &c. Ostendit autem hoc, aliquando etiam promittente Deo bona, prævalere peccata, ne rata fiant bona ista. Scias ergò evenire quidem hoc inter Deum & prophetam; at ut jubeat Deus Prophetam bona populo simpliciter denunciare, quæ deinde [eventu] non confirmentur, hoc certè falsum est, quod fieri non possit; neque enim superesset locus unde dignosceretur veritas Prophetiæ, cùm ipse in libro suo hanc nobis regulam dederit, dignoscendum Prophetam ex veritate promissionum ipsius. Atque ad hanc regulam illustrem, digitum intendit Jeremias in contentione sua cum Hanania filio Aazuri, ubi prophetat Jeremias de malo & perditione, futurúmque ut Nebuchadnezzar victoria potiretur, & superior [pugnâ] factus templum vastaret, Hananias autem f. Aazuri bona annunciat, sc. reportatum iri Hierosolyma vasa templi, quæ translata fuerant Babelem; quare dixit illi Jeremias inter disceptandum, Consentaneum est fundamentis apud nos servatis, etiamsi non confirmetur vaticinium meum, neque victoriâ potiatur Nebuchadnezzar, nec reportentur vasa Domûs Domini, sicut tu [futurum] affirmas, non tamen esse in his, quod me prophetam esse mendacem arguat, cùm fieri possit ut Dominus misereatur eorum; verum si non confirmetur dictum tuum, neque reducantur vasa domus Domini, certò conſtabit illud quod tibi arrogas, falſum eſſe, neque certò conſtabit te prophetam eſſe, donec eventu comprobentur promiſſa iſta de bonis à te facta. Hoc eſt quod dicit, [u] Veruntamen audi nunc verbum hoc quod ego loquor in auribus tuis, & in auribus univerſi populi. Prophetæ qui fuerunt ante me & ante te à ſæculo, & prophetaverunt ad terras multas & ſuper regna magna, de bello, & malo & peſte: Propheta, qui prophetabit de pace, cum venerit verbum prophetæ, ſcietur propheta quem miſerit Dominus in veritate: quo dicto innuit, quod ad Prophetas illos qui prophetarunt de bono & malo, non conſtare ex malo quod comminati ſunt, verè an falſò ſibi prophetiam arrogaverint; verùm argumentum eſt veracitatis ipſorum, cùm bonum, quod promiſerunt, ratum fuerit.

Ubi verò de vocatione Prophetæ certò conſtiterit, juxta fundamenta præmiſſa, notæque fuerit famæ, ut in Samuele, Elia, &c. Prophetæ iſti conceſſum eſt, illud in Lege facere, quod alii nemini; illud nempe quod deſcripturus ſum, ſcil. cum omitti jubet præceptum quodvis ex affirmativorum numero, aut perpetrari quicquam quod præceptum aliquod negativum prohibeat, neceſſe eſſe dicto ipſius per omnia parere, & quicunque tranſgreſſus fuerit illud, reum fieri mortis cælitus infligendæ, cauſâ Idololatriæ exceptâ. Atque hæc eſt ſententia Sapientum in Talmude, ubi dicunt, In omnibus, ſi dicat tibi Propheta, tranſgredere verba Legis, auſcultes ipſi, exceptâ Idololatriâ; verum hæc conditione, ne perpetuum velit eſſe mandatum iſtud, dicens præcepiſſe Dominum hac de re, ut ita fiat uſque in ſæculum, ſed tantùm jubeat illud per occaſionem aliquam, nec niſi ad tempus deſignatum: atque Propheta ipſe, quoties juſſerit mandatum aliquod ex iis quæ præcepit Dominus per Moſem, tranſgredi, ſi interrogatus fuerit, reſpondeat, tranſgreſſionem iſtam non fore perpetuam, ſed impræſentiarum tantùm committendam, quemadmodum facere ſolet Senatus in ſententiâ ad breve tempus valiturâ. Sicut fecit Eliah in monte Carmel, quando obtulit ſacrificium extra Hieruſolyma, etiam poſt extructum illic Sanctuarium; quod quidem factum perpetratorem, abſque juſſu Prophetico, reum feciſſet excidii, utpote à Deo prohibitum in textu Legis, ubi dicit, [w] Ne fortè offeras oblationes tuas in omni loco quem videbis, pœnâ excidii conſtitutâ in eum qui ita faceret, quemadmodum dicit de eo qui extra [locum illum] obtulerit, ſanguis imputabitur viro iſti, ſanguinem fudit, & excindetur vir ille è populo ſuo. Quòd ſi ab ipſo (c. p.) inter offerendum in monte Carmel quæſitum fuiſſet, quid dices, ſi inſtar hujus facti perpetuò fecerimus? dicturus fuiſſet, nequaquam hoc licere, atque illum qui extra (Jeruſalem) offerret, excidii pœnâ teneri: hoc autem jam factum, quò palam faciamus mendacium Prophetarum Baal, atque illud quod præ ſe ferunt, irritum faciamus. Nec non ſicut fecit Eliſha, cùm juberet Iſraelem in expugnatione Moabi, arbores frugiferas excindere, dicens, [x] Et omnem arborem pulchram dejicietis, cùm Deus hoc facere vetuerit dicendo, Non perdetis arborem, ſecurim ipſi admovendo: quòd ſi interrogatus fuiſſet Eliſha, num ſublatum eſſet hoc mandatum, licerétque nobis in poſterum arbores frugiferas excindere, cùm loca quævis obſidemus? utique dixiſſet, Non licere, verùm hoc impræſentiarum tantùm faciendum. Porrò, ut adducamus hîc tibi exemplum, cujus ope hanc regulam omnibus præceptis accommodare poſſis, Si Propheta, de cujus prophetia certò

apud nos conſtat, ſicut deſcripſimus, juſſerit nos die Sabbati omnes, tam fœminas quàm viros, ſurgentes ignem accendere, quo paremus nobis inſtrumenta bellica quibus inſtruamur, ac loci alicujus incolas eodem die occidere, eorum opes diripere; & mulieribus ad libitum uti; oporteret nos, qui Moſis legem accepimus, contra locum iſtum nihil cunctantes inſurgere, ſicut nobis præcepit, omniáque quæ ſuggeſſerit, expeditè ac diligenter facere, ſine ſcrupulo aut hæſitatione credentes omnia quæ fecerimus ipſo Sabbati die, ſcil. dum ignem accendimus, opera facimus, occidimus & pugnamus, præceptum eſſe, cujus ſperemus nos à Deo præmium [conſequuturos] quòd auſcultaverimus mandato Prophetæ, cujus juſſui obedire [tenemur] vi præcepti affirmativi, ſicut mandavit nobis Dominus per Moſen, [y] Ipſum audietis, & per traditionem accepimus. In omni, ſi dixerit tibi Propheta, tranſgredere verba Legis, auſcultes ei, exceptâ Idololatriâ. Quoniam ſi dixerit nobis, Colas hoc tantum die figuram [aliquam] aut ſuffitum facias ſtellæ iſti ad unam tantùm horam, morte afficietur, neque ei auſcultabitur. Quod ſiquis, qui ſibi religionis ac probitatis cultor videtur, fuerítque ſenex ætate provectus, dixerit, Cùm ſimus ſenes, & tot annos vixerimus, neque unquam mandatum aliquod tranſgreſſi fuerimus, nunc tandem die Sabbati ſurgentes tranſgrediemur in re vetita ſub pœna lapidationis, & exibimus ad pugnam, quod ad me autem, ego nihil omnino [dicam vel faciam,] & ſunt præter me qui ſufficiant, & magna hominum copia qui rem iſtam præſtare valeant; hic certè immorigerum ſe præbet verbo Domini, & reus eſt mortis cœlitus infligendæ, cùm tranſgreſſus ſit illud quod juſſit Propheta, quia qui præcepit [obſervari] Sabbatum, præcepit etiam obſervari cujuſvis Prophetæ mandatum & decretum. Quíque tranſgreſſus fuerit mandatum ipſius, ejus, quod commemoravimus, ſupplicii reus eſt, atque hoc eſt quod dicit Dominus, Erit autem ut vir qui non auſcultaverit verbis meis, quæ loquetur nomine meo, ego requiram ab ipſo. Interea tamen ſi quis nodum aſtrictiorem die iſto Sabbati, dum ea præſtat opera, nexuerit, cujus opus non ſit in re aliqua quæ conferat ad perficiendum illud à Propheta præceptum, reus eſt lapidationis. Quod ſi vel ipſe Propheta, qui nobis illa die iſto Sabbati facienda præcepit, dixerit, (& nos juſſui ſuo obſequentes habuerit) Eſt terminus [itineris diei] Sabbati [præſcriptus] uno minùs bis mille cubitorum, aut unius & bis mille, atque hoc obtenderit indicatum fuiſſe ſibi per revelationem, non per viam diſquiſitionis, aut argumentationis, hic jam pſeudopropheta eſt, ſtrangulatione è medio tollendus. Juxta hoc ergò conjecturam ſume de omnibus quæ præceperit tibi Propheta, & ſi qua reperies in Scriptura è mandatis Prophetarum, quæ contraria ſint alicui Legis præcepto, clavis [tibi] erit hæc regula ad ea omnia [intelligenda.] Atque hoc uno diſtinguitur Propheta ab aliis hominibus in Legis præceptis declarandis. Quòd autem ad diſquiſitionem & argumentationem & intelligentiam in Lege, perinde ſe habet ac reliqui ſapientes ejuſdem cum ipſo ordinis, qui prophetia inſtructi non ſunt. Quòd ſi cùm interpretationem aliquam attulerit, aliámque afferat quiſpiam non Propheta, dicat Propheta ille, Dixit mihi Dominus interpretationem meam veram eſſe, non au-

Mosis usque ad Ribbi non vidimus Legem & nobilitatem simul [conjunctas,] fcultabitis ipſi. Imò ſi vel mille Prophetæ, qui omnes ſint inſtar Eliæ & Eliſhæ, interpretationem afferant, ſapientes autem mille & unus aliam illi contrariam, ad plures inclinandum eſt, & facere [tenentur homines] juxta ſententiam ſapientum mille & unius, non juxta ſententiam mille Prophetarum illuſtrium. Atque ita dicunt Sapientes, Certè, ſi diceret mihi illud Joſhuah filius Nun ore ſuo, non auſcultarem illi, neque audirem illud ab ipſo. Et ſimiliter etiam dixerunt, Si venerit Elias & dixerit, Diſcalceationem peragunt calceo; audiunt ipſum: ſin ſandalio, non audiunt ipſum: quo innuunt non [fieri] ullo modo augmentationem in præcepto ex parte prophetiæ. Quod ſi prætenderit Propheta, dixiſſe ipſi Dominum ſententiam in præcepto tali, tali modo ferendam, atque eſſe argumentationem τῦ ψεύδους veram, morte afficietur Propheta iſte, quoniam Pſeudopropheta eſt, juxta fundamenta à nobis poſita, quia non eſt demiſſio [legis] poſt legatum primum, neque addere licet vel diminuere: non eſt in cælis, neque remiſit nos Dominus ad Prophetas, ſed ad doctos argumentandi peritos; neque enim dixit, Et accedes ad Prophetam; verùm dixit, Et accedes ad Sacerdotes, Levitas, aut ad Judicem, &c. Perquàm multa autem adduxerunt Sapientes in hanc ſententiam; quæ certè vera eſt.

Cùm autem moreretur Joſhua (cui pax) quaſcunque traditione acceperat interpretationes, nec non quæcunque ipſius tempore in lucem prolatæ ſunt ſine ulla [inter Doctores] diſſenſione, & quæcunque, cùm de iis incidiſſet diſſenſio, ex plurium conſenſu deciſæ ſunt, commendatas reliquit Senioribus illis, de quibus dicit Scriptura, [z] [Et omnibus diebus ſeniorum qui poſt Joſuam diu vixerunt.] Deinde commendârunt ſeniores iſti quæcunque traditione acceperant, Prophetis (q. p.) Et Prophetarum alii aliis; ita ut nullum eſſet ſæculum in quo non inquiſitum fuerit in ſententiam legis, & concluſiones inde elicitæ: Uniuſcujuſque ſæculi hominibus ſermones eorum qui ipſos præceſſerant pro fundamento ponentibus, unde concluſiones educerent atque elicerent. De fundamentis autem traditione acceptis nulla fuit diſſenſio uſque ad tempus virorum Synagogæ magnæ, qui fuerunt Haggai, Zachariah, Malachi, Daniel, Hananiah, Miſhael, Azariah, Ezra Scriba, & Nehemiah f. Chacaliæ, Mordecai, & Zerubbabel fil. Shealtiel, cum aliis qui hiſce prophetis conjuncti ſunt, quibus perficerent numerum centum & viginti ſeniorum ex inclytis & præcipuæ authoritatis viris, aliiſque ejuſmodi, qui etiam in ſententiam Legis inquirentes, uti fecerunt qui ante ipſos fuerant, decreta decreverunt & conſtitutiones ordinârunt. Ultimus autem virorum cœtûs iſtius ſancti primus fuit Sapientum quorum in Miſhnah fit mentio: ſc. Simeon Juſtus, qui tunc temporis Sacerdos ſummus fuit. Poſt quos, cum proceſſu temporis ventum eſt ad Rabbenu Hakkadoſh [Doctorem noſtrum ſanctum] cui pax, qui fuit ſæculi ſui phœnix, atque unicum temporis decus, vir certè in quo [in unum] collegerat Deus dotes eximias & virtutes eas ob quas apud συγχρόνους ſuos meritus eſt appellari Rabbenu Hakkadoſh, cùm nomen ipſi eſſet Judah, quique in ſummo ſcientiæ & celſitudinis gradu conſtitutus fuit, ſicut dixerunt, A diebus nobilitatis ſimul [conjunctas,] in ſummo etiam pietatis Atque hæc sunt que appellant Sapientes [Gezeroth] Constitutiones. Et in his etiam accidit discrepantia; dum uni visum fuerit re aliquâ interdicere, ob causam aliquam, alteri autem idem visum non fuerit: ita frequenter in Talmude [occurit] R. N. statuit, hac aut illa de causâ. R. N. verò non statuit. Atque hæc etiam una est è causis discrepantiæ. Annon vides Carnem volucris cum lacte [non comedendam] constitutionem esse à Magistris nostris ad homines procul arcendos à transgressione? cùm non vetet lex præter carnem bestiæ & feræ, at interdixerunt Sapientes carne volucris, ad remotiùs abigendos à re illicitâ. Suntque ex ipsis quibus non arridet hæc Constitutio; nam R. Josi Galilæus permittebat carnem volucris cum lacte, adeò ut omnes incolæ illius regionis eam comederent, uti manifestum est in Talmude. Cum autem contigerit ut de aliqua hujusmodi constutionum inter omnes conveniat, tum eam transgredi nullo modo licet. Et cum passim notum sit in Israele eâ re interdici, non est ut in contrarium isti constitutioni eatur, adeo ut vel ipsis prophetis non liceat de ea detrahere, juxta expressum Talmudis testimonium, quod vel ipse Elias non possit diminuere aliquam ex octodecim rebus quas statuerunt Schola Shammæi et Schola Hillelis; & causam ejus reddiderunt dicentes, Quia prohibitio ipsarum nota est per totam Israelem.

Classis quinta earum est constitutionum quæ factæ sunt per modum determinationis legalis & convenientiæ cùm rebus que inter homines fieri solent, à qnibus nec additur legi aliquid nec detrahitur: aut de rebus quæ hominibus usui sunt in præceptis legis [observandis;] atque hæc sunt quæ appellarunt Sapientes Ordinationes & Ritus; quæ etiam nullo modo transgredi licet, cùm inter totam [Judæorum] sectam de iis conveniat; vetat autem Salomo ea transgredi, cùm ait, Et si quis perrumpat sepem, mordebit eum serpens. Hujusmodi constitutiones multæ admodum sunt in Talmude & Mishna memoriæ proditæ, quarum aliquæ circa vetita & permissa [versantur,] aliæ circa res pecuniarias, aliæ ordinationes sunt à prophetis constitutæ, cujusmodi sunt constitutiones Mosis, Josuæ & Ezræ. Quemadmodum dixerunt, Moses ordinavit Israeli, ut interrogent & disquirant de ritibus Paschatis in Paschate &c. Dixerunt etiam, Moses ordinavit [quæ] ad alimentum [spectant] eo tempore quo descendit Manna. Constitutiones autem Josuæ & Ezræ multæ sunt; sunt & Constitutiones quæ particularibus quibusdam Sapientibus acceptæ feruntur, ut cùm dicunt, Statuit Hillel Prozbul [seu Constitutionem de solvendo.] Statuit Magister noster Gamaliel senex; Statuit Magister noster Johannes Zacchæi f: ita & passim occurrit in Talmude, *Statuit Rabbi N. Statuit R. Omnes autem sententiæ quæ in Mishna recensentur, in has quinque Classes distribuuntur, Ut sint ex illis interpretationes quæ Mosis nomine traduntur, ad quas in textu digitus intenditur, aut quæ ratiocinando elici possint; 2. Aliæ quæ sunt Constitutio Mosis è Sina. 3. Aliæ quæ argumentatione eliciuntur, in quibus est discrepantia. 4. Aliæ Decreta. 5. Aliæ Constitutiones. Jam verò causa ob quam recensuit discrepantiam quæ contigerit inter duos concludendi modos, in rebus circa quas accidit dissensio, hæc est, quam tibi descripturus sum: Quod sc. si receptas tantum sententias de quibus nulla est controversia recensuissset, nullâ dictorum quibus non est praxis conformis habitâ ratione, fieri posset ut veniret aliquando post ipsum qui contrarium referret ejus juxta quod formatur praxis, vel ab ipso qui sententiæ isti contradixit, vel ab alio qui idem cum illo senserit, atque ita oriatur in animis nostris suspicio, ac diceremus, Quî fit ut tradat iste, vir fide dignus, rem talem vetitam esse, cùm expresse de ea statuat Mishna quòd licita sit? aut è contra: at cùm jam notæ sint nobis sententiæ [discrepantes] obstructa est hæc rima, cùm dixerit, qui majorum sententias refert, Audivi hoc aut illud vetitum esse; respondentibus nobis, Verum dicis, atqui ex sententia τοῦ N. at totus cœtus contrarium statuit; aut, ὁ δ'ἕνα contrarium asserit; &, praxis est juxta sententiam ejus qui illi contradicit, vel quod melius argumentetur, vel quod aliud dictum quo ipsius sententia confirmatur invenerimus. Causa autem cur sententiam unius alicujus, & sententiam [diversam] plurium recenseat, est, quòd consuetudo sit juxta unius [istius] sententiam; ac docere te voluerit, quòd cùm concludendi modus manifestus fuerit, etsi ab uno profectus, recipienda sit illius sententia vel contradicente multitudine. Quòd verò aliquando recenseat sententiam alicujus, deinde ab ea recedat, e. g. cùm dicit, Asseclæ Shammæi ita dixerunt, asseclæ Hillelis ita: deinde, sententiâ mutatâ, Asseclæ Hillelis idem docuerunt quod asseclæ Shammæi, causa est ut te doceat inquirendam esse veritatem, atque eligendum quod rectum: cùm isti Senes Magni, præstantes, illustres, magnâ scientiâ, atque intellectu perfecto præditi, cùm tamen dicta ejus, qui ipsis contradiceret, meliora esse dictis suis & accuratiùs perpensa animadverterent; mutatâ suâ, ipsius ſententiam amplexi ſunt; quanto magis reliqui homines, cùm viderint veritatem ab adverſarii partibus ſtare, obſequentur, neque amplius pertinaciter contendent? atque hoc eſt quod dixit Dominus, Veritatem, veritatem, perſequeris: & in eandem ſententiam Sapientes, Confeſſionem præbe veritati, i. e. Etiam ſi poſſis te [è manibus opponentis] argumentis ſophiſticis eripere, cùm tamen noveris ſermonem alterius (quem argumento tuo manifeſto premis, vel præ ipſius infirmitate, vel quòd ipſe valeas [alios] in errorem inducere,) verum eſſe, in ipſius ſententiam, omiſsâ contentione, deſcendas. Cúmque jam in animo haberet librum iſtum ad hunc modum componere, viſum ipſi eſt ita eum diſtribuere ut ſex ejus partes conſtitueret; quarum pars Prima eſt de præceptis quæ obſervanda ſunt circa terræ fætus, veluti de Heterogoneis, de Interміſſione, de Præputio, de Oblationibus, Decimis, aliiſque Debitis. Secunda, de temporibus [anni] & feſtis, & circa ipſa obſervandis, & diverſis eorum ritibus, quid in iis vetitum ſit, quid gratum, quid permiſſum, & quæ unoquoque horum temporum ritus & præcepta conjunctim præſtare deceat. Pars tertia, de mulieribus, & diſtincta jurum quæ inter viros & fœminas intercedunt explicatione, cujuſmodi literæ nuptiales ſunt, leviratio, diſcalceatio, ſponſalia, literæ repudii, & quæ dicenda ſunt in omnibus hiſce capitibus. Pars quarta, de judiciis & controverſiis quæ inter homines oriuntur in commerciis, pactis, communi jure fundorum, & ejuſmodi aliis. Pars quinta, de oblationibus, juxta diſtinctos earum ritus, & diverſis earum ſpeciebus. Pars ſexta, de purificationibus, & quæ ipſis contraria ſunt. Unamquamque autem harum partium Seder, i. e. Ordinem, appellavit. Primam partem, Seder Zeraim, i. e. ſeminum. Secundam, Seder Moed, i. e. feſtorum. Tertiam, Seder Naſim, i. e. mulierum. Quartam, Seder Nezikin, i. e. damnorum. Quintam, Seder Kodaſhim, i. e. ſanctitatum. Sextam, Seder Taharoth, purificationum. Ideò autem orſus eſt à Seder Zeraim, quoniam in eo continentur judicia de præceptis quæ propriè ſpectant ad ea quæ producit terra: cùm terræ fœtus alimentum præbeant animalibus, neque fieri poſſit ut homo niſi alimento ſumpto in vivis conſervetur, Deum aliquo cultûs genere colat; ideóque ſermonem de præceptis propriè ad ea quæ è terra naſcuntur ſpectantibus præmiſit: cui deinde adjunxit Seder Moed, quoniam is eſt textûs Biblici ordo; ſicut dicit Dominus, Et ſex annis ſeres terram tuam, & congregabis proventum ejus, in ſeptimo verò relinques eam & dimittes eam, &c. & pòſt, Sex diebus facies opera tua, &c. Tribus vicibus feſtum ages mihi in unoquoque anno. Deinde viſum eſt illi judicia de mulieribus reliquis litibus præmittere, ſecuto veſtigia textûs ſacri, quoniam ita fecit Dominus [dicens] Cùm vendiderit quiſpiam filiam ſuam, &c. Cùm rixati fuerint viri, & percuſſerint mulierem, &c. Deinde, Et ſi cornu petierit bos, &c. quare præmiſit Seder Naſim ante Seder Nezikim. Hæc autem quatuor argumenta complectitur liber Exodi, ſcil. argumentum Seder Zeraim, Seder Moed, Seder Naſim, & Seder Nezikin. Tum à libro Exodi contulit ſe ad librum Levitici juxta libri cœlitus lati ſeriem. Poſt Seder Nezikin ergò poſuit Kodaſhim, deinde Seder Taharoth, quoniam ita ſe habet ordo textûs Sacri. Ubi autem abſolutus eſt ſermo de ſemine & ex eo debitis, cœpit ſermonem inſtituere de fructibus, ideóque poſt [tractatum] de placenta, locutus eſt de Orlah [i. e. præputio arborum.] Deinde de Biccurim [primitiis] eo ordine quem obſervat Scriptura S. [in qua] de Orlah [dictum eſt] in Levitico, [d] de Biccurim in ſectione Vehayah ci tabo, atque ita pertingit partitio ſermonis de ſeminibus ad undecim tractatus.

Tum pergens Seder Moed etiam in ſpecies ſuas partiri, ſicuti fecerat in Zeraim, primum locum tribuit tractatui de Sabbato, quòd primas in excellentiæ gradu teneat, deinde quòd ſeptimo quoque die [celebretur] atque ita ſæpius in temporis ſerie revertatur; quódque ab eo etiam orſa fuerit lex ubi primò [mentionem facit] feſtorum. Poſt Sabbatum autem [poſuit] Erubim [ſeu tractatum de Commixtionibus,] quoniam & ipſe ad intentionem Sabbati pertinet. Poſt eum Peſachim [ſeu tractatum de Paſchate,] quoniam illud præceptorum quæ præcepit Deus per Moſen primum eſt, idémque Sabbatum in ſectione de Feſtis ſequitur. Et poſt eum [tractatum] Shekalim [ſeu de Siclis,] juxta Scripturæ ordinem: deinde Cippurim [ſeu de Feſto expiationis] poſt Shekalim, juxta eundem ordinem, quoniam præceptum de Siclis eſt in [ſectione] [e] Ci Taſſa, & de die Expiationis, [ſectione] [f] Achare Moth. Tum perrexit ad ſermonem de tribus feſtis abſolvendum: cúmque de Paſchate jam locuto, de Succoth [tabernaculorum] & Shebuoth [ſeptimanarum] feſtis dicendum reſtaret, nec eſſet quod de feſto Septiman. diceret præter pauca quædam quæ cuilibet diei feſto conveniunt (ſúntque ea quæ Maſſeceth Betzah [i. e. ovi] conficiunt) tractatum Succoth tractatui Betzah, ob multitudinem præceptorum quæ ad [feſtum] Tabernaculorum ſpectant, præmiſit. Cúmque jam non ſupereſſet ipſi quicquam de temporibus, quorum mentio fit in lege, præter Initium anni, locutus eſt poſt Betzah, de Initio anni, atque ita finitus eſt illi ſermo de temporum [diſtinctionibus] quorum in lege fit mentio. Tum pergens ad tempora quorum mentio in libris Prophetarum (quibus pax) occurrit, quæ ſunt dies Jejuniorum à Prophetis inſtituti, ſermoni de Initio anni ſubjunxit ſermonem de Taanioth, [i. e. Jejuniis;] & Taanioth, de Megillah, [ſeu libro Eſteris, ſcil. de feſto Purim;] quoniam [feſtum] iſtud Prophetarum, qui poſteriores erant illis qui Jejunia ordinârunt, conſtitutio eſt. Tum poſt Megillah, Moed katon [ſeu, tractatum de feſto parvo] poſuit, quòd ipſi cum diebus Purim commune quid ſit, [ſcil.] quod in neutro ipſorum jejunare, ſeu luctui ſe dare liceat. Finito ergò de feſtivitatibus, iiſque quæ ad ipſas ſpectant, & quæ cum ipſis conjuncta ſunt, ſermone [ordinem] iſtum tractatu Chagiga [i. Feſtivæ comparitionis coram Domino] abſolvit, quoniam eſt iſte de iis quæ ad tria feſta pertinent: ideò autem ultimo loco hunc [tractatum] poſuit, quòd non ſit [præcepti] generalis, cùm non ſpectet niſi ad maſculos; ſicut dixit Dominus, Omnes mares tui. Atque ita dictorum de feſtis diſtributio ad duodecim tractatus pervenit.

Tum ad partiendum ſermonem de mulieribus pergens, orſus eſt à [tractatu] Yebamoth, [de fratriis;] cauſa autem quæ impulit ipſum ut à Yebamoth initium ſumeret, non à [tractatu] Cetuboth [de inſtrumentis contractuum matrimonialium] quem præmittendum docet ratio, inciperet, hæc eſt, quòd ſcil. matrimonium ſit res ſpontanea, neque in poteſtate Judicium ſit ut quempiam ad uxorem ducendam adigant; cùm Levirationis jura præſtare cogatur [quis,] & dici ipſi [poſſit,] Aut calceum exuas, aut Leviri officio fungere, ordiri autem à re neceſſariâ ſatius eſt. Quare ab Yebamoth incipiens, deinde ſubjunxit Cetuboth, & poſt Cetuboth, Nedarim [de votis,] quia omnis diſquiſitio quæ ad ſectionem Nedarim [ſpectat] eſt de mulierum juramento; quemadmodum dicit, Inter virum ad uxorem ejus, inter patrem ad filiam ejus, &c. Perfectis autem jam nuptiis & admiſſâ in thalamum [ſponſâ,] penes [virum] eſt vota ejus irrita facere, ideóque Nedarim ſubjunxit [tractatui] Cetuboth. Tractatui autem Nedarim, Neziruth [de Naziræatu;] quoniam Naziræatus etiam eſt è numero votorum, & ſi voto ſe ad Naziræatum obſtrinxerit fœmina, penes maritum eſt ut idem irritum reddat: quare poſt Nedarim ſtatim Neziruth collocavit. Finitiſque [quæ de] matrimonio [dicenda erant] & quæ inde pendent de irritis faciendis votis, dicere aggreſſus eſt de divortio; quia poſt matrimonium locum habet divortium, & Gittin [de libellis repudii] poſt Neziruth poſuit: poſt Gittin autem Sotah [ſeu de muliere declinante,] quin & hoc ſub divortio comprehenditur; cùm ubi adulterium commiſerit [fœmina] compellantur conjuges ad divortium, prout loco ſuo explicabitur. Deinde poſt Sotah, Kidduſhim, [de Sponſalibus;] quo [tractatu] abſolvitur Seder Naſhim. Supereſt autem quæſtio, Quare ultimo loco poſuerit [tractatum] Kidduſhim, cùm primo potiùs ponendus eſſet, & ante Cetuboth collocandus. Quòd ſi reſponderis ipſum, eum tractatui Cetuboth ideò non præmiſiſſe, ne [tract.] Yebamoth à [tract.] Cetuboth ſepararet, quorum ſcopus idem eſt, ſc. Maritatio, atque ita neceſſariò continuandus fuerit de iis ſermo, uti diximus, at ſaltem ante Gittin ponendus [videtur,] ut ita ordine rerum primus locus tribuatur [tractatui] Kidduſhim, deinde Gittin; reſpondendum [ergò] eſt, feciſſe ipſum hoc quò Scripturæ ordinem imitaretur, quæ prius de divortio loquitur quàm de ſponſalibus, uti in illo quod à Deo dictum eſt, [z] Scribetque ei libellum repudii, & dabit in manus ejus, & dimittet eam è domo ſua, & egredietur è domo ejus, & ibit & erit viro alteri. E dicto ejus [eritque viro alteri] didicimus, caput de capitibus ſponſalium, uti explicatur [iſto Rabbinorum dicto] Comparat permanſionem ejus cum viro, cum exitu ejus. Atque ita abſoluta eſt partitio ejus ſermonis de mulieribus, ſeptem tractatibus.

Tum pergens partiri ſermonem de Damnis, illum in tractatu primo diviſit in tres partes, ortus à Baba Kama [i. porta prima;] cujus ſcopus eſt diſquirere de damnis, eaque impedire: ut [e. g. in] Bove [cornupeta] puteo, incendio, vulnere & ſimilibus: neque [certè] Magiſtratum quicquam priùs curare decet, quàm ut damnum ab hominibus prohibeat. Sequitur Baba Metzia [ſeu porta media,] cujus ſcopus eſt diſquirere de prætenſionibus & depoſitis, de conductionibus, mutuatione, & elocatione, & quæ ad hæc referri convenit; juxta illud quod fecit Scriptura, quæ poſt judicia de bove [cornupeta] & puteo, & incendio, & capite cùm litigaverint viri, locuta eſt de quatuor cuſtodibus. Deinde Baba Bathra, [porta poſtrema,] cujus ſcopus eſt diſquirere quid de diviſione fundorum, & de judiciis quæ locum habent in ædibus communibus & vicinis, déque diſſolutione commercii ob vitium apparens, déque verbis quæ in vendendo & emendo adhibentur, quid ſtatuendum ſit, & de fide juſſione, & hæreditatibus: hanc autem claſſem ultimo loco poſuit, quoniam tota à traditione [pendet,] éſtque de rebus quæ conjecturâ nituntur, neque in textu explicata ſunt. Cúmque jam judiciorum [rationem] notam fecerat, cerat, ſermonem de judicibus qui eadem diſcernunt, inſtituens, ſubjunxit tract. Baba Bathra [tract.] [Sanhedrin] [de judicibus.] Porrò tractatus Maccoth [de plagis] in [quibuſdam] exemplaribus continuatur cum tractatu Sanhedrin, unúſque cum eo cenſetur, quoniam ubi dixiſſet, Iſti ſunt qui ſtrangulantur, continuò ei adjunxerunt, Iſti ſunt qui vapulant. Hoc autem rectè non fit, verùm ipſe ſeorſim tractatus eſt, qui connectitur quidem cum Sanhedrin, quoniam nemo denudare terga, & [plagarum] numerum conſtituere poteſt exceptis judicibus, quod à Domino dictum eſt, [h] Et proſternere faciet ipſum judex, & plagis cædet eum coram ipſo ſecundùm menſuram impietatis ejus in numero.

Poſt Maccoth autem poſuit [tractatum] Shebuoth [de juramentis,] quoniam inter finem iſtius tractatus & initium hujus ſimilitudo quædam in judiciis accidit, quemadmodum in Talmude memoratur; cui addendum, quod hoc etiam de quo hîc agitur judicum ſit, cùm nemo ad jurandum cogere poſſit præter judicem. Abſolutóque jam de judiciis & judicibus ſermone, dèque iis in quibus propriè verſatur judicis officium, plagis ſc. & juramentis imponendis, loqui [pergit] de Edaioth [teſtificationibus,] cujus tractatûs ſcopus præcipuus eſt tradere omnes, quibus teſtimonium perhibuerunt homines fide digni, ſententias, cùm ipſorum teſtimonium praxeos norma ſit, ipſúmque judicii ſpecies quædam; teſtimonia enim coram judicibus proferuntur, eodémque modo unumquodque eorum dictorum prolatum fuit in conſiſtorio. Hunc autem tractatum poſt tractatum Shebuoth poſuit, quoniam juramenta res ſunt quibus perpetuò opus eſt; teſtimonia autem, declarationes deciſionum quibus cùm certis quibuſdam temporibus perhibitum eſſet teſtimonium coram judicibus, ea admiſerunt. Ea deinde tradere aggreſſus eſt quæ ſtatuenda ſunt de Idololatria, quoniam & ea [ſcire] judici neceſſarium eſt, eóque perfectus evadit judex, cum Idolorum iſtorum conſuetudines, & quæ ad eas requiruntur, calleat, ſciátque quid de illis ſtatuendum ſit. Siquidem qui Saturnum cultu Veneris colit, aut Jovem eo modo invocat quo invocandus eſt Mars, non eſt mortis reus, juxta illud quod verâ traditione ad nos delatum eſt; ultimo autem loco hunc [tractatum] poſuit, quoniam [de rebus eſt quæ] rarò contingunt. Atque abſolutis jam omnibus quibus opus habet judex ſubjunxit [tractatum] Aboth, [i. de patrum ſententiis,] ídque duas ob rationes, quarum prima eſt, ut notam tibi faceret certitudinem allegationum, & traditionis, verè ſcil. illam ſucceſſivè [alios ab aliis accepiſſe,] ideóque deberi honorem viro docto, eúmque gradu eminenti collocandum, quòd ad ipſum pervenerit traditio, quia ipſe ſeculo ſuo perinde eſt ac illi in ſeculis ſuis, atque ita dixerunt, Num inquiremus in conſiſtorium Rabban Gamliel, &c. dixerunt etiam, Samſon ſeculo ſuo, ut Samuel ſeculo ſuo. Hoc enim docentur homines, ne dicat [quis,] num judicium ☩ ס֫ו֫ן֫ amplectemur, aut conſtitutioni ☩ ס֫ו֫ן֫ acquieſcemus? Neque enim ita ſe res habet, neque enim judicium ☩ ס֫ו֫ן֫, Judicis eſt, ſed Dei, qui illud nobis præcepit, ſicut dixit, Quoniam judicium Domino eſt. Eſtque judicium unum ab uno ad alterum per continuam temporis ſeriem traditum. Secunda ratio eſt, ut in hoc tractatu præcepta omnium Sapientum (q. p.) moralia referat, ut ab illis mores laudabiles addiſcamus. re non prorſus neceſſariâ, quia vel commiſceri poſſunt, vel non commiſceri. Deinde quod jura res iſtas ſpectantia pauca admodum ſint, uti loco ſuo declarabitur. Atque hoc clauſit ordinem Kodaſhim. Continent autem partitio ſermonis ipſius de ordine Kodaſhim undecim tractatus.

Pergens deinde ſermonem de Purificationibus partiri, orſus eſt, à Celim [tract.] de Vaſis, cujus ſcopus eſt fundamenta immunditiarum complecti, eáque quæ polluuntur & quæ non polluuntur deſcribere, ut quando poſtea dicturus ſit de eo quod polluit, dignoſcamus quæ res pollutionis capaces ſint, quæ non. Poſt Celim poſuit Oholoth [tractatum de Tabernaculis,] qui [verſatur] circa jura pollutionis à [contactu] mortui; quem ideo [cæteris] præmiſit, quòd ſit immunditiarum graviſſima. Ei ſubjunxit [tract.] Negaim [de plagis,] qui eſt diſquiſitio juridica de immunditiâ lepræ; quoniam leproſus Tabernaculum polluit, eſtque in ea ſimilitudo aliquantilli de immunditia à [contactu] mortui, ſicut loco ſuo declarabitur. Deinde abſoluto de immunditie à [contactu] mortui, & quæ ejus ſunt generis [ſermone,] agere cœpit de purgatione ab iis, quæ fit [ope] vaccæ rufæ, ideoque [tract.] Negaim, tractatum Parah [de vacca] ſubjunxit: deinde abſolutâ diſquiſitione de pollutionibus gravioribus, & quæ ab ipſis eſt, purgatione, progreſſus ad pollutiones leviores, quibus non eſt ultra occaſum ſolis [duratio,] tractatui Parah, ſubjunxit tractatum Taharoth, quem appellavit Taharoth, nomine à purificatione [ſumpto,] quòd in eo de immunditiis diſquiratur, & quoniam immunditiarum cognitio ad munditiem incitat. Videri autem cuipiam poteſt hoc, quòd [cùm] appellatio totius Seder ſit Taharoth, ſingularis etiam tractatus Taharoth [audiat,] vitio [authori] vertendum. At non eſt hoc apud Logicos culpabile, quòd ſpecies nomine generis appelletur. Deinde poſt abſolutum de immunditiis gravioribus, & purgatione ab ipſis [ſermonem,] & de pollutionibus inſuper levioribus, addidit purgationis ab ipſis rationem, & [tract.] Taharoth ſubjunxit [tract.] Mikvaoth, [de conceptaculis aquarum.] Niddah autem [de muliere menſtruata] pollutionibus iſtis poſtpoſuit, quòd non ſit pollutio toti generi humano communis: Mikvaoth ergò tractatum Niddah ſubjunxit: huic decebat ſubjungere Zabim [de fluxum ſeminis patientibus,] præmiſit tamen tractatum Macſhirim, [de diſponentibus ad immunditiam,] eo quòd præmiſerit ipſum ſcriptura, quoniam fundamentum [tract.] Macſhirim eſt in [illa ſect.] [m] Eritque die octavo, &c. at [tract.] de fluxum ſeminis patientibus, [in illa] [n] Hæc erit lex leproſi. Poſt Zabim autem, Tebul Yom [de eo qui lotus eſt eopſe die] poſuit, ſicut dixit Dominus, [o] Hæc eſt lex fluxum patientis, & ex quo profluet ſemen, &c. atquæ hæ prædictæ immunditiæ omnes ad totum corpus ſpectant, ſc. ut ſi quis ad eas accedat, totus polluatur. Deinde pergens tradere quid ſtatuendum ſit de pollutione unius tantum membri, ſubjunxit [tractatui] Tebul Yom, Yadaim [de manibus;] eíque tract. Oketzin [de petiolis fructuum;] quem ultimo loco poſuit, quoniam totus argumentando elicitur, cùm nullum ſit ei in textu fundamentum manifeſtum. Atque hoc librum ſuum concluſit, cùm complectatur univerſa partitio ſermonis de Purificationibus tractatus duodecim. Totius autem Miſnæ tractatus ſunt ſexaginta & unus, capitula quingenta viginti tria. Viſum eſt autem ipſi eorum tantùm authorum nomina recenſere, qui ipſi [tempore] propinquiores fuere Simeone Juſto: Uſúſque eſt in ipſa (Miſhna ſc.) ſermonis genere curto, quod multos in ſe ſenſus comprehendat; ſibi quidem, pro acumine innato, atque ingenii bonitate, perſpicuo; at illis qui ipſo inferiores, obſcuro. Ita ſiquidem docti, qui antiquitùs floruerunt, ſibi ipſis [libros] componebant: ideóque viſum eſt cuidam è diſcipulis ipſius, ſc. R. Chaiæ, librum componere, in quo veſtigiis præceptoris ſui inſiſtens, quæ in verbis ipſius difficilia eſſent explicaret: éſtque is [liber] Toſiphta, in quo propoſitum ipſi fuit Miſhnam explicare, atque [ipſi] quæſtiones addere quæ è Miſhna nonniſi adhibito labore erui poſſint; quas tamen eruit, ut ita nobis indicaret quomodo concluſiones è Miſhna eliciamus. Eodem modo fecit R. Uſhaiah. Rab etiam compoſuit Baraitha, ſcil. libros Sifra & Sifre: nec non & multi alii, ſicut dicunt, Venit R. N. Venit, attulítque ſecum Miſhnam. Interim tamen non aſſequuntur Baraithoth [ſeu ſententiæ exoticæ] iſtæ quotquot ſunt Miſhnæ, vel ſtyli ſuavitatem, vel gravitatem ſenſuum, vel ſermonis brevitatem; ideoque habetur ipſa (Miſhna) pro fundamento, iſta autem ſcripta omnia pro appendicibus: magníque fit ipſa apud omnes, & ubi cum iſtis collata fuerit. [p] Viderunt eam filiæ, & beatam eam prædicarunt reginæ, & concubinæ laudârunt eam. Quicunque ergò poſt ipſum ſurrexerunt & poſt iſtum cœtum illuſtrem, hoc ſibi propoſitum habuerunt ut verba Miſhnæ intelligerent, neque ceſſârunt ſibi invicem ſuccedentes generationes de ea diſquirere, atque ipſam interpretari; quilibet ſcil. doctus ſecundùm ſcientiæ atque intellectûs ſui menſuram: quin & decurrentibus annis in diſcrepantes abiere ſententias in quibuſdam ejus placitis explicandis. Nullus interim erat cœtus qui non de ea diſquireret, atque ex ea concluſiones eliceret, ſenſúſque ejus abditos rimaretur, uſque tempus Rabinæ & Rab. Aſe, qui ſapientum Talmudicorum ultimi fuerunt; quorum Rab Aſe ſe ad ſcribendum accinxit, cùm viſum ipſi eſſet idem facere in verbis eorum qui poſteriores erant Rabbenu Sancto, quod ipſe in eorum qui poſt Moſen fuerant verbis fecerat. Omnia ergò eorum, qui aliquid [hoc in genere] protulerant, dicta, de lege diſquirentium ſententias, [eandémque] explicantium interpretationes collegit, & traditionum veritatem probavit, eiſdem in unum redactis. Omniáque hæc ſcientiâ, pro ea quam ipſi conceſſerat Deus animi capacitate, & amore ſcientiæ, comprehendit. Compoſuit ergò Talmud, in quo quatuor ſibi propoſuit; primum, ut Miſhnam interpretaretur, & diſcrepantes verborum eas admittentium explicationes [afferret,] nec non uníuſcujuſque interpretis contra alium [quempiam] argumenta, & quodnam eorum à vero [ſtaret] manifeſtum faceret. Hic primus ejus ſcopus fuit. Secundò, ut juxta alterius è duobus diſſidentibus, inter quos incidit, vel de textu Miſhnæ, vel ejus interpretatione, aut iis quæ ex ea eliciuntur, illíque innituntur, diſcrepantia, ſententiam ſtatueret. Tertiò, ut concluſiones ab uniuſcujuſque ſæculi doctis è Miſhna elicitas [adduceret] fundamentáque declararet, & argumenta quibus uſi ſunt in probando, quibúſque nixi ſunt Doctores qui de Miſhna diſſertârunt, donec in eum, quo jam ſunt, ordinem redacti fuerint ſermones ipſorum, nec non decreta & ordinationes quæ à tempore Rabbenu Sancti uſque ipſius ætatem conſtituta ſunt. Quartò, ut explicationes myſticas, quæ cujuſvis capituli, in quo factum eſt ut incideret iſtiuſmodi explicatio, ſenſui conveniunt, afferret; atque hic quartus ejus ſcopus fuit [ut afferret, inquam] explicationes [myſticas] quas non exiſtimare debemus, vel inferiori gradu collocandas, vel parum utiles eſſe, ſed eſſe eas [in] magno præſtantiæ gradu ob rara quæ comprehendunt ænigmata, miráſque elegantias; in iſtis enim explicationibus, cùm penitiùs ea introſpexeris, percipientur [multa] ſimpliciter, adeo ut nihil addi poſſit, bona, & manifeſtum fiet ſenſuum diviniorum, ac veritatum quicquid prærcharum ſibi habet doctorum cohors, nec non quicquid ſtatuerunt [omnium] ſæculorum Philoſophi. Cùm verò ipſas juxta illud quod præ ſe ferunt contemplatus fueris, invenies quod ab intellectu, ut nihil magis, alienum ſit: hoc autem ob rationes miras fecerunt, quarum una eſt ut ingenia diſcentium acuerent; deinde ut ſtultis, quorum corda nunquam illuminantur, quique à veritate ſibi propoſita ob indolis ſuæ defectum divertunt, tenebras offunderent; de quorum ſimilibus dicunt, Non revelant illis ſecretum, quoniam non ſunt intellectus eorum in eo perfectionis gradu ut veritatem prout ſe habet recipiant; rurſum quoniam ſapientum, q. p. alii ab aliis ſcientiæ myſteria cohibebant. Ferunt enim doctum quendam, cùm conveniſſet aliquos qui benè callerent [q] Maaſeh Bereſhith, atque ipſe calleret [r] Maaſeh Mercabah, dixiſſe ipſis, Docete me Maaſeh Bereſhith, atque ego vos docebo Maaſeh Mercabah; annuunt illi, at cùm illi ipſum Maaſeh Bereſhith docuiſſent, renuit ipſe eos Maaſeh Mercaba docere, neque illud facere voluit; quod abſit ut factum putemus quòd invideret illis ſcientiam, aut præeminere illis cuperet; cùm mores iſti vituperio digni ſint in quolibet etiam ſtulto, quantò magis in viris illuſtribus? verum ideo hoc fecit, quod ſe idoneum exiſtimaret qui illud quod illi callerent acciperet, at non exiſtimaret eos idoneos eſſe ei quod penes ipſum eſſet accipiendo; atque hoc probavit [allegato] Salomonis dicto, [s] Mel & Lac ſub lingua tua; quod ita interpretati ſunt Doctores (p. m.) ut ſenſus verborum ſit, res jucundas è quibus dulcedinem percipit animus, inſtar ejus quam percipit ſenſus guſtûs à melle & lacte, enarrari non debere, neque è lingua ullo modo proferri; hoc eſt quod dicit, Sub lingua tua. Neque enim ejuſmodi ſunt res iſtæ quæ doceantur, atque in Scholis explicentur; verum quæ in libris indiciis tantum obſcuris, ſubinnuantur; cúmque ab alicujus corde velum amoverit Deus, prout ipſi viſum fuerit, ille, poſt operam ſcientiis navatam, eorum aliqua ſecundum intellectûs ſui menſuram percipiet; neque aliud cuipiam cum ſcientia & diligentia ſua ſupereſt quàm ut ſe ad Deum recipiat, illum orans illíque ſupplicans ut ipſi intelligentiam tribuens, ipſúmque dirigens, revelet ei, quæ in textibus Scripturarum recondita ſunt myſteria, quemadmodum invenimus Davidem, cui pax, feciſſe; ubi dicit, [t] Aperi oculos meos, ut aſpiciam mirabilia de lege tua. Cùm autem detexerit Dominus alicui ex ipſa quod [viſum eſt illi] detegere, [opus eſt ut] illud, uti diximus, recondat; quòd ſi de eo quid indiciis [ſubobſcuris] patefecerit, [illi ſolùm patefaciet] cujus intellectus perfectus eſt, cujùſque præſtantia nota, quemad-modum explicârunt, multíſque in Talmude exemplis notum fecerunt. Non oportet igitur virum doctum palàm facere ea quæ tenet myſteria, niſi ei qui ipſum gradu vel ſuperet vel æquet: quoniam ſi ea ſtulto expoſuerit, ſi non ipſum ideo vituperabit, ſaltem non quid laude dignum feciſſe exiſtimabit: ideòque dixit Sapiens, [u] In auribus ſtulti ne loquaris, quoniam contemnet intellectum eloquiorum tuorum. Deinde, quoniam non poteſt doceri vulgus niſi per ænigmata & parabolas, ut ita communis ſit [iſta docendi ratio] mulieribus etiam pueríſque & parvulis, quo cùm perfecti evaſerint intellectus ipſorum, parabolarum iſtarum ſenſus dignoſcant. Atque hoc innuit Salomo, ubi dicit, [x] Ad intelligere faciendum parabolam & facundiam, verba Sapientum & ænigmata eorum: atque has ob cauſas ænigmaticè locuti ſunt Sapientes, quibus pax, de rebus Theologicis; ideóque decet quempiam, ubi occurrerit ipſi in verbis illorum quicquam quod ipſius opinione abhorreat intellectus, non verbis iſtis, ſed intellectui ſuo defectum imputare, & ubicunque aliquam è parabolis ipſorum, cujus ſenſus literalis ab intellectu ipſius valde alienus ſit, viderit, ob intellectum ſuum, qui ſcopum non attingit, adeò ut res veræ ipſi longiſſimè [à vero] remotæ videantur, plurimum angi, ſiquidem intellectus alii aliis juxta præſtantiam mutuam temperamentorum præſtant, & quemadmodum unius temperamentum melius eſt & proprius ad æqualitatem quàm alterius temperamentum accedit, ita & unius intellectus perfectior eſt & præſtantior intellectu alterius, neque dubium eſt, quin aliter ſe habeat ejus, qui rem aliquam præſtantem noverit, quàm ejus qui illam ignorat, intellectus, cùm ſit unus in actu, alter in potentia intellectus: unde fit ut res quædam, quæ apud nonnullos valdè certæ & perſpicuæ ſunt, aliis impoſſibiles videantur juxta gradus [ipſorum] in ſcientia rationem. Cujus rei exemplum tibi perſpicuum proponam, hoc ſcil. ut fingamus dicere nos viro artis Medicæ, Arithmeticæ, & Muſicæ perito, necnon rerum naturalium ſcientiam callenti, ingenii inſuper perſpicacis, & bonæ indolis, at Geometriæ, & Aſtronomiæ prorſus rudi, Quid dicis (heus N.) de viro, qui aſſerat corpus, ſolis iſtud, quod nobis circulus parvus videtur, eſſe corpus ſphæricum cujus ſphæra magnitudine ſit inſtar Sphæræ terræ centies ſexagies ſexies [ſumptæ] cum tribus octavis, atque eſſe globum terræ quo [eam] metimur ſphæram cujus circumferentia ſit 24000 milliarium; ut hoc modo percipiatur quot contineantur in menſura magnitudinis ſphæræ ſolaris milliaria? Proculdubio ille quem diximus ingenii perſpicacis vir, quique eas quas diximus ſcientias callet, nullo modo in animum inducet ut veram eſſe dicat iſtam ſententiam; quin futurum eſt hoc totum apud ipſum res quæ nullo modo percipi poſſit; ac primo quidem intuitu hoc ſe illi ſuggeret argumentum, rationi conſentaneum, falſam eſſe hanc ſententiam. Quomodo fieri poteſt, ut quis terræ, ſpithamæ unius magnitudine, inſiſtens, quantitatem globi ejus, circumferentiam, & ſuperficiei menſuram dignoſcat, niſi ipſâ eodem modo circumdatâ, quo particulam ejus aliquam quam metiri vult compectitur? do, ergò quod ad corpus ſolare, in cœlis ab ipſo quàm longiſſimè remotum, quódque revera intueri non poteſt, cúm jubar tantùm ipſius aſpiciat, eò pervenire poſſit, ut illud metiatur, juſtámque ejus menſuram uſque ad tres octavas deſcribat? Hoc pro admodum poſſibili habebit, adeò ut falſam eſſe hanc opinionem minimè dubitet. Quòd ſi in libris Geometricis, & proportionum, quæ in ſphæricis aliíſq; figuris reperiuntur, ſcientiâ inſtitutus, deinde ad librum de hac materia, rebúſque ad ipſam ſpectantibus compoſitum, Aſtronomicum ſcil. iſtum qui Almageſtum vulgò audit, ſe transferat, tunc tandem perſpicua ipſi videbitur hæc ſententia, & opinionem veriorem eſſe ſtatuet, quàm ut in dubium vocari debeat: cùm demonſtratione probetur, ac perinde ſe habere putabit ſi dubitetur, Utrum magnitudo Solis hujus quantitatis ſit, an, Utrum Sol exiſtat, ac mutabitur ipſi ſententia, ita ut jam veriſſimam affirmet eſſe rem quam à vero longiſſimè abeſſe putaverat: hoc [ita ſe habet] cùm tamen non ſupponamus illum, cui hanc quæſtionem propoſuimus, alium eſſe, quàm aliarum ſcientiarum peritum, & ingenio præſtanti, bonáque indole præditum; ſítque quæſtio, quam propoſuimus, è Mathematicis quæ ſunt gradus per quos ad Theologica aſcenditur; quantò magis ita ſe habebit, qui omnis ſcientiæ penitus rudis, neque ulli diſciplinarum Mathematicarum generi aſſuetus fuerit, ſed ſolummodo à materno ad uxoris ſuæ ingenium tranſitum fecit, ſi proponatur ipſi quæſtio aliqua è Theologicis quæ in explicationibus myſticis reconditæ ſunt? Haud dubiè apud ipſum [tantum à vero] quantum à terra cœlum diſtabit; nec præhebetudine ingenii ullam omnino ejus partem intelliget. Oportet igitur ut bonas de iis opiniones concipiamus, & attentè ipſas perpendamus, haud temerè quicquam ex illis rejicientes, verùm quandocunque incredibile videbitur ex illis aliquid, ſcientiis operam navemus, quo quid ſibi dicto illo vellent intelligamus, ſi modo illi capiendo ſint intellectus noſtri, cum [Doctores noſtri] q. p. quâ fuerunt, in indagando vero diligentiâ, quâ bonitate ingenii, quo ſtudio, quo cum viris magnis commercio, mundíque & rerum ad eum ſpectantium fugâ, nihilo minus tamen ſemet defectus arguerunt eorum qui ipſos anteceſſerant, reſpectu: quo ſpectat illud ipſorum dictum, Cor priorum inſtar oſtii porticus, at poſteriorum ne quidem quantum foramen acus ſartoriæ. Quid igitur de nobis dicendum, cum præterquam quod à nobis defecerit ſcientia & ſapientia (ſicut comminatus eſt Dominus, [y] Propterea ecce ego addam ut faciam in populo iſto mirabile, peribítque ſapientia ſapientum ejus, & intelligentia intelligentium ejus abſcondet ſeſe) unicuique noſtrum propria ſint quatuor, [ſc.] Imbecillitas Ingenii, concupiſcentiæ prævalentia, deſidia in acquirenda ſcientia, & in acquirendis rebus mundanis ſolertia: quatuor judicia mala quomodo non attribuemus nobiſmet ipſis ad eos collatis defectum? Hoc cum ſcirent Doctores noſtri p. m. quodque verba ipſorum tota eſſent medulla, in qua nullæ ſunt fæces, de hoc nos admonitos voluerunt, vetantes ne quis ea contemptui haberet, dum dixerunt, Quicunque verbis Sapientum illudit, ſtercori ferventi adjudicabitur, nec eſt interim ſtercus fervens gravius ſtultitiâ quæ ipſum induxit ut iſtis illuderet. Ideoque nunquam reperies aliquem à verbis ipſorum abhorrere, niſi qui cupiditati indulgeat, & ſenſibus grata ſectetur, cujuſque cor clariori aliquo lumine illuſtratum non fuerit. [Doctores autem noſtri] quod ſcirent vera eſſe verba ipſorum, totam iis ætatem inſumſerunt, juſſeruntque iis noctis horas, & extremas diei partes impendere: atque hoc finem ultimum, prout revera eſt, ſtatuerunt. Ita dixerunt, Non eſt Deo Opt. Max. in mundo ſuo [quicquam] præter quatuor Shel Halacah [i. e. conſtitutionum Talmudicarum] cubitos. Cui dicto animum adverte, quoniam ſi ipſum prout ad literam ſonat perpenderis, quam maximè à vero alienum eſſe putabis, ac ſi quatuor tantum Conſtitutionum cubiti unicus eſſent finis, reliquæ autem artes & ſcientiæ rejiciendæ, ac temporibus Semi & Eberi eorumque qui poſt ipſos fuerunt, cum nondum eſſet Conſtitutio Talmudica, certiſſimum fuerit nullam omnino ſortem Deo in mundo fuiſſe. Quod ſi dictum hoc penitiùs introſpexeris, videbis ipſum admirandam ſapientiam continere, reſque intellectu pulcherrimas complecti reperies. Ego igitur ipſum tibi explicabo, ut reliquorum, quæ apud Doctores Talmudicos occurrunt, exemplar ſit, túque de ipſo prout decet judices. Scias ergo Majores noſtros pro ea quâ erant ſcientiâ, & præſtantiâ Ingenii, res mirâ diligentiâ ſcrutatos pro comperto habuiſſe, unicuique rei quæ exiſtit neceſſariò finem eſſe ad quem exiſtentia ejus dirigatur. Nihil enim fruſtra exiſtere: cúmque certò conſtaret ipſis hæc concluſio generalis, cœperunt diſtinctìm de quolibet exiſtente inquirere, ut uniuſcujuſque ſpeciei finem notum haberent. Viderunt autem uniuſcujuſque rei artificialis finem notiorem eſſe, quam ut eum altius rimari opus ſit. Cum artifex ipſum non niſi poſt conceptum prius animo ipſius finem fecerit: e. g. dico, Serram nequaquàm feciſſe fabrum, niſi poſtquam ſecum reputans quomodo ligni hujus partes inter ſe continuatas dirimeret, animo apud ſe conceptâ ſerræ formâ, eam demum facere aggreſſus fuerit ut eâ ſerraret. Quare finis ſerræ eſt ſerrare, ſimiliter finis ſecuris findere, acûs veſtes conſuere, eodemque modo in omnibus artis ope productis. At eorum quæ artificio divino, & ſapientiâ naturali producuntur, veluti diverſæ fructuum, herbarum, metallorum, lapidum & animalium ſpecies, quædam ſunt quorum finis facili inquiſitione reperitur, alia quæ majori egent indagine, alia verò quorum finis obſcurus atque occultus eſt adeò ut penitùs ignoretur, niſi per revelationem aut divinationem innotuerit, cum per diſquiſitionem ſcientialem non poſſit. Neque enim in poteſtate hominis eſt indagare quam ob cauſam produxerit natura formicarum alias alis inſtructas, alias abſque alis: quamobrem etiam vermium alios pluribus pedibus, alios paucioribus produxerit: quíſve ſit hujus vermis & hujus formicæ finis. At è rerum his majorum, & quarum operationes magis conſpicuæ ſunt, finis ſcientiâ gloriam captant ſcientiæ ſtudioſi, & quo quis doctior eſt majoríque diligentia & ingenio acutiori, plurium rerum fines perſpicit. Quare quando dederat Dominus Salomoni eam quam promiſit ſapientiam, novit ille de finibus harum ſpecierum, quantum homini qua homo ſcire datum eſt, adeò ut de arborum, herbarumque & [diverſarum] animalium ſpecierum finibus locutus ſit, dicente Scripturâ, [z] Et locutus eſt de arboribus à cedro quæ in Lebanon uſque ad hyſſopum quæ egreditur de pariete; locutus eſt inſuper de animalibus & de volatilibus, & de reptilibus, & de piſcibus. Quod teſtimonium fuit divinæ in ipſo potentiæ: dicit ergo poſtea, [a] Et veniebant ex omnibus populis ad audiendam ſapientiam Salomonis, &c. Verùm ut ſummâtim dicam, ſciendum eſt omnia quæ ſub ſphæra Lunæ reperiuntur, hominis tantum gratiâ facta fuiſſe, & è ſpeciebus animalium quaſdam in eſcam ei [datas,] ut oves & boves, &c. alias in alios præter eſcam uſus, ut aſinos, quo iis ea quæ manu ſuâ loco movere non poterat, geſtanda imponerent, equos ut iis itinera longinqua tempore brevi conficeret. Alias autem eſſe eorum ſpecies quæ cui rei utiles ſint neſcimus, cum tamen iis inſint, quæ homini licet ipſe ea neſciat utilia ſint. Fructuum ſunt aliqui ipſi in eſcam, alii ad morborum ſanationem, & ſimiliter herbarum, eodémque modo in cæteris rerum ſpeciebus. Quòd ſi quando inveneris animal aliquod, vel plantam aliquam, quæ nulli rei utilia eſſe, nec eſcæ inſervire tibi videantur, fit hoc ad anguſtiam ſcientiæ noſtræ; cum fieri non poſſit, quin unicuique herbæ ac fructui, nec non unicuique animalis ſpeciei ab Elephante uſque ad vermem, inſit aliquid quod hominibus proſit. Cujus rei hoc tibi indicium eſt, quod ſingulis ſæculis notæ fiant herbæ & fructuum ſpecies, iis qui anteceſſerunt ignotæ, è quibus multas capiant utilitates. Neque fieri poteſt ut quis omnium plantarum virtutes comprehendat, quod experientiâ probatur ætatum ſibi invicem ſuccedentium. At dices forſan, quare creata ſunt venena Lethalia, veluti herba Biſh & [herba ſanguinis] Haſhiſhatol dam, quibus perditio hominibus, non utilitas infertur. Sciendum eſt ergo tibi, ineſſe ipſis utilitates, quoniam etſi interficiant ſi comedantur, cum tamen exteriori corporis parti applicantur non interficiunt. Quòd ſi conſtet tibi magnam eſſe homini utilitatem è viperâ, quanto magis ex iis quæ minus noxia ſunt? Cum ergo invenerint horum omnium finem eſſe ut exiſtat homo, neceſſe eſt ut quæramus etiam, quare extiterit homo, quiſque ſit ipſius finis. Poſtquam igitur multum hâc de re quæſiviſſent, invenerunt homini multas eſſe admodum operationes, nam omnibus animalium arborumque ſpeciebus vel unica tantum eſt actio, vel ad plurimum binæ, earumque finis unus. Quemadmodum videmus non eſſe palmæ operationem aliam quam ut dactylos producat, quod & in reliquis arboribus fructiferis ita ſe habet. Atque ita animalium alia reperimus quæ texunt tantùm, ut araneam, alia quæ ædificant, ut hirundinem, alia quæ ſibi ad victum neceſſaria recondunt, ut formicam; homo verò multas ac diverſas actiones producit, quas omnes ſigillatim explicantes, ut ita perſpectum haberent quiſnam eſſet ipſarum finis, invenerunt finem ipſius unam tantum actionem eſſe, reliquis ad ipſius conſervationem [directis,] quò meliùs una iſta actio in eo perficiatur, quæ eſt intelligibilium apprehenſio, & veritatum, prout ſe reverâ habent, cognitio. Siquidem impoſſibile eſt ut finis hominis ſit edere, bibere, rem veneream exercere, parietem extruere, aut Regem eſſe, cum hæc omnia ſint accidentia ei extrinſecus advenientia, quæ ſubſtantiæ ejus nihil addunt; dunt; cùmque hæ actiones omnes ei cum aliis animalium ſpeciebus communes ſint: at ſcientia illud eſt quod ſubſtantiam ejus auget, ipſumque à ſtatu humili ad ſublimem transfert. Cum qui homo fuerit in potentia jam homo actu evaſerit. Homo ſi quidem antequam ſcientiâ præditus ſit inſtar beſtiarum eſt. Neque enim à reliquis animalium ſpeciebus aliter quam ratione diſtinguitur, quòd ſcil. ipſe Animal ſit rationale. Per rationem autem intelligo rerum intelligibilium apprehenſionem: rerum autem intelligibilium præcipua eſt unitatis Dei Opt. M. apprehenſio cum aliis quæ cum ipſa conjunctæ ſunt, rebus Theologicis. Cæteræ enim ſcientiæ [eò tendunt] ut iis exerceatur [homo,] donec ad Theologicam pervenerit. His autem de rebus ſermonem plenè pertexere longum foret valdè. Verùm unà cum apprehenſione intelligibilium neceſſe eſt ut exceſſum in voluptatibus corporeis vitet, cùm primum intelligibile quòd apprehenditur, ſit, quòd deſtructio animi ſit cum cura corporis [conjuncta,] animi autem cura cum deſtructione corporis. Quamdiu enim ſectetur homo cupiditates, ſenſui obvia eligens, & intellectum ſuum cupiditati ſuæ ſubjiciens, ſéque inſtar beſtiarum habeat & pecorum, (quæ nihil aliud concipiunt quàm quæ eſu & potu idonea, quæque ad Venerem ſpectant,) nondum apparet in ipſo potentia divina, viz. Intellectus, ſed mera eſt materia in mari τῆς ὑλῆς natans. Ex his præmiſſis patet, mundi noſtri, eorúmque quæ in ipſo ſunt, finem eſſe Virum ſcientiâ præditum, eúmque bonum. Cùm ergò verè ſint in individuo aliquo generis humani ſcientia & opera, (per ſcientiam autem intelligo apprehenſionem veritatum prout ſe re verâ habent, & aſſecutionem omnium quæ fieri poſſit ut aſſequatur homo; per opera autem, moderatum rerum naturalium uſum, & fugam exceſſus, néve ex iis captet niſi quo ſuſtentetur corpus, & rectiùs diſponantur habitus [ipſius] univerſi) ille, qui ita ſe habet, finis eſt propoſitus: quam ſententiam non ſolùm notam fecerunt Prophetæ, verùm & è ſectis antiquis docti, iíque qui neque viderunt unquam prophetas, neque ſapientiam eorum audierunt, idem docuere; ſcil. non eſſe quempiam hominem perfectum, niſi qui ſcientiam & opera ſimul conjunxerit: & quàm præclarum eſt dictum Philoſophi iſtius excellentis, Scopum Dei in nobis eſſe, ut intelligentes ſimus & boni. Si quis enim ſcientiâ & intelligentiâ præditus cupiditates ſectetur, non eſt ille revera ſciens, cùm ſcientiæ initium [in hoc conſiſtat] ut non captet quis è voluptatibus corporeis, niſi quo ſuſtentetur corpus. Quæ autem huc ſpectant fuſius tractantes in explicatione tract. Aboth, eadem, prout decet atque opus eſt, elucidabimus. Atque hoc modo invenimus Prophetam redarguiſſe illum, qui cùm ſcientiam ſibi attribueret, legem interim tranſgrederetur, animíque ſui cupiditatibus indulgeret, hoc ipſius dicto, Quomodo dicitis, Sapientes ſumus, & Lex Dei nobiſcum eſt? &c. Pari ratione ſi quis devotus fuerit, & abſtemius, voluptatum, niſi quantum corpori ſuſtentando ſit, fugiens, ínque omnibus naturæ viis modum teneat, necnon omnia ad probitatem morum [ſpectantia] complectatur, niſi quòd ſcientiâ careat; neque hic (quamvis priori perfectior) perfectionem aſſecutus eſt, cùm nondum vera & firma ſint iſta ejus opera, ideòque dicunt Sapientes, p. m. Brutus non eſt peccati metuens, quem admodum explicavimus. quíque Idiotam pium eſſe affirmaverit, ille Sapientes qui hoc præciſè affirmârunt, nec non & ipſam rationem mendacii arguit: quare & per totam legem præceptum invenies, Et diſcetis ea, & deinde, & facietis ea, præmiſſâ operibus ſcientiâ, quia ſcientia ad opus perducit, non autem opus ad ſcientiam; atque hoc eſt quod dixerunt [Doctores] q. p. Doctrinam ad opera perducere. Una autem hîc ſupereſt quæſtio, cùm dicere poſſit aliquis, Affirmâſtis vos ſapientiam divinam nihil fruſtra feciſſe, omniúmque creaturarum ſublunarium nobiliſſimam eſſe hominem, finem autem generis humani eſſe intelligibilia apprehendere, quare ergò fecit Deus homines [iſtos] omnes qui non apprehendunt intelligibilia, cùm videamus maximam hominum partem ſcientiâ carere, cupiditates autem ſectari, virúmque ſcientiâ & rerum mundanarum contemptu præditum, rarum quid ac peregrinum eſſe, qualis vix unus ſæculo aliquo reperiatur? Reſpondetur autem omnes iſtos duas ob cauſas reperiri, quarum prima eſt, ut Uni iſti inſerviant. Nam ſi omnes ſcientiæ dediti ac philoſophiæ ſtudioſi eſſent, periturus eſſet mundus, & in caſſum abiturus, penitúſque ex ipſo deleretur genus humanum quàm breviſſimo temporis ſpatio. Homo enim egenus admodum eſt, rebúſque multis opus habet, adeo ut neceſſe illi eſſet arandi, metendi, triturandi, commolendi, pinſendi, & inſtrumenta his omnibus [inſervientia] conficiendi artem diſcere, quò pararetur ipſi cibus; eodémque modo neceſſe eſſet illi diſcere nendi ac texendi artificium, quò ſibi contexeret quod indueret; nec non architectonicem, ut ſibi ſtrueret quo tegeretur, & modum inſtrumenta his omnibus [idonea] conficiendi, neque ſufficeret Methuſalechi ætas ad perdiſcendas artes iſtas quibus univerſis neceſſariò intra vitæ ſuæ terminum opus habet homo, ac quando tandem vir iſte ſapientiam acquireret, & ſcientiæ operam daret? Illi ergò omnes conditi ſunt, ut hæc opera præſtent, quibus in civitate opus eſt, conditus eſt autem vir ſcientiâ præditus ſui gratiâ; atqué ita [ſimul] colitur terra, & reperitur ſapientia; quàm ſcitè ergò dixit ille, quiſquis fuit, Niſi eſſent ſtulti, deſolaretur terra? Quæ enim ſtultitia huic par eſt, ut homo, animo debilis, [corporis] ſtructurâ infirmus, à principio climatis ſecundi, uſque ad principium ſexti profectus, maria hieme & deſerta per ventos æſtatis urentes pertranſeat, ſéque ferarum & ſerpentium [periculo] objiciat, quò forte pecuniam lucretur, deinde cùm nummorum iſtorum, quibus tres animas ſuas impendit, ſummam collegerit, eam diſtribuere incipiat architectis qui ipſi fundamentum firmum è gypſo & lapidibus in terra ſolida ſtruant, ſuper quod parietem erigat qui annos centenos perduret, cùm certò ſciat non ſupereſſe ſibi vitæ quantum vel parietem junceum abſumeret? quæ [inquam] ſtultitia hâc major eſt? Sic & voluptates & cupiditates mundanæ mera ſunt ſtultitia, [quæ tamen] ad terræ conſervationem [ſpectant] ideoque appellârunt Sapientes, quibus pax, ſcientiâ vacuos, Populum terræ, q. d. eos qui ad terram colendam creati ſunt, quare & illos ipſi affines ſtatuerunt. Quòd ſi dicat quis, Atqui videmus virum levem & fatuum [aliquem] in mundo quiete frui, neque in ipſo angi, aliis ipſi ſervientibus & negotia ejus peragentibus, imò & aliquoties virum ſcientiâ præditum negotiis ejus occupari; non ita ſe res habet, prout ipſi videtur, verùm ideo ſtultus iſte tranquillitate fruitur, quoniam & ipſe ſervus eſt viro iſti quem ſcopum propoſuit creator. Ille enim [ope] tranquilli ſtatûs ſui, magnæque facultatum aut poſſeſſionum ſuarum copiæ, ſervos ſuos arcem ſublimem extruere, vel vineam magnam plantare jubet, uti facere ſolent Reges Regúmque ſimiles; arx interim iſta viro alicui præſtanti paratur, qui venturis ſæculis aliquando ſub aliquo parietum ejus umbram captans hoc pacto à perditione liberetur; ſumetúrque aliquando è vinea iſta menſura vini, quâ conficiatur theriaca, quâ vir quiſpiam perfectus à vipera morſus ſanetur: ita enim Dei Omnipot. glorioſi œconomia & ſapientia quibus ſervire fecit naturam, [x] Conſilia ſunt â longinquo, veritas, firmitas. Atque hanc ſententiam explicârunt Sapientes, quibus pax. Dixit enim R. Shimeon Ben Yuchai de συγχρόνοις ſuis, eo quo fuerunt gradu [non obſtante,] Vidi filios cœnaculi paucos eſſe; ſi duo ſunt, Ego & filius meus illi ſumus. Ideóque facta eſt turba hominum ut conſortes eſſent filiis cœnaculi. Tu forſan hanc utilitatem parvi pendendam exiſtimabis, at certè priori potior eſt. Annon vides Deum infideles in terra retinuiſſe, ut piis ſocii eſſent? hoc eſt quod dixit, Omnip. glor. Shekalim è Seder Moed, neque in tract. Edayoth, neque tract. Aboth è Seder Nezikin, nec in tractatum Middoth & Kinnim è Seder Kadaſhim, neque in partem aliquam è Seder Taharoth tractatu Niddah excepto. Deinde obiit R. Aſhe, cùm Talmud ad eum quem commemoravimus finem perduxiſſet in Babele: quod etiam facientes terræ Iſraelis ſapientes, ſcil. uti fecerat Rab Aſhe, Talmud Jeruſalemi compoſuerunt, cujus author Rab. Yuchanan. Extant autem Hieroſolymitani quinque Sedarim [i.e. ordines] integri. Quod ad Seder Taharoth autem, nullum extat omnino in ipſum Talmud, neque Babylonicum, neque Hieroſolymitanum, excepto tract. Niddah, uti diximus. Quem tamen ordinem poſſit quis poſt difficultatem multam, & moleſtiam gravem, ope Toſiphtæ & Baraitoth, ſententiáſque decretorias ex illo per totum Talmud adductas colligendo, & ex iiſdem tractatuum fundamenta & ſcopum eliciendo, explicare, prout in noſtra iſtius Seder explicatione, volente Deo, percepturus es. Mortuis autem Sapientibus iſtis omnibus, quorum ultimi fuerunt Rabbina & Rab Aſhe, perfectóque Talmude, omnium qui ipſis ſucceſſerunt unicus hic erat ſcopus, ut verba ab ipſis compoſita intelligerent, nihil illis addendo, vel detrahendo. Multos ergò commentarios ſcripſerunt Al Geonim, nemine tamen eò perveniente (quantum quidem ſciam) ut univerſi Talmudis expoſitionem abſolveret, quoſdam impediente vita [brevitate,] alios hominum in judiciis importunitate. Libros etiam de deciſionibus ſententiarum compoſuerunt, alios linguâ Arabicâ, alios Hebraicâ; veluti Halacoth Gedoloth [i. conſtitutiones magnæ] & Halacoth Ketuoth [i. ſententiæ deciſæ,] & Halacoth peſukoth [i. ſententiæ decretoriæ,] & Halacoth Rabbi Achæ Miſſhabcha, cum aliis. Halacoth autem quas compilavit Doctor inſignis Rabbenu Iſaac, p. m. præſtiterunt ne iſtis omnibus opus haberemus, cùm omnia in deciſionibus & decretis utilia, quibúſque noſtris temporibus, ſcil. tempore exilii, opus eſt, contineant; cúmque in iis omnes qui illis qui ante ipſum fuere acciderant, in deciſionibus ſuis, errores patefecerit, neque ipſe interim in illis, paucis exceptis ſententiis, quæ numerum denarium non attingunt, ullatenùs arguatur. Omnium autem Geonim expoſitiones quæ extant, ſe mutuo excellunt juxta intellectûs eorum præſtantiæ rationem, adeò ut Talmudis ſtudioſus quiſpiam intellectu præditus, Geonim iſtos, qualis unus quiſque fuerit, è dictis & expoſitionibus ipſorum dignoſcere poſſit. Ubi autem ad nos deventum eſt, ei inſiſtentes quæ in iis qui præceſſerunt invenimus, inquiſitioni, diligentiæ ac ſtudio, [accinximus] nos pro modulo virium noſtrarum ad omnia illa quibus profecturos nos apud Deum ſperamus, conquirenda: collegi ergò quicquid incidit in manus meas ex iis quæ pater meus p. m. aliíque accepta tulerunt D^ti. noſtro Joſepho Levitæ, cùm viri iſtius in Talmude peritia ad ſtuporem (novit Deus) redactura ſit illum qui ipſius dicta & profundas ſpeculationes perpenderit, adeò ut parum abſit quin dicam, [b] Ante eum non fuit qualis ipſe rex, in via ejus iſta. Collegi etiam quaſcunque apud ipſum inveni in explicatione ſua, ſententias, una cum iis, quæ mihi occurrerunt, juxta imbecillitatem virium noſtrarum, eámque quam aſſecuti ſumus ſcientiam, interpretationibus, atque ita in tres Sedarim, ſcil. Moed, Naſim,

[b] 2 Reg. 23. 25.

Naſim, & Nezikin expoſitionem confeci, quatuor exceptis tractatibus, de quibus jam in animo eſt aliquid ſcribere, ſed nondum ei rei otium invenimus. Scripſimus etiam in tract. Cholim ob magnam ejus neceſſitatem : atque hic labor noſter fuit quo occupati fuimus, unà cum eo quod aliis rebus impendimus ſtudio. Viſum eſt deinde in Miſhnam commentarium ſcribere, cujus neceſſitas qualis ſit, abſoluto hoc ſermone meo, declaraturus ſum. Ad quod faciendum incitatus ſum, eò quòd viderem Talmud illud in Miſhnah facere, quod nemo unquam conjectando aſſequi poterat, dum fundamentis adductis, hic (inquit) Miſhnæ [textus] tali vel tali modo ſuperſtructus eſt: aut in hac Miſhnæ ſententiâ deeſt verbum, ſenſus autem ejus eſt iſte : vel iſta Miſhnah eſt נ"ש N. cujus ſententia ita ſe habet. Deinde verbis ejus addens, & detrahens, ejus cauſas reddit. Exiſtimo autem ubi comprehenderit opus hoc illum quem declaraturi ſumus ſcopum in totam Miſhnam, futurum ipſum quatuor magni momenti rebus utile : Prima eſt, ut inde veram Miſhnæ explicationem, verborúmque ipſius interpretationem percipiamus: ſi enim maximum נ"ע Geonim de interpretatione alicujus in Miſhnah conſuetudinis, interrogaveris, non poteſt ille quicquam tibi de ea reſpondere, niſi Talmudicam ejuſdem explicationem memoriâ teneat, aut dicat, Age, videamus quid de ipſa occurrat in Talmude dictum : impoſſibile autem eſt ut quis univerſum Talmud memoriâ teneat ; præcipuè cùm una ſententia Miſhnica quatuor aut quinque foliis explicetur, dum dicta dictis intermiſceantur, probationes nempe, objectiones, & reſponſa, adeo ut non poſſit, quid in explicatione iſtius Miſhnæ clarum ſit, elicere, niſi qui judicii ſit admodum perſpicacis; atque hoc, etiamſi non fuerit ejuſmodi ſententia iſta, cujus explicatio judiciorúmque ad eam ſpectantium deciſio, non niſi è duobus tribúſve tractatibus perficiatur. Secunda eſt, deciſionum [cognitio,] cùm in explicatione uniuſcujuſque ſententiæ, ad cujus opinionem conformetur praxis, oſtenſurus ſim. Tertia, ut introductionis vice ſit ei qui [his rebus] ſtudere incipiat, dum ejus ope pateſiat ipſi ratio verba explorandi, atque explicandi, ut perinde ſit ac ſi univerſum Talmud calleret ; atque hoc magno ipſi adjumento futurum eſt ad totum Talmud [percipiendum.] Quarta demum, ut ſit [vice] Anamneſtæ illi qui legerit, & ſciverit, quò præſtò ſit quodcunque legerit, continuè ante oculos ipſi poſitum, ſintque Miſhnah & Talmud ipſius in ore ejus rectè diſpoſita. Hæc cùm apud me animo concepiſſem, accinxi me ad librum, quem mihi propoſui, componendum. Scopus ergò mihi in hoc libro propoſitus eſt, Miſhnam, eo modo explicare, quo [illam] explicavit Talmud; ac ſententias veras tantùm recenſere, omiſſis iis quæ in Talmude manifeſtò rejiciuntur ; nec non rationes reddere ob quas prolata ſunt iſta verba, & eas ob quas inciderunt inter diſcrepantes quibuſdam in controverſiis differentiæ, & ad cujus ſententiam dirigatur praxis, prout in Talmude explicatum eſt ; in quibus omnibus verborum conpendio ſtudui : quò tamen nulla lectori difficultas relinquatur, cùm non ideò hæc compoſuerimus ut lapides, ſed ut eos qui intellectu præditi ſunt, intelligere faciamus. Viſum eſt autem mihi eodem ordine librum meum diſponere quo fecerunt omnes interpretes, ſcil. ut verbis

Classis quarta. Rab. Judah Princeps, Rabban Gamaliel, Rabban Simeon fil. ipsius, R. Simeon fil. Juchai, R. Eleazar fil. ipsius, Rab. Simeon, fil. Eleazari, Rab. Ismael fil. Josis, Rab. Jonathan, atque hæc ultima est Sapientum Misnicorum Classis.

Sectio quinta. De iis quos inter eos notum est, se invicem habuisse ut Discipulum & Præceptorem. Jam initio sermonis nostri diximus Rabbenu Hakkadosh Mishnæ compilatorem fuisse Discipulum patris sui, eodèmque modo ex avis ipsius filios discipulos fuisse patrum suorum usque ad Hillelem, usque ad Simeonem justum, uti memoravimus; similiter Rabban Juchanan filius Zaccæi discipulus fuit Hillelis, & discipuli Rabban Juchanani, filii Zaccæi, fuerunt quinque, scil. Rab. Eliezer, filius Hircani notæ famæ Vir, Rab. Josuah fil. Chaninæ, Rab. Josi Sacerdos, Rab. Simeon fil. Nathanielis, & Rab. Eleazar, filius Araci: Atque hic est cœtus quibus annuntiata est vita futura, (prout è Talmude notum est) ipsis sc. cum discipulis suis, & discipulorum discipulis. Rab. Akiba item fuit discipulus Rab. Eliezeris fil. Hyrcani. Fuit is scil. præceptor ejus præcipuus. Legerat etiam aliquid Rab. Akiba iste apud Rab. Tarphonem, qui tamen ejus præceptor non fuit, sed socius. Magnum interim honorem detulit Rab. Akiba, Rab. Tarphoni, vocabátque ipsum Rabbi, cùm Rab. Tarphon vocaret ipsum [simpliciter] Akiba. Solebat insuper Rab. Akiba dicere, Rabbi, sinas me proferre coram te aliquid ex iis quæ me docuisti, [prout] declaratum est in Sifra. Et Rab. Meir, & Rab. Simeon fil. Jochai fuerunt discipuli Rab. Akibæ; is enim præceptor eorum præcipuus erat. Didicerat enim R. Meir à Rabbi Ismaele aliisque. Rab. Juda studuit apud Rab. Eleazarum fil. Azariæ, atque is præceptor ejus præcipuus fuit. Ubicunque autem legeris in Mishna R. ὁ δᾶνα, nomimine Rab. τῦ δᾶνῼ, scias illum hujus discipulum fuisse, ideóque ipsi acceptam tulisse [sententiam] Rabbenu Judah sanctus autem apud R. Eleazarum f. Shemuæ lectioni operam dedit. Et Samecus discipulus fuit R. Meiri, cui quod in votis fuit, ut à Rab. Juda post mortem Rab. Meiri disceret, assequi non contigit.

Sectio sexta. De Declaratione nominum nude expressorum, plenioris explicationis gratiâ. R. Eliezer ita simpliciter appellatus, cujus mentio fit in Mishna, est R. Eliezer fil. Hircani, R. Juchanani fil. Zaccæi discipulus. Et R. Josua simpliciter, est R. Josua f. Chaninæ discip. R. Juchanan f. Zaccæi, & R. Judah cujus simpliciter mentio fit, R. Judah filius El Cùm autem voluiſſent R. Meir, & R. Nathan ad pudorem redigere Rabban Gamalielem patrem Rabbenu Hakkadoſh in re quam longum eſſet narrare, ipſos à confeſſu ſuo amovit: quare cùm ab alterutro ipſorum ſententia aliqua referatur, ſi R. Meiro accepta ferenda ſit, dicitur, Alii dicunt; quod ſi R. Nathani, dicitur, Sunt qui dicunt. Verùm quod dicit in Miſna, Nomine R. Iſhmaelis dixit Diſcipulus quidam coram Rab. Akibâ, [intelligendum] eſt de R. Meir. Quod autem dicunt, Judicantes coram Sapientibus, ſunt iſti quinque viri, ſcil. R. Simeon fil. Azai, R. Simeon fil. Zomæ, R. Simeon fil. Naneſi, Chanan, & Chananiah vir Ono. Cùm autem in Miſhna dicit, Sapientes; aliquando hoc titulo deſignatur unus tantum eorum quorum nomina præceſſerunt, aliàs autem totus cœtus; ita frequenter in Talmude explicationis gratiâ dicit, Quinam ſunt Sapientes iſti? R. ὁ δεῖνα. Hoc autem facit, quando invenerit multos quod ab iſto Sapiente dictum fuerit amplexos eſſe, ideóque cum multi fuerint qui eam ſequantur ſententiam, Sapientes indigitat, licèt ille cui accepta fertur unus ſit. Ubi autem dicit, Domus Shammæi, & Domus Hillelis, innuit cœtum qui Shammæi & Hillelis ſententiam amplectuntur, cum diſcipuli alicujus domeſtici ipſius [habeantur.] Rabbi autem eſt Rabbenu Hakkadoſh: éſtque ille R. Judah princeps, ſextus ab Hillele ſene, Author Miſhnæ. Proximus autem Kabbaliſtarum, cui acceptum fertur dictum illud, eſt R. Meir, atque hoc eſt quod volunt cùm dicant, Miſhnah abſolutè poſitum eſt R. Meir, niſi in quibuſdam locis abſolutè poſitis, quæ [exhibent ſententiam] R. Meir ſolius, in qua ab eo diſcrepatur, aut [ſententiam] alius à R. Meir; quæ explicat Talmud. Cúmque nos ſententias deciſuri ſimus ex ejus mente, cujus obtinet ſententia, in ſingulis per totam Miſhnam, conſuetudinibus quantum tibi quod ad hoc propoſitum ſufficiat habiturus es.

Sectio ſeptima. De Gradibus ipſorum, prout Author [Miſhnæ ipſos] diſpoſuit. Diſtribuuntur illi quorum facta eſt mentio in Miſhna, (qui ſunt, uti præmiſimus, centum viginti octo) in tres gradus. Cùm quis apud ipſum in magno honore fuerit, atque omnium ſupremus, illum nomine ſuo appellat, ex. grat. Hillel, Shammæus, Shemaiah, Abtalion, quod magnitudinis ipſorum [indicium] eſt, cùm non potuerit reperiri Epitheton aliquod quo fama ipſorum illuſtrior redderetur, uti neque Prophetæ Epitheto aliquo celebrantur. At qui apud ipſum gradu his inferiori fuerint, illos appellat Rabban, ut cùm dicit, Rabban Gamaliel, & Rabban Juchanan fil. Zaccæi. Qui his denique gradu inferiores, audiunt apud ipſum Rabbi, ut cùm dixit, R. Meir, R. Juda. Alii, quartò, aſſerunt Beatitudinem quam aſſecuturi ſumus, præſtando mandata, eſſe quietem corporis, & ſpes hujus mundi in eodem fruendas; veluti fertilitatem terræ, facultatum & liberorum copiam, longitudinem vitæ, ſanitatem corporis, ſtatum ſecurum, quódque regno apud nos ſtabilito in hoſtes noſtros dominaturi ſumus. Infelicitatem autem, quæ nos, cùm tranſgreſſi fuerimus, invadet, eſſe his quæ diximus contraria, qualia nos hoc exilii tempore patimur. Quin & hoc ſibi probare videntur ex omnibus in Lege textibus, qui benedictiones & maledictiones continent, aliiſque pluribus, nec non omnibus quæ in Scriptura afferuntur narrationibus.

Alii, quintò, qui & plures ſunt, hæc omnia conjungunt, dicentes illud quod ſperatur, eſſe, venturum Meſſiam, & mortuos reſuſcitaturum, qui Paradiſum ingreſſi ibi comedent & bibent, bonâ fruentes valetudine quamdiu duraverint cœli ac terra. Verùm quod ad articulum hunc admirandum (viz. Mundum futurum,) paucos omnino reperies quibus in mentem venerit, quíve de eo cogitent, vel pro fundamento ſumant, aut de nominibus iſtis interrogent cuinam rei competant; & num ille, vel alius aliquis juxta ſententias prædictas finis ſit, aut qui inter finem & cauſam quæ ad ipſum perducit, diſtinguant: neque invenies prorſus qui de hoc ſciſcitetur, aut qui de eo aliquid dicat. Verùm illud de quo quærunt univerſim, tum vulgus, tum melioris notæ homines, eſt, Quomodo reſurrecturi ſint mortui, nudi an amicti? & num iiſdem quibus ſepulti erant, veſtibus, iiſque eodem quo fuerant modo acu pictis, variegatis, ac pulchrè conſutis? an velamento quod ipſis operiendis tantùm ſufficiat? &, cùm venerit Meſſias, num æquales fient dives & pauper? aut futuri ſint ſub ipſo alii fortes, alii infirmi? Cùm multis ejuſmodi quæſtionibus omni tempore [ventilatis]. Tu verò [Lector] hanc à me parabolam accipias, quò deinde animum ad ea quæ mihi in his omnibus dicenda reſtant, audienda apponas. Fingas puerum minorennem ad præceptorem deductum, quò eum legem edoceat, quod certè magnum illi, ob eam quam inde aſſequetur perfectionem, bonum eſt; niſi quòd ipſe, præ annorum defectu & intellectûs ſui imbecillitate, magnitudinem boni iſtius, quantámque ad perfectionem ipſum perducturum ſit, haud percipiat: coget neceſſitas præceptorem iſtum, qui ipſo perfectior eſt, illum ad legendum de re aliquâ, quæ ipſi pro eâ quâ eſt ætate tenerâ deſiderabilis videatur, provocare. Dicet ergò illi, Lege, ut tibi juglandem, aut ficum, aut ſaccari portiunculam demus; ita fiet ut legat & ſtudeat, non ipſius lectionis gratiâ, (cùm ipſius dignitatem non intelligat) ſed ut edulium iſtud, (cujus eſus ipſi lectione præſtantior & majus bonum ſine dubio videtur,) accipiat: ideóque lectionem moleſtiam putat & laborem, quem tamen ſuſcipit ut eo finem iſtum deſiderabilem aſſequatur, ſcil. nucem juglandem, aut ſaccari particulam. Cúmque grandior jam & intellectu auctus, minoris æſtimet illud quod antea præferebat, atque aliud jam eligat, allicietur etiam eo quod jam ipſi optabilius videtur; dicente ei præceptore, Lege, ut tibi calceos pulchros, aut iſtiuſmodi veſtem emamus; quo fiet ut tum etiam diligentiam adhibeat, non ipſius lectionis gratiâ, ſed iſtius indumenti;

cùm veſtis iſta præſtantior ipſi ſcientiâ videatur, ſitque lectionis finis. Porrò cùm intellectu adhuc perfectior evaſerit, adeò ut minoris pendatur ipſi hoc etiam pretium, allicietur aliquo adhuc hoc majori; dicente ipſi præceptore ſuo, Diſcas hanc Sectionem, aut hoc Caput, quò tibi aureum aut duos aureos donemus. Leget enim rurſus, & diligentiam adhibebit, quò nummos iſtos accipiat, cùm lucrari nummos ipſi tunc temporis præſtantius videatur lectione. Fins enim Lectionis apud ipſum eſt ut aurum, quod ſperare jubetur, accipiat. Cùm autem majoris adhuc fuerit judicii, ut hoc etiam pretium ipſi vilius habeatur, cum ipſum ſpernendum quid eſſe perceperit, alliciendus erit eo quod hoc potius erit; ac dicetur ipſi, Diſce, ut Doctor ſis, aut Judex, & magni te faciant homines, tibíque aſſurgant, & juſſis tuis obſequantur, ac celebre ſit nomen tuum, & dum vivis & poſt mortem tuam, qualis hic vel ille; atque ita leget, & ſtudebit, ut aſſequatur gradum iſtum, erítque ipſi finis, ut magni ab hominibus fiat, celebretúrque, ac laudibus evehatur. Hæc interim omnia vituperio digna ſunt, ad quæ tamen confugitur ob imbecillitatem intellectûs iſtius, qui finem ſcientiæ alium ab ipſa ſcientia facit, dicens, Quorſum diſceremus hanc ſcientiam, niſi ut eâ aliquid acquiramus? quod reverâ ſtultitia eſt. Hoc autem eſt quod apud Sapientes dicitur, Shelo Liſhmah, Non ſui ipſius gratiâ [diſcere,] viz. ut quis obſequatur præceptis, eáque faciat, legátque & ſtudeat, non ejus rei ipſius gratiâ, ſed alîus cujuſpiam, quod vetârunt Sapientes, q. p. dicentes, Ne facias ea coronam, ut iis glorieris, neque ſecurim, ut iis fodias, [quibus verbis] digitum intendunt ad illud quod tibi explicavi; ſcil. ne ſtatuat [quis] finem ſcientiæ, vel ut magni fiat ab hominibus, vel opes acquirat, neque cultum Dei victûs parandi inſtrumentum faciat, neque ſit ipſi alius ſcientiæ finis quàm ipſum ſcire: eodémque modo ne ſit alius ipſi veritatis finis, quàm ut ſciat ipſam veram eſſe, & præcepta vera eſſe, & finem ipſorum eſſe ea præſtare: neque convenit homini perfecto dicere, Si fecero bona iſta, & fugero turpia iſta, quæ vetuit Deus, quâ re remunerabimur? Perinde enim hoc foret, ac ſi diceret puer, Quando legero, quidnam mihi dabitur? ac diceretur ipſi, Res iſta talis. Videntes enim infirmitatem intellectûs ipſius, qui gradum iſtum non apprehendit, ſed finis [veri] finem [alium] quærit, reſpondetur ipſi ſecundùm ſtultitiam ipſius [ſicut dicitur] [d] Reſponde ſtulto juxta ſtultitiam ſuam Vetuerunt autem hoc etiam Sapientes, ſcil. ut ſtatuat homo finem cultûs ſui, & obſequii erga mandata, rem aliquam. Quò ſpectat dictum [viri] præſtantis, perfecti, qui verum optimè perſpexit, Antigoni [nempe] Socenſis, Ne ſitis inſtar ſervorum, qui ſerviunt Domino eâ conditione ut accipiant mercedem, ſed ſitis ut ſervi, qui ſerviunt Domino etiam nullâ expectatâ mercede; quo voluerunt amplectendam veritatem veritatis ipſius gratiâ: atque hoc eſt quod innuunt cum dicunt, Serviens [Deo] ex amore. Dixerunt etiam, quibus pax, In præceptis ejus delectatur valde. Dixit Rab. Eleazar, Præceptis ejus, & non mercede præceptorum ipſius. Quantum autem, & quàm perſpicuum eſt hoc argumentum? Eſt enim ratio manifeſta illius quod in ſuperioribus diximus. Hoc tamen ipſo majus eſt dictum ipſorum in textu libri Sifre, Ne fortè dicas, Ecce ego diſco Legem ea propter ut ſim dives, ea ea propter ut vocer Rabbi, ut accipiam mercedem in ſæculo futuro: docemur dicere ad diligendum Dominum, quicquid feceritis, ne faciatis niſi ex amore tantùm. Manifeſta ergò eſt hæc ſententia, conſtátque eam Legis ſcopum eſſe, & fundamentum ejus quod profitentur Sapientes, nec adeò cæcus eſt quis, ut eam non perſpiciat, niſi ſtultus, hebes, quem cogitationum ineptarum & imaginationum vitioſarum ſuggeſtus perdidit. Fuit autem iſte gradus Abrahami patris noſtri, quod ſcil. fuerit Seviens [Deo] ex amore, & ad hanc viam ſedulò nitendum eſt. Cùm autem perſpectum haberent Sapientes, quibus pax, obſcuram admodum eſſe hanc ſententiam, quámque non omnes capiunt, &, ſi intellexerint, non tamen ei ſtatim aſſentiunt, neque pro vera habendam eſſe cenſent. Neque enim facit quis opera aliqua, niſi ut iis conſequatur utilitatem, aut repellat damnum, ſin minus, futura eſt actio ipſius fruſtranea. Quomodo ergò dicetur ei qui Legem amplectitur, Facias hæc opera, aut, hæc ne facias, non ob metum pœnæ [à] Deo, neque ſpe mercedis ab ipſo conſequendæ. Durum admodum hoc erit, quia non omnes rerum veritatem capiunt, ut ſint Abrahamo patri noſtro ſimiles. Ideo permiſerunt vulgo ut in opinione ſua maneant; ſcil. facienda eſſe bona ſpe præmii, & mala metu pœnæ fugienda; útque ad hoc excitentur, & in ſententia ſua hac de re confirmentur, donec rebus meliùs apprehendendis [valeat] qui eas intelligere vult, ac quid verum, & quæ via perfectior ſit dignoſcat, quemadmodum cùm puero inter docendum, juxta ſimilitudinem præmiſſam, agimus: quare Antigono Socenſi vitio verterunt, quod ſententiam ſuam palàm coram vulgo protulerit, ideóque dixerunt Sapientes, Cavete verbis veſtris, &c. uti in Aboth explicaturi ſumus. Nec tamen prorſus operam perdunt iſti è vulgo dum Legi, metu pœnæ, & ſpe præmii obſequuntur, verum nondum ſunt perfecti: probatúrque in ipſis illud, quò ita acquiratur ipſis habitus atque exercitatio in obedientia Legis, ut indè ad veritatem tranſitum facientes, ſervi ex amore evadant: Atque hoc eſt quod dicunt, Semper det homo operam Legi, etiamſi non ipſius gratiâ, quoniam ex hoc [quòd præſtet ipſam] non ſui gratiâ, eò perveniet [ut &] ſui gratiâ [præſtet.] Ex iis autem quæ ſcire debes, eſt, in verbis Sapientum, quibus pax [interpretandis,] diſtribui homines in tres claſſes, Prima (atque hi plurimi ſunt eorum quos vel quorum ſcripta vidi, aut de quibus audivi) eorum eſt, qui ea juxta ſenſum literalem intelligi volunt, neque ea ullatenùs interpretantur, adeo ut his impoſſibilia quævis neceſſariò exiſtere videantur. Hoc autem fecerunt, quòd ſcientiarum prorſus rudes ſint, & à diſciplinis alieni, neque in eo perfectionis gradu ut ipſi ſibi monitores ſint, nec alium qui eos moneret, invenerint. Putant ergò iſti noluiſſe Sapientes in omnibus indubitatæ veritatis dictis ſuis aliud, quàm quod ipſi ex iiſdem perceperint, eáque prout ſonant verba intelligenda, etiamſi quod primò multis in ipſorum dictis apparet prorſus abſurdum ſit, adeò ut ſi juxta illud quod præ ſe ferunt verba conſiderantes, dicéntque, Quomodo fiet, ut quot in mundo ſunt hominum quiſpiam hoc imaginetur, & pro verâ habeat ſententiâ? tantum abeſt ut illud laudare velit. [Digna] autem eſt miſera hæc ſecta, cujus defleatur ſtultitia; nam dum ſe Sapientes extollere putat, in infimum eos gradum dejicit: neſciens interim ſe ita facere. Quinimo certiſſimè ſecta iſta religionem honore ſuo ſpoliat, ejúſque ſplendorem obfuſcat, Legèmque Dei in contrarium ei ad quod ipſa dirigitur, detorquet. Nam cùm Deus in ipſo legis textu dicat, [e] Qui audient omnia ſtatuta iſta, & dicent, Tantum populus ſapiens & intelligens, gens magna iſta, genus hoc hominum contexit è ſono verborum Sapientum illud quod ſi audierint gentes [aliæ] dicerent, Certè populus ſtultus & fatuus eſt gens iſta parva. Qui autem plurimùm hoc faciunt, ſunt Homiliaſtæ, qui ea hominibus explicant, quæ ipſi non intelligunt, atque utinam cùm non intelligant, tacere vellent, [f] Quis dabit tacendo taceretis, & eſſet vobis ad Sapientiam? aut dicerent ſaltem, Neſcimus quid velint Sapientes hoc dicto, aut quomodo exponendum ſit; verùm ipſi illud ſe intelligere putant, atque hoc ſatagunt, ut hominibus explicent illud quod ipſi intellexerint, non quod dixerint Sapientes; coram vulgo explicationes [tract.] Beracoth & capitis Chelek, prout verba ad literam ſonant, proferentes.

Claſſis ſecunda numeroſa etiam eſt, iſtorum ſcil. qui cùm dicta Sapientum legerint aut audiverint, atque juxta ſonum verborum acceperint, rati nòluiſſe Sapientes aliud quàm quod præ ſe ferunt verba, incipiunt ſtultitiæ, fœditatis & abſurditatis incuſare illud quod abſurdum non eſt; ac frequenter verbis Sapientum illudunt, ſe illis ſapientiores & perſpicaciores eſſe judicantes, atque illos, quibus pax, deceptos fuiſſe, judicii expertes, omnium rerum ignaros, adeò ut nihil prorſus intelligerent. Eorum qui hanc opinionem amplectuntur plerique ſunt ex iis qui ſe medicos profitentur, quíque circa aſtrorum effectus ineptiunt. Sunt enim hi, opinione ſuâ, acuti, Sapientes, Philoſophi; at quàm longè abſunt ab eo ut pro hominibus habeantur apud vere Philoſophos. Sunt autem hi ſtultiores Claſſe priori, magíſque fatui. Secta certè maledicta, quòd hæc effutiat contra viros magnos de quorum ſcientia apud doctos liquidò conſtat. Quòd ſi diſciplinis operam navarent, ut ſcirent quomodo de Theologicis & ejuſmodi rebus ſermo, tum apud vulgus, tum apud doctiores, inſtituendus ſit, & partem Philoſophiæ practicam tenerent, tum demum conſtaret fuerintne Sapientes [noſtri] viri docti, annon: & manifeſtus eſſet ipſis eorum quæ ab illis dicta ſunt, ſenſus. Secta tertia paucorum admodum eſt, adeò ut non aliter ſecta audiat quàm ſol ſpecies: ſunt autem illi apud quos de merito Sapientum, & bonâ ipſorum intentione, inde conſtat, quòd dictis ipſorum involuta reperiantur verba, quæ ſenſus admodum veros innuant, quæ pauca licet fuerint, eáque ſparſim in [diverſis] locis librorum ab ipſis compoſitorum poſita, indicant quâ fuerint perfectione, ipſoſque rerum veritatem apprehendiſſe. Conſtat etiam ipſis de eorum quæ fieri non poſſunt impoſſibilitate, ejúſque quod neceſſarium eſt neceſſitate, norúntque illos, q. p. non locutos fuiſſe de eo quod fieri non poſſit, undè certò ſtatuunt ſubeſſe verbis ipſorum exterius [quid] & interius, ac quotieſcunque loquantur de rebus impoſſibilibus, habere verba ipſorum rationem ænigmatis & parabolæ; iſte enim mos fuit Sapientum magnorum, ideóque orſus eſt princeps Sapientum librum ſuum, dicendo, [g] Ad intelligendum parabolam & facundiam, verba Sapientum, & ænigmata eorum. No-

Quòd ſi fueris (heus tu) utriuſvis harum Sectarum priorum, verbis meis de re aliqua huc ſpectante ne attendas, neque enim expediet tibi ex iis quicquam; ſed è contra tibi nocitura ſunt, túque illa odio habiturus: quomodo enim convenient alimenta quantitate tenuia, qualitate benè temperata, viro qui aſſuetus fuerit alimentis malis, craſſis? ſunt enim ipſi noxia, & faſtidio futura. Annon vides quid dixerit qui aſſuetus fuerat cepis & allio & piſcibus, de Manna, Quid hoc eſt, & anima noſtra averſatur panem levem, &c. Quòd ſi ex iis fueris qui tertiæ Claſſis ſunt, quotieſcunque occurrit tibi quid in verbis eorum quod refugiat intellectus, fac ibi ſubſiſtas, ac ſcias ænigma eſſe & parabolam, ac pernoctes animo occupatus, ac cogitationibus defixus in ejus interpretatione, ſollicitè rationem veri indagans, & ſententiam rectam, ſicut dicit, [k] Ad inveniendum verba voluntatis, & ſcripturam rectitudinis, verba veritatis. Perpende autem verba mea, è quibus utilitatem, volente Deo, capturus es. Ac jam de eo quod inſtitui dicere incipiam. Scias, ſicut nec cœcus colores, nec ſurdus voces, neque impotens veneris voluptatem veneris percipit; ita nec corpora voluptates animi proprias aſſequi; & quemadmodum piſcis elementum ignis non habet cognitum, cùm ipſe in ejus contrario degat; ita nec in mundo hoc corporeo voluptates mundi ſpiritualis dignoſci; ac certè non eſt apud nos ulla omnino præter eam corporis, & quam ſenſus è cibo, potu, & venere percipiunt, voluptas. Quicquid ultra eſt, nobis planè incompertum eſt, adeò ut illud cogitationum primordiis, aut aliter quàm multâ adhibitâ diligentiâ, diſcernere atque apprehendere nequeamus. Atque ita ſe res habeat neceſſe eſt, cùm in mundo ſimus corporeo, ideóque non aliam quàm ejus voluptatem percipiamus; quod ad voluptates autem ſpirituales, eæ perpetuæ ſunt, nunquam ceſſaturæ, nec ulla eſt omnino inter ipſas & has proportio, neque nobis vel lege vel Metaphyſicorum inter Philoſophos

[ſententiâ] conceditur, ut Angelis, ſtellis, & ſphæris, nullam eſſe voluptatem aſſeramus. Quinimo magna admodum iis, ex eo quod de Creatore intelligunt, oritur voluptas: atque inde fit ut perpetuâ fruantur & quæ nunquam ceſſat voluptate: non eſt tamen ipſis voluptas [aliqua] corporea, nec eam percipiunt, cùm non ſint illis, ut nobis, ſenſus, quibus ea quæ nos percipimus aſſequantur: eodémque modo, cùm è nobis quis dignus factus fuerit qui gradum iſtum poſt mortem conſequatur, non ampliùs voluptates corporeas percepturus eſt, eáſve appetiturus, magis quàm Rex, magni regni Dominus, regno ſuo exui cupiat, ut ad pili luſum in plateis redeat, etiamſi fuerit tempus quo ſine dubio luſum iſtum pili regno anteferret, viz. cùm adhuc puer utramque rerum iſtarum ſimul expertus non fuiſſet: ſicut & nos hodie voluptatem corpoream, ei quæ animæ propia eſt, anteferimus. Cùm autem voluptatum iſtarum binarum qualitatem perpenderis, unius vilitatem, & alterius dignitatem, etiam in hoc mundo, facilè dignoſces. Homines enim pleroſque, vel potiùs omnes, cernimus animis ac corporibus ſuis moleſtiam & laborem, quo nullus gravior eſſe poteſt, imponere, ut gradum ſublimem conſequantur, aut magni ab hominibus fiant; non eſt autem hæc voluptas eadem cum illa quæ à cibo aut potu provenit. Similiter multi vindictam de inimicis ſumendam multis corporis voluptatibus præferunt: quin & multi etiam maximas inter corporis delectationes fugiunt, vel opprobrii & dedecoris ipſas ſecuturi metu, vel famæ conſequendæ deſiderio. Cùm ergò ita comparatæ ſint res in hoc etiam mundo corporeo, quanto magis in futuro, ubi animæ noſtræ de Creatore, quantum corpora cœleſtia, aut etiam amplius, percepturæ ſint. Neque enim voluptas iſta in partes diſtribuitur, neque enarrari poteſt, neque reperitur ſimilitudo aliqua quacum comparari poſſit; verùm, uti dixit Propheta, ejus magnitudinem admiratus, [l] Quàm magna eſt bonitas tua, quam recondiſti timentibus te, & feciſti ſperantibus in te! Atque ita dixerunt, q. p. In mundo futuro nec eſt eſus, nec potus, nec lotio, nec unctio, neque uſus lecti conjugalis, verùm ſedent juſti coronas in capite geſtantes, & voluptatem è ſplendore majeſtatis divinæ capientes; ubi verbis iſtis, Coronas in capite geſtantes, innuit duraturam eſſe animam duratione objecti ſcientiæ ſuæ, eſſéque ipſam & ipſum rem unam, ſicut & à Philoſophis peritioribus multis modis, quos hîc explicare longum eſſet, declaratum eſt: eo autem quod dicit, Voluptatem capientes è ſplendore divinæ Majeſtatis, animas iſtas eo quod de Creatore intelligunt, oblectari, quemadmodum animalia ſancta, & reliqui angelorum ordines, eo quod de eſſentia ipſius percipiunt. Beatitudo autem & finis ultimus eſt, ut quis ad hunc cœtum ſupremum pertingat, & gradum iſtum conſequatur, durétque anima in eo quem deſcripſimus ſtatu, in æternum, juxta durationem Creatoris glorioſi, qui cauſa eſt durationis ejus, eo quod ipſum apprehendat, quemadmodum in Philoſophia prima traditum eſt: atque hoc certè bonum eſt magnum, cui æquari aliud non poteſt, cuique nulla voluptas ſimilis eſt. Quomodo enim comparabitur quod perpetuum eſt ſine termino, rei quæ finem habet? atque hoc eſt quod dixit Deus, [m] Ut benè ſit tibi, & prolonges dies: cujus dicti explica-tionem traditione accepimus, Ut bene ſit tibi, in ſæculo quod totum eſt bonum, & prolonges dies, in ſæculum quod totum eſt longum. Miſeria autem perfecta eſt, ut exciſa pereat anima, ne durationem conſequatur, quod eſt Cereth, cujus in lege fit mentio. Significatus autem Cereth eſt, Excidium animæ, quemadmodum explicavit, dicens, Exſcindendo exſcindetur anima iſta: dicunt autem q. p. [n] Exſcindendo in hoc ſæculo, Exſcindetur in ſæculo futuro: dicítque Scriptura, Sit anima Domini mei colligata in faſciculo vitæ, &c. Quicunque enim voluptates corporeas ſectatur, &, rejectâ veritate, quod falſum eſt amplectitur, gradu iſto excelſo excidit, & materia tantum ſeparata remanet. Sæculum verò futurum ſenſibus corporeis nequaquam apprehendi indicat Propheta hoc ipſius dicto, [o] Oculus non vidit, O Deus, præter te quid faciat expectanti ipſum. Ad quod explicandum dixerunt, Omnes Prophetæ univerſim non prophetarunt, niſi de diebus Meſſiæ, at quod ad mundum futurum, oculus non vidit, ô Deus, præter te. Quod autem ad promiſſa & minas quorum mentio eſt in lege, eorum interpretatio hæc eſt quam tibi indicaturus ſum: ſcil. dicere ipſum, ſi obſecutus fueris iſtis præceptis, opem tibi feremus ad ea præſtanda, & perfectionem iis [acquirendam] omniáque quæ te impediant tollemus: neqúe enim poteſt quis ipſi cultum præſtare, ſi vel morbo laboret, vel fame opprimatur, vel ſiti, neque bello [vexatus.] Hæc igitur omnia ſe amoturum promittit, ipſóſque bonâ valetudine & tranquillitate fruituros, quo perficiatur ipſis ſcientia, & vitâ mundi futuri digni fiant. Neque enim is legis finis eſt, ut uberes proventus faciat terra, & producantur hominum vitæ, ac convaleſcant corpora, verùm ut his rebus omnibus adjuventur homines ad ipſam præſtandam. Eodemque modo, ſi tranſgreſſi eſſent, hoc erit ipſis in pœnam, quòd contingerent ipſis iſta impedimenta omnia, adeò ut bonum facere non poſſent, ut & dixit, [p] Propterea quod non colueris Dominum, &c. Ubi autem ſententiam hanc admirandam perpenderis, invenies perinde ſe habere ac ſi dixiſſet, Si quædam horum præceptorum ex amore ſedulò præſtiteris, opem tibi ad ea omnia [præſtanda] feremus, à te obſtacula & impedimenta auferendo. Quod ſi aliqua ipſorum neglexeris, ea vili pendens, impedimenta tibi quæ ab iis omnibus impedient, immiſſuri ſumus, adeò ut perfectionem conſequi non valeas neque durationem: atque hic ſenſus eſt ejus quod dicunt, q. p. Merces præcepti præceptum, & merces tranſgreſſionis tranſgreſſio. Quod autem ad Paradiſum, locum, ſcil. fertilem in ſphærâ terræ, aquis irriguum, fructibus abundantem, quem futurum eſt ut Deus hominibus detegat, iíſque viam ad ipſum monſtret, ut in eo oblectentur, ac in quo forſitan reperientur plantæ admodum miræ, magnæ utilitatis ac ſuavitatis, ab his quæ nobis notæ ſunt, diverſæ; hæc omnia ejuſmodi ſunt quæ fieri poſſunt, neque longe ab intellectu remota, ſed conceſſu facilia, etiamſi eorum non meminiſſet lex, multo magis cùm in lege expreſſa fuerint, & manifeſta. Quod ad Gehennam verò, eſt illud nomen cruciatus quo torquendi ſunt mali, cujus deſcriptio manifeſta in Talmude non habetur. Dicunt autem nonnulli, appropinquaturum ipſis ſolem eóſque torrefacturum, ad quod probandum adhibent dictum ipſius, [q] Quia ecce dies venit, ardens inſtar fornacis, &c. Autumant alii, æſtum mirum in corporibus ipſorum oriturum, qui ea comburat, burat, quod probant dicto ipsius, [r] Spiritus vester, ignis comedet vos. Quod ad resurrectionem autem mortuorum, est ea fundamentum è fundamentis legis Mosis, quam si quis non credat, non est ipsi in Judæorum Religione sors aut locus. Pertinet ea ad solos virtute præstantes. Expresse enim dicitur in Bereshith Rabba, Demissio pluviæ justornm simul est & injustorum, at resurrectio mortuorum justorum tantùm. Ac quomodo victuri sunt injusti, cùm mortui sint etiam dum vivunt? ita dixerunt, q. p. Mali etiam dum vivunt mortui appellantur: at justi etiam post mortem vivi audiunt. Scias autem hominem necessariò mori, & in illud è quo compositus est resolvi. Quod ad dies Messiæ autem, sunt illi tempus, quo restituendum est Israeli regnum, ipsique in Palæstinam redituri. Erit autem Rex iste potens, cujus regni metropolis erit Zion, cujus nomen celebre ac ultimas terræ partes famâ impleturum, Salomone major ac ditior, quocum pacem inituræ sunt gentes & obsequium ipsi præstitutæ provinciæ, ob insignem ipsius justitiam & quæ ab ipso fient miracula. Quod si quis in ipsum insurrexerit, perditum illum in manum ipsius tradet Deus. Omnes autem scripturæ textus, tum ipsius, tum nostram quam per eum [consequemur] felicitatem prædicant. At non mutabitur in rerum natura quicquam ab eo quo nunc est statu, nisi quod regnum penes Israelem futurum sit. Ita expresse dixerunt Sapientes, Non est inter sæculum hoc & dies Messiæ [discrepantia] præter subjugationem regnorum tantum. Erúntque sub ipso alii aliis fortiores & debiliores; verùm istis diebus facilis admodum paratu hominibus erit victus, adeò ut quam minimâ fieri possit molestiâ magnum quis assequatur lucrum; atque huc spectat quod dicunt, Futurum est ut producat terra Israelis placentas & Melotas. vestes sericas [s]: dicunt enim vulgo, cùm quis rem facilè & in promptu invenerit, Invenit ὁ σῖτα panem pistum & cibum coctum: quod ut indicant Scripturæ verba, [t] Eruntque alienigenæ agricolæ vestri & vinitores vestri; ita simul futuram tunc temporis arationem & messem probant; quare iratus est Sapiens ille qui hanc sententiam protulit Discipulo suo, qui hanc ipsius sententiam non intelligens, verbis prout sonant acceptis, ipsi pro modulo captus sui responsum, quod revera nullum est, reddidit. Neque enim ipsum prout veritati consentaneum est respondisse, argumento est quod reponit, [u] Ne respondeas stulto juxta stultitiam suam. Magna autem temporum istorum fœlicitas erit, quòd tunc à jugo regni mali, quod nos ab omnium virtutum studio retinet, liberabimur, ac multiplicabitur scientia, sicut dixit, [x] quia replebitur terra scientiâ Domini, tollentúrque lites & bella, ut & dixit, [y] Nec tollet gens in gentem gladium, concessâ illis qui tunc vivent perfectione magnâ quâ ad vitam sæculi futuri pertingant. Morietur autem Messiah, regnabúntque post ipsum filius & nepotes. Moriturum enim ipsum indicat Deus, [z] Non caligabit, nec frangetur, donec ponat in terra judicium, &c. At diutissimè duraturum est regnum ipsius, ac longævi tunc homines futuri. Sublatis enim doloribus & molestiis prolongantur vitæ: neque certè alienum à vero est,

[r] Isa. xxxiii. 11. [s] Prior Editio sic habuit, [vestes, Melotas, sericas.]—Melotas autem in Margine ponendum, ut vocis Hebraicæ sonum magis quam sensum hoc loco exprimat, quamvis enim Heb. מילת, Vestes Sericæ, à מנלוש formari videatur, aliter tamen à Judæis exponitur, scil. קמאש חריר ומרקום בנקש ותזאויק ונחו דלך, Supellex serica, & opere variegato, auróque ornata, & ejusmodi. est, duraturum regnum ipsius ad quædam annorum millia. Asserunt enim, Bonorum consortium, ubi coaluerit, non facile dissolvi. Non autem adeo desiderandi sunt dies Messiæ, ut vel multiplicentur frumentum & opes, vel ut equis vehamur, aut adhibitis instrumentis musicis compotemus, ut existimant qui confusi sunt intellectu; verùm eos optarunt Prophetæ & avidè expectarunt viri præstantes ob illam, quæ tunc futura est, bonorum societatem, conversationem probam, & scientiam, Regísque justitiam & insignem scientiam, gradúmque quo ad creatorem suum est, propinquum (sicut ipsi dixit, [a] Tu es filius meus) quódque tota Mosis Lex sine fastidio, perturbatione aut coactione præstanda sit, sicut promisit, [b] Non docebunt quisque proximum suum, &c. quoniam omnes me cognoscent à magno eorum usque ad parvum eorum: ponámque Legem meam in corde ipsorum, & auferam cor lapideum è carne vestra, &c. (cùm multis ejusmodi Scripturæ locis eodem spectantibus:) quibus moribus firmitèr apprehenditur sæculum futurum. Quod autem ad finem ultimum, est ille sæculum futurum, quò enitendum. Ideóque finem illum respiciens [Doctor] iste veridicus, omissis aliis, Omni Israelitæ (inquit) sors est in sæculo futuro. Quamvis autem sit ipsum finis, non tamen debet ille, qui se servum ex amore præstare velit, ideò Deum colere ut mundum futurum acquirat; uti in præcedentibus explicavimus; sed eâ quam descripturus sum ratione: sc. quod ubi crediderit collatam prophetis à Deo scientiam quâ eos docuit ita se habere virtutes, ita vitia, oporteat ipsum, quà hominem rectè dispositum, virtutes sectari, vitia autem fugere: quod cùm fecerit, impletum est in ipso illud quod hominis nomine innuitur, ipséque à bestiis distinctus. Cúmque jam evaserit homo perfectus, est è differentiis hominis, cui non obstat impedimentum aliquod, hoc, ut anima ipsius duratione ejus quod scit, perduret, quod est (uti explicavimus) sæculum futurum. Atque hùc spectat illud quod dicit, [c] Ne sitis ut equus & mulus quibus non est intellectus, &c. i. e. quibus, illud quod eos retinet, ne liberè evagentur, aliquid est exteriùs additum, frœnum putà aut capistrum; homini verò non ita, cùm quod ipsum retineat ipse sit; viz. forma ipsius humana, quæ, ubi perfecta fuerit, ipsum retrahet ab eo quod perfectioni ipsius obstat, qualia sunt quæcunque Vitiorum nomine appellantur: at è contra incitabit ad illud quo perficiatur; nimirum Virtutes. Atque hoc est quod ex iis omnibus, quæ de insigni hoc ac magni momenti argumento locuti sunt, liquere arbitror. Compositurus sum autem librum, in quo explicationes mysticas, quæ in Talmude aliísque libris reperiuntur, omnes simul collectas explicabo, atque interpretatione veritati congruâ exponam, quam etiam totam ex ipsorum verbis confirmans, indicabo quænam ex illis prout sonant [accipiendæ;] quænam parabolæ sint; quænam, cùm in somno acciderint, oratione tamen liberiori enarrentur, quasi vigilantibus contigissent: quo etiam explicaturus sum tibi opiniones multas, rèsque non paucas, quarum exempla tibi aliquot in hoc sermone meo dedi, è quibus de reliquis conjecturam facias. Ne autem mihi vitio vertatur illud, quod in oratione mea accidit, ut verbis quibusdam & notionibus, quæ improbant sapientes, liberiùs utar; hanc enim mihi libertatem indulsi, quò intelligere facerem cerem illum, qui non priùs in aliquibus ad materiam hanc ſublimem, quam non omnes capiunt, ſpectantibus, inſtitutus fuerit.

Quod ad nomen Epicurus, vox eſt Syriaca, cujus ſignificatus eſt, Deſpectus & contemptus legis aut eorum qui legem præ ſe ferunt; ideóque nomen hoc generaliter ei qui fundamenta legis non crediderit, quíve Sapientes, aut quemlibet ipſorum diſcipulum, aut præceptorem ſuum contemptui habuerit, attribuitur. Libros exoticos vocant, libros hæreticorum, eodémque modo libros Ben Siræ. Fuit autem ille vir quidam qui libros de rebus futilibus ad artem conjectandi ſpectantibus, quibus nulla ineſt vel ſcientia, vel utilitas, ſed inane temporis diſpendium, compoſuit: quales ſunt & libri iſti qui reperiuntur apud Arabes, Hiſtorici ſcil. & de rebus geſtis Regum, Arabumque genealogiis, & Cantilenarum, cum ejuſmodi aliis, in quibus neque ulla eſt ſcientia, nec utilitas ad corpus redundans verùm mera temporis jactura.

Qui adſuſurrat plagæ: eâ nempe conditione, ut cum emiſſione ſputi fiat; quoniam in hoc eſt contemptus nominis divini. Et qui pronuntiat nomen literis ſuis: ut ſcil. proferat Yod, He, Vau, He, quod eſt nomen expreſſum. Quin & alia recenſent quæ qui fecerit nullam eſt [ibi] habiturus partem. Dicunt enim, Qui pudore afficit ſocium ſuum coram multis, non eſt illi pars in mundo futuro: neque ei qui ſocium ſuum agnomine appellat: aut qui contemptu ſocii ſui ſibi gloriam quærit. Neque enim horum factorum aliquod, etiamſi parva alicui videantur, aliunde procedit, quàm ab animo vitioſo neutiquam perfecto, quíque vitæ ſæculi futuri idoneus non ſit. Porrò, ex iis quæ opus eſt ut hîc tibi commemorem, (eſt enim hic locus illi commemorando aptiſſimus,) eſt articulos legis noſtræ, ejúſque fundamenta numero tredecim eſſe.

Fundamentum primum eſt, Eſſe Creatorem (cui laus:) Scil. Eſſe qui ſit perfectiſſimo eſſendi modo; quìque ſit cauſa quòd ſint ea quæ ſunt omnia, quóque ſuſtineatur eſſentia ipſorum, & à quo durationem habeant, [adeò ut] ſi ſuppoſuerimus ſublatam eſſe eſſentiam ipſius, tolleretur protinus eſſentia omnium quæ ſunt, nec duraret quicquam ſibi ad hoc ut eſſet ſufficiens: Quòd ſi ſuppoſuerimus ſublata eſſe quæ ſunt omnia præter ipſum, non telleretur eſſentia ipſius, nec defectum pateretur. Eſt ſiquidem Ipſe celſiſſimus nullius indigens ad hoc ut ſit, cùm quicquid præter ipſum eſt, ſive Intelligentiæ, (Angeli, ſcil. & orbes cœleſtes) ſive quæ infra eas ſunt omnia, ipſo, ad hoc ut exiſtant, indigeant. Atque hoc eſt fundamentum primum, quod innuitur voce, Ego Dominus, &c.

Fundamentum ſecundum eſt Unitas Dei. ſcil. Illum [qui] omnium cauſa eſt, unum eſſe; non tamen ut unum genere, vel ſpecie, vel ut individuum unum compoſitum quod in unitates multas dividitur; vel ut corpus ſimplex unum numero quod diviſionis & diſtributionis in partes infinitas capax eſt, verùm eum unum eſſe unitate cui non ſit alia aliqua ullo modo ſimilis. Atque hoc eſt fundamentum ſecundum, quod indicatur dicto ipſius, Audi Iſrael, Dominus Deus tuus unus eſt.

per ſe, vel per accidens: ideóque negârunt, q. p. ipſi attribuendas eſſe conjuctionem & ſeparationem, dicentes, Neque ſeſſus, neque ſtatio, neque Oreph, neque Ippui, id eſt, neque ſeparatio (quod per Oreph intelligunt) neque conjunctio: quoniam nomen Ippui deſumptum eſt ab eo quod dicitur, [d] Et volabunt in humerum Philiſtæorum: i. impellent illos humero utpote iis conjuncti. Dicit autem Propheta, Cui aſſimilabitis Deum, &c. & cui aſſimilabitis me ut ſim æqualis, &c. quòd ſi corpus eſſet, aſſimilaretur corporibus. Sicubi igitur in Scripturis epithetis corporum propriis deſcribitur, e. g. motu à loco ad locum, quòd ſurgat & quòd ſedeat, aut loquatur, & quæ hujuſmodi ſunt, eſſe ea omnia Metaphorica, & quemadmodum dicunt, Locuta eſt lex linguâ hominum. Multa autem de hoc argumento dixerunt homines. Hoc igitur fundamentum tertium eſt, quod innuitur eo quod dixit, [e] Quia non vidiſtis omnem ſimilitudinem, &c. i. e. non apprehendiſtis ipſum ſub aliquâ ſimilitudine, cum ipſe (ut diximus) neque ſit corpus, neque potentia in corpore.

Fundamentum quartum eſt, Æternitas: ſcil: Unum hunc quem deſcripſimus, eſſe ſimpliciter æternum, quicquid autem præter ipſum exiſtit, non eſſe, reſpectu ipſius, æternum. Hujus probationes in Scripturis multæ ſunt, atque ad ipſum intenditur digitus, eo quod dixit, [f] Habitaculum eſt Deus æternus.

Fundamentum quintum, Illum eſſe qui colendus ſit, cújuſque veneratio & obſequium prædicanda, neque hoc alicui [eorum] qui ipſo eſſentiâ inferiora ſunt, Angelorum nempe, ſtellarum, orbium cœleſtium, elementorum, aut quicquid ex iis componitur, præſtandum; cùm hæc omnia naturâ ad opera ſua peficienda ordinata ſint, neque ſit ipſis arbitrium aut electio, ſed amor Dei tantùm; neque aſſumenda eſſe ea pro mediatoribus, quorum ope ad ipſum accedamus, verùm ad ipſum [unum] dirigendas eſſe cogitationes, & ab omnibus, ipſo excepto, avertendas. Atque hoc Fundamentum quintum prohibitio eſt cultûs Idololatrici, in quo vetando maxima legis pars occupatur.

Fundamentum ſextum eſt Prophetia, ſcil. ſciendum eſſe, reperiri in genere humano quoſdam indole admodum præſtanti magnàque perfectione præditos, quorum cùm animæ ad recipiendam formam intellectûs diſpoſitæ fuerint, ac deinde intellectus iſte humanus cum intellectu agente conjungatur, nobilis quædam ab eo in ipſos influentia derivatur; ſunt autem hi Prophetæ, hæc prophetia, hícque ejus ſignificatus; quod Fundamentum plenè dilucidare longum foret valdè. Neque verò hoc nobis propoſitum eſt, ut horum fundamentorum ſingula demonſtrationibus probemus, aut quomodo percipi poſſint oſtendamus, cùm hoc omnium eſſet ſcientiarum aggregatio, verùm ut hiſtoricè tantum ea enarremus. Scripturæ autem loca quibus Prophetarum muneri teſtimonium perhibetur, multa ſunt.

Fundamentum ſeptimum eſt Prophetia Moſis doctoris noſtri; ſcil. ut credatur, ipſum omnium Prophetarum, qui vel ante ipſum vel poſt ipſum fuerint, patrem eſſe, qui omnes gradu ſunt ipſo inferiores, ipſumque è toto genere humano à Deo electum electum esse qui de ipso plus quàm apprehenderit, aut apprehensurus est, alius quispiam qui vel fuerint, vel futuri sint hominum, apprehendit; ipsum autem eò ultra humanæ naturæ terminos evectum, ut ad regni [cœlestis]gradum pertigerit, & in Angelorum ordinem relatus fuerit, adeò ut non restaret ipsi velum quod non perrumperet, neque obstaret illi remora aliqua corporea, neque admistum ei fuerit quicquam omninò, sivè minus sive plus, defectûs. Quin & sublatæ sunt ab eo potentiæ imaginatrices & sensitiva cum suis apprehendendi modis, obstupuítque facultas ejus appetitrix manente tantum intellectu; quam ob rationem, indè quod [g] Deum allocutus sit sine mediatione, Angelorum cognomen accepit. Porrò sententiam istam miram hoc loco elucidare, unáque textus Legis obseratos recludere, necnon [verborum, istorum] Ore ad os, intellectum cum toto isto contextu, aliísque eòdem spectantibus enodare voluissemus, nisi viderem notiones istas valdè subtiles esse, quæque fusiori tractatione, præfationibúsque & similitudinibus indigeant; priúsque probandum esse dari Angelos, & Ordines, in quos à Creatore distincti sunt, diversos; ac de animâ, omnibúsque ejus facultatibus dicendum: atque hoc pacto ampliatum iri circulum, adeo ut loquendum esset etiam de formis quas tribuerunt Prophetæ Creatori & Angelis. Neque sufficerent ad absolvenda quæ ad hanc solam spectant materiam, etiamsi quàm compendiosissimè agerem, vel centum folia; quare illud loco suo relinquam, sive in lib. explicationis allegoriarum quem promisi, sive in lib. Prophetiæ in quo jam defixus sum, aut in lib. quem de explicatione horum fundamentorum compositurus sum. Jam autem ut ad septimi hujus fundamenti scopum revertar, Dico prophetiam Mosis distinctam esse à prophetia reliquorum Prophetarum quatuor differentiis. Prima est, Quòd quemlibet [aliorum] Prophetarum non allocutus fuerit Dominus, nisi per mediationem, at Mosen sine mediatore, sicut dixit, Ore ad os alloquar ipsum. Secunda, quód ad cæteros prophetas omnes non perveniret visio nisi inter dormiendum, sicut dixit in diversis locis, in somnio, noctu; & somiavit: In somnio in visione noctis, &c. cujusmodi multa sunt: aut tempore diurno, post soporem, qui Prophetæ obtingeret, aut statum quo cessantibus ab officio suo sensibus vacuæ relinquerentur cogitationes ipsius, ut in somno fieri solet, qui status vocatur Machazeh, & Mareeh, i. Visio, de quibus dicit, In visionibus Dei: at ad Mosen interdiu delatus est sermo stante ipso inter binos Cherubin, sicut promisit ipsi Deus, [h] Et conveniam te illic, ibique loquar tecum, &c. Dixit Deus, [i] Si fuerit è vobis Propheta, Dominus in visione ipsi fiam notus, in somnio loquar ad eum. Non sic servus meus Moses, &c.

Tertia differentia, quòd cùm ad Prophetam facta esset revelatio, etiamsi in visione & mediante Angelo, infirmari tamen natura ipsius, & debilitari corporis status irruente in ipsum consternatione admodum magnâ, quò parum aberat, quin animam ageret; uti in Daniele, alloquente ipsum Gabriele per visionem, liquet; dicit enim, [k] Neque remansit in me fortitudo, &c. Necnon, Fui ego soporatus super faciem meam, & facies mea ad terram. Dicit etiam, [l] In visione conversi sunt dolores mei in me. At cum Mose non ita se res habuit, quem, veniente ad ipſum alloquio, nulla prorſus apprehendit perturbatio, ſicut dicit, [m] Et allocutus eſt Dominus Moſen facie ad faciem, ſicut alloquitur vir ſocium ſuum, i. quemadmodum nulla accidit homini commotio ab alloquio ſocii ſui, ita nec ille, c. p. alloquente ipſum [Deo,] etiam facie ad faciem, commotus eſt, quod ob arctam cum intellectu conjunctionem, uti explicavimus, factum. Differentia quarta. Quòd cæteris prophetis haudquaquam ad arbitrium ſuum afflatus divinus contingeret, ſed fluerent aliquando prophetæ alicui anni aliquot, quibus nulla ipſi viſio patefieret, quin & ſæpe ut quid de re aliquâ revelaretur, oſtenderet, rogatus, non niſi poſt dies aliquot aut menſes prophetiam ederet, aut fortè nihil omnino de ipſa notum haberet. Videmus etiam aliquot ex ipſis, quo animam ſuam recrearent, ac cogitationes defæcarent adhibendo ſe parâſſe, ſicuti fecit Eliſha cùm diceret, [n] Afferte mihi nunc fidicinem, quo facto ſpiritu prophetico afflatus eſt, nec tamen neceſſe erat ut vel ita parato patefieret aliquid. Moſes autem Doctor noſter quandocunque liberet, dicere [ſolebat] [o] Subſiſtite & audiam quid præceptturus ſit vobis Dominus. Et dictum eſt, [p] Alloquere Aharonem fratrem tuum ne intret omni tempore. Dixerunt, Aharon omni [tempore] ingrediebatur, & Moſes non ingrediebatur.

Fundamentum octavum eſt, Lex è cœlo [demiſſa.] ſcil. ut credatur, univerſam Legem iſtam, quæ apud nos hodie reperitur, eſſe ad Moſen [cœlitùs] demiſſam, totámque ex ore Dei profectam, viz. perveniſſe eam totam ad ipſum à Deo eo perveniendi [modo] quem formâ loquendi Metaphoricâ Sermonem appellat, cùm qualitatem modi iſtius haud alius præter ipſum c. p. ad quem pervenit, noverit: fuiſſe autem ipſum inſtar Scribæ qui ipſam ſibi dictatam totam deſcriberet; ejus [ſcil.] hiſtorias, narrationes, & præcepta, unde Mechokek [Scriba] audit: nec ulla eſt differentia inter [verba] [q] Et filii Chami, Cuſh, & Mitſraim, & Put, & Canaan, &c. & nomen uxoris ipſius Mahtabeel, f. Matred, & [iſta] Ego ſum Dominus, &c. &, Audi, Iſrael, Dominus Deus tuus Dominus unus. Omnia enim ex ore Omnipotentis profecta ſunt, ſúntque omnia Lex Domini perfecta, pura, ſancta, veritas. Ideóque ipſorum ſententiâ omnes infideles, infidelitate & hypocriſi ſuperabat Manaſſes, quòd putaret eſſe in lege medullam & corticem, atque genealogias iſtas & hiſtorias nulli rei utiles eſſe, ac ab ipſo Moſe fuiſſe, quod illis innuunt verbis, Non eſt Lex de cælo; ille, inquiunt, qui confeſſus fuerit totam Legem ex ore Domini profectam eſſe unico excepto verſiculo quem non protulit Deus Sanctus, Benedictus, ſed ipſe Moſes; atque hoc eſt quod dicitur, [r] Verbum Domini ſprevit, (longè elatus eſt Deus ſupra infidelium dicta,) verùm unuſquiſque apex ejus judicia & res miras ſuppeditat illi qui ipſum intelligit, nec certè apprehendi poteſt terminus ſapientiæ ejus, [s] Longa eſt præ terra menſura ejus, & latior mari; nec quid homini ſupereſt, quàm ut Davidem unctum Dei Jacob imitetur, qui precatus eſt, [t] Aperi oculos meos, ut videam mirabilia è lege tua. Similiter expoſitio ejus traditione accepta eſt, & ipſa ex ore Omnipotentis [profecta,] iſtáque, quam hodiè docemus, tabernaculi, rami palmæ, buccinæ, peniculamenti & Tephillin, cæterorúmque forma ipſiſſima eſt quam Dominus Moſi, ille nobis dictavit, tavit, cùm nobis nuntium ab ipso ferens se in eo ferendo fidelem præstiterit. Dictum autem quo ad hoc Fundamentum digitus intenditur est illud quod dixit, [u] Hoc scietis quòd Dominus miserit me, &c. quòd non è corde meo, &c.

Fundamentum nonum est, [de abrogatione Legis] scil. Non abrogatum iri legem istam Mosis, neque aliam præter ipsam à Deo datum iri, neque additum ipsi quippiam, neque diminutum, sive in textu, sive in interpretatione: Dicit, e. Non addetis illi, nec diminuetis ab eo. Jam autem explicavimus quod explicare convenit de hoc fundamento in hujus operis præfatione.

Fundamentum decimum est, Deum nosse hominum facta, neque ea neglectui habere, neque res se habere juxta sententiam ejus qui dixit, [x] Reliquit Dominus terram, sed quemadmodum dixit, [y] Magnus consilio, & multus opere, quia oculi tui aperti super omnes vias filiorum hominis, &c. Dixit etiam, [z] Et vidit Dominus quòd multa esset malitia hominis in terra. Rursum, [a] Clamor Sodom & Gomorræ quia multiplicatus est. Atque hæc fundamentum hoc decimum probant.

Fundamentum undecimum, Deum remuneraturum eos qui præstiterint mandata Legis, & pœnas iis qui eâdem vetita patraverint inflicturum, maximum autem præmium esse Mundum futurum, & maximam pœnam Excidium. De hoc autem hoc ipso capite diximus quantum sufficiat. Locus Scripturæ quo probatur hoc Fundamentum, est illud ipsius dictum, [b] Et nunc si auferes peccatum eorum; & si non, dele me nunc de libro tuo, &c. Et responsum Dei, Qui peccavit mihi, delebo eum è libro meo, quo indicat hoc obventurum obedienti & rebelli, ut ille mercedem, hic pœnam ferat.

Fundamentum duodecimum est Dies Messiæ, viz. ut credat quis & persuasum habeat venturum ipsum, neque illum tardare putet, [c] Si tardaverit expectes eum, nec illi terminum constituat, aut ita exponat textus Scripturæ ut ex iis tempus adventûs ipsius eliciat. Dicunt Sapientes, Infletur sententia eorum qui periodos temporum computant. Et ut credat celebrandum ipsum, honoréque, amore & comprecationibus excipiendum, juxta ea quæ de ipso ab omnibus Prophetis, à Mose usque ad Malachiam, tradita sunt. Quòd si quis de eo dubitaverit, aut ipsum parvi penderit, [illum] mendacii legem arguere, quæ ipsum [venturum] expressè promisit in Sectione Balaam, & [Sect.] [d] Vos statis. Sub hoc Fundamento comprehenditur etiam, Non esse Israeli Regem nisi Davide oriundum, eúmque è progenie Salomonis. Quicunque autem hujus familiæ imperio obstiterit, Deum & verba Prophetarum ejus diserta abnegare.

Fundamentum decimum tertium est, Resurrectio mortuorum, quam jam explicavimus.

Cùm autem fidem obtinuerint apud aliquem omnia hæc fundamenta, ipsúmque ea amplecti constiterit, admittitur ille in cœtum Israelitarum, ipsúmque amore & affectu prosequi decet, & erga illum quicquid nobis mutui amoris & fraternæ charitatis præcepit Deus, exercere. Quòd si contigerit illum in aliquibus, præ concupiscentiæ & naturæ vitiosæ prævalentiâ, transgredi, pœnas dabit juxta transgressionis suæ rationem, futura tamen est illi sors [in vitâ fururâ] cùm sit ex iis qui

JAM initio hujus operis declaravimus, quænam cauſa impulerit Authorem ut hunc Tractatum in hac Claſſe collocaret; magnas etiam hujus Tractatûs utilitates commemoravimus, nec non ſæpius in præcedentibus polliciti ſumus, nos in eodem de rebus [quibuſdam] utilibus, ídque paulò fuſiùs dicturos, quoniam etſi intellectu perſpicuæ & faciles fuerint, quod ad corticem, illud tamen quod in iis continetur operibus exprimere non adeo facile eſt omnibus, neque inſuper totus eorum ſcopus abſque explicatione idonea intelligi poteſt, cùm interim ejuſmodi ſint quæ ad magnam perfectionem & veram felicitatem perducant; quare viſum eſt mihi pluribus de ipſis diſſerere. Dixerunt enim [Doctores noſtri] q. p. Quicunque vult ſanctus eſſe, Patrum verba præſtare debet: Jam verò nullus eſt ſupra ſanctitatem, Prophetiâ exceptâ, gradus, quin & illa ipſa ad hanc perducit, ſicut dixerunt, Sanctitas ad [conſequendum] Spiritum Sanctum perducit. Conſtat ergò ex ipſorum dicto opera hujus Tractatûs monitis conſentanea ad prophetiæ [gradum] perducere; cujus veritatem, cùm magnam partem eorum quæ ad mores ſpectant contineat, explicaturi ſumus. Verùm antequam ſingularum ſententiarum explicationem aggrediar, viſum eſt mihi præmittere capita aliquot non inutilia, quæ homini præcognoſcenda quædam ſuggerent, erúntque ipſi inſtar clavis ad eam quæ ſequetur explicationem: Scias autem illa quæ & in his capitibus & ſequentibus commentariis dicturus ſum, non eſſe res cujus ego ipſe author fui, neque explicationes à me primò excogitatas, verùm ſententias, è ſermonibus ſapientum, in Midraſboth, Talmude, aliíſque ipſorum libris, nec non è Philoſophorum, tam antiquiorum quàm recentiorum dictis, hominúmque variorum operibus collectas. videatur videatur [nonnullis] plures esse homini Animas, quemadmodum opinantur Medici: unde scribit Princeps ipsorum, Animas tres esse, Naturalem, Animalem, Spiritualem. Appellantur etiam Facultates, & partes, adeò ut dicant, Partes Animæ: Atque his nominibus frequenter utuntur Philosophi, non tamen ita ut dum dicant partes [Animæ] velint illam dividi in partes, sicut dividuntur corpora; verùm ut actiones ejus diversas, quæ ad animam totam ita se habent ut partes ad totum ex ipsis compositum, enumerent. Nôsti autem rectam morum institutionem esse sanationem animæ, ac facultatum ipsius: Sicut ergò Medico, qui corporum valetudinem curat, opus est ut priùs corpus illud quod curat cognitum habeat, & totum & quænam sint partes ejus (corpus humanum intelligo,) nec non quænam res illi morbum inducant, quò vitentur, & quæ illud sanum conservent, quó appetantur; ita [ei] qui animæ medetur ac mores rectè formare [vult] necesse est ut tum animam totam, tum ejus partes sciat, quídque illi morbi causa sit, quid sanam eam præstet. Dico igitur partes animæ quinque esse, Nutritivam, Sensitivam, Imaginatricem, Appetitricem, Rationalem. Jam autem diximus, hoc ipso capite, sermonem nostrum de anima hominis institui; quoniam nutritio (e. g.) quæ est homini, non est eadem nutritio quæ asino & equo, cùm homo nutriatur parte nutritivâ animæ humanæ, at asinus parte nutritivâ animæ asini, & palma parte nutritivâ animæ propriæ; dicitur interim Nutritionem capiens, de omnibus, communicatione nominis tantum, non quòd una eadémque sit omnium significatio. Similiter de homine & bruto dicitur Sensibile, nomine tantùm utrique communi, non quòd sensus qui est in homine idem sit ac ille qui est in bruto, neque sensus qui est in hac specie, idem cum eo qui est in alia specie, verùm unaquæque species animatorum animam sibi peculiarem habeat, ab alterius anima distinctam, ita ut ab hujus animâ fluant actiones [suæ,] & ab illius animâ actiones [suæ,] cùm interim similis sit actio actioni, adeo ut duæ actiones res prorsus una existimentur, cùm re vera non sint. Atque hoc exprimitur similitudine trium locorum obscurorum, quorum unus oriente super eo Sole, secundus Lunæ radiis, tertius accensâ in eo face illustratur; horum in singulis reperitur lux, cujus tamen [in uno] causa & efficiens est Sol, in alio Luna, in tertio ignis: eodem modo efficiens sensûs hominis est anima hominis; efficiens sensûs asini, anima asini; efficiens sensûs vulturis, anima vulturis; neque est aliquid in quo conveniant, præter nomen omnibus commune. Hoc autem animadvertas, quia non adeò omnibus perspectum est, in quo labuntur multi Philosophantium, adeò ut ad absurda cogantur, & opiniones minimè sanas amplectendas. Ut autem ad institutum nostrum de partibus animæ revertar. Dico, partis nutritivæ esse facultatem attractricem, retentricem, concoctricem, expultricem superfluorum, auctricem, generatricem similis, distinctricem humorum quæ separet illud quod nutritioni inservit ab eo quod expelli debet. Loqui autem de his septem facultatibus, quídque, & quomodo agant, & in instar rei prorsus fruſtraneæ, ſicut dicit, [a] Etiam ut ſine ſcientia ſit anima non eſt bonum, viz. ut exiſtat anima formam ſuam non conſecuta, verùm ſcientiæ expers permaneat, non eſt bonum. Verùm de forma, & materia, & intellectibus, quotuplices ſint, & quomodo acquirantur, diſſerere, non eſt hujus loci, neque ad illum quem de moribus inſtituimus ſermonem neceſſarium, ſed magis ad librum Prophetiæ, cujus meminimus, ſpectat. Hîc igitur finem huic capiti imponentes, ad aliud pergemus.

Caput ſecundum, De tranſgreſſionibus facultatum animæ, & dignoſcenda ea parte in qua primariò reperiantur virtutes & vitia.

Scias tranſgreſſiones & obedientiam legales reperiri in duabus tantum animæ partibus, ſcil. parte ſenſitiva, & appetente: ac ad duas has partes [referri] tranſgreſſiones & præcepta. Quod ad partem nutritivam, & imaginatricem, nec eſt in illis obedientia nec rebellio, quia nullus eſt omnino in iis deliberationis aut electionis actus: neque poteſt quis vi conſilii ſui actionem ipſarum ſuſpendere, aut ipſas ad unam tantùm actionem determinare. Annon vides has duas partes (ſcil. nutritivam & imaginatricem) ſolas ex omnibus animæ facultatibus inter dormiendum operari? Quòd ad animam rationalem, eſt de ea dubium; verùm dico reperiri quidem in hac etiam facultate obedientiam & tranſgreſſionem, prout ſententiam aliquam falſam aut veram amplectitur; non eſſe autem in ipſa opus aliquod cui aut obſequii præſtiti, aut tranſgreſſionis attribuatur nomen; ideòque in præcedentibus dixi in iſtis duabus partibus reperiri præceptorum tranſgreſſionem, aut præſtationem. Quod ad virtutes autem, ſunt eæ duplicis generis, morales, & rationales: ut & ipſis contraria duo vitiorum genera. Virtutes intellectuales parti inſunt rationali; ex iis ſunt, Sapientia, quæ eſt ſcientiâ cauſarum remotarum & propinquarum cognitâ priùs exiſtentiâ rei de cujus cauſis quæritur; & Intellectus, qui eſt intellectus ſpeculativus, ille ſcil. nobis à natura inſitus, ſcil. intelligibilia prima, & intellectus acquiſitus, (qui hujus loci non eſt;) & perſpicacia & præſtantia intellectûs, ſcil. præſtantia de rebus quàm celerrimè conjectandi, nullâ prorſus vel minimâ ſaltem morâ interjectâ. Vitia hujus potentiæ ſecus aut contra ſe habent. Quod ad virtutes autem morales, reperiuntur eæ in parte appetitrice tantùm: Pars autem ſenſitiva, hoc reſpectu, parti appetitrici famulatur. Ac virtutes hujus partis multæ admodum ſunt, veluti caſtitas, liberalitas, æquitas, manſuetudo, humilitas, animus contentus, fortitudo, magnificentia, aliæque. Ejuſdem vitia in horum defectu vel exceſſu [conſiſtunt.] Jam verò quod ad partes altricem & imaginatricem, non dicitur de iis virtus aut vitium, verùm dicitur, rectè eas aut ſecus procedere; veluti aliquem probè concoquere, aut eundem non facilè digerere, & vitiatam eſſe alicujus phantaſiam, aut ipſum ἐυφανλασίαλον eſſe, at his omnibus nec ineſt virtus nec vitium. Atque hoc eſt quod hoc capite tradere voluimus.

Caput tertium, De morbis Animæ.

Dixerunt antiqui eſſe animæ, perinde ac corpori, ſanitatem & ægritudinem. Sanitas animæ

eſt, cùm ita & ipſa & partes ipſius comparatæ ſint, ut continuè actiones bonas, pulchras, & honeſtas producant. Ægritudo autem ejus, cùm ita diſpoſitæ ſint, ut perpetuò mala, turpia, & inhoneſta faciant. Quod ad corporis ſanitatem & ægritudinem, de iis inquirit ſcientia Medicinæ. Et quemadmodum iis, qui corporis morbis laborant, ſuggerit ſenſus ipſorum corruptus illud quod dulce eſt amarum eſſe, quod amarum, dulce, adeo ut quæ vitioſa ſunt ſub ſpecie eorum quibus nihil ineſt vitii concipiat, augeatúrque cupiditas ejus, ac iis delectetur rebus, quibus nihil omnino jucundi ſanis ineſſe videtur, imo non rarò dolor, veluti eſu luti, carbonum, pulveris, rerùmque valdè auſterarum & acrium, cùm aliis ejuſmodi cibis quos nequaquam appetunt ſani, ſed planè averſantur: ita animæ morbis laborantibus, malis ſc. iiſque qui vitiis ſcatent, apparent ea quæ mala ſunt bona eſſe, & quæ bona ſunt mala. Ac certè malus perpetuò extrema, quæ revera mala ſunt, appetit, eáque præ animi ſui morbo pro bonis habet. Et quemadmodum ægroti, cùm noverint morbum ſuum, nec ſint ipſi artis medicæ periti, conſulunt medicos qui ipſos docentes quid facere oporteat interdicunt ipſis eo quod ipſi jucundum imaginantur, eáque ipſos ſumere cogunt, quæ minimè grata ſunt, & amara, quo ſanentur corpora ipſorum & ad eum redeant [ſtatum] ut pro bonis bona, & pro malis mala habeant: Ita & animæ morbis laborantes doctos conſulere oportet, qui ſunt animarum medici, quo eos ab iſtis arceant malis quæ ipſi bona putant, iiſque eâ arte quâ ſanantur mores animi, quámque cap. ſequenti declaraturi ſumus, medeantur. Quod ad animo malè affectos, qui non animadvertentes morbum ſuum, eum pro ſanitate habent, aut animadverſo non quærunt remedium, eodem futuri ſunt ſtatu quo ægrotus, qui dum ſibi jucunda ſectatur, nec medicamentis utitur, haud dubio periturus eſt. Verùm qui animadvertunt, & ſequuntur tamen cupiditates ſuas, de iis dixit Liber veridicus referens verba eorum, [b] quoniam in prava cordis mei cogitatioue pergam, &c. i. dum explere ſitim ſuam expetit, auget ſibi ſitim: eos autem qui non animadvertunt deſcribit Salomo, dicens, [c] Via ſtulti recta eſt in oculis ſuis, at qui audit conſilium, ſapiens eſt, i. e. qui accipit conſilium docti, docentis ipſum viam quæ reverâ recta eſt, non quam ipſe rectam patat; rurſum dicens, [d] Eſt via quæ recta eſt in oculis viri, at finis ejus ſunt viæ mortis: dicit etiam de iſtis animæ morbis laborantibus, dum non ſciant quid ſibi noceat, vel proſit, [e] Via malorum eſt ſicut caligo, non nôrunt in quid impingunt: Verùm ars medendi animis ejuſmodi eſt qualem tibi deſcripturus ſum hoc capite quarto.

Caput quartum, De medelâ morborum animæ.

Actiones bonæ, eæ ſunt quæ ſunt æquales, inter duo extrema, quorum utrumque malum eſt, unum exceſſu, alterum defectu [peccans] mediæ. Virtutes autem ſunt diſpoſitiones animæ & habitus medii inter duas diſpoſitiones pravas, quarum una in exceſſu, altera in defectu eſt, & ab his dispositionibus necessariò profluunt istæ actiones; exempli gratiâ, Temperantia quæ est dispositio media inter intemperantiam, & insensibilitatem voluptatis; Estque Temperantia ex actionibus bonis & dispositionibns animæ à quibus necessariò profluit temperantia, quæ est virtus moralis. Intemperantia autem extremum est primum, insensibilitas voluptatis omnimodæ, alterum, quorum utrumque malum est simpliciter, súntque duæ dispositiones animæ à quibus necessariò profluunt intemperantia, quæ est dispositio modum excedens, & insensibilitas, quæ est dispositio defectu peccans, súntque pariter duo è vitiorum moralium numero. Similiter, Liberalitas media est inter avaritiam & prodigalitatem; & Fortitudo inter temeritatem & timiditatem: Urbanitas inter scurrilitatem & rusticitatem: Humilitas inter superbiam & sui vilitatem: Magnificentia inter profusionem & sordes: Contentatio inter cupiditatem & torporem: Mansuetudo inter iracundiam & lentitudinem: Pudor inter impudentiam & vitiosum pudorem; & in reliquis [similiter,] nec opus est hic recensere nomina iis imposita, cum res significatæ in promptu sint & omnibus intellectæ. Errant autem homines frequenter in his actionibus, putantes extremorum alterum bonum esse & virtutem animæ quandam. Aliàs quidem primum extremorum, bonum putant, quemadmodum temeritatem pro virtute habent, dum temerè audacem fortem appellant, & si aliquem extremo gradu audaciæ viderint, qui in pericula ruat, séque sponte in perniciem conjiciat, verùm casu evadat, eum ob illud laudant, dicentes, Hic sanè fortis est. Aliàs verò alterum melius existimant; ita dicunt illum qui animo est lentiori, mansuetum, & torpidum, virum sorte suâ contentum, eúmque qui nullo voluptatum sensu capitur pro indolis suæ stupore, temperatum; & consimili errore prodigalitatem & profusionem inter facta laude digna numerant, sed hoc totum erroris est. Illud vero quod meritò laudatur est, ut quis medium teneat, ad quod etiam tendere hominem oportet, atque ita semper omnes actiones suas perpendere, ut eò [inclinent.] Scias autem virtutes & vitia ista moralia acquiri & firmari in anima iteratione actionum ab istis moribus fluentium [ídque] pluribus vicibus, tempore longo, & dum iisdem assuefaciamus. Quod si bonæ fuerint actiones istæ, illud quod nobis iisdem acquiritur virtus erit; sin malæ, erit illud quod ex illis provenit, vitium. Homo enim naturâ suâ à principio neque virtute, neque vitio instructus est, uti Capite octavo ostensuri sumus; ipse autem sine dubio actionibus [quibusdam] à pueritia sua juxta consuetudinem familiæ, aut patriæ suæ assuescet; erúntque aliàs actiones istæ mediæ, aliàs ejusmodi quæ modum excedant, aut deficiant, uti descripsimus. Erit ergo ei necessarium, cùm animam ipsius corripuerit morbus, eandem rationem adhibere in ea curanda quæ in curatione corporum adhiberi solet. Sicut ergò cùm è temperamenti sui æqualitate migraverit corpus, observamus in quam partem inclinaverit, & quò exierit, ut ei rebus ipsi contrariis occurramus, donec redeat ad temperamentum æquale, ad quod cum redierit, ab isto contrario adhibendo abſtinemus, & converſi paramus illi, quo in temperamento ſuo æquali retineatur: eodem prorſus modo in iis quæ ad mores ſpectant agimus, exem. gr. ſi videmus quempiam ita animo affectum ut genium ſuum fraudet, quod unum eſt è vitiis animæ & actio ex earum numero quæ improborum propriæ ſunt, uti hoc ipſo Cap. oſtendimus, cùm morbo iſti mederi volumus, non præcipimus ei liberalitatem, hoc enim inſtar ejus eſſet qui illi in quo calor modum excedit, re aliqua medii temperamenti mederi vellet; quod ipſum morbo ſuo neutiquam liberaret; verum ita conſtitui debet iſte, ut iterum atque iterum prodige agat, imò prodigalitatis opera crebriùs frequentet, donec affectus ille qui ipſum ad nimiam parſimoniam adigit, ab animo ejus receſſerit, ac penè prodigalitatis affectum induerit, vel proximè ſaltem ad eum acceſſerit; tum autem operibus prodigalitatis ipſi interdicentes præcipiemus ut liberalitatis opera conſtanter exerceat, eáque perpetuo præſtet, nec modum excedens, nec præparce agens. Eodem modo ubi viderimus aliquem opes prodigè effundentem, illi præcipiemus ut avaritiæ opera præſtet cáque repetat, neque tamen ipſi frequentem operum avaritiæ iterationem præcipiemus, ut alteri iſti opera prodigalitatis ſæpius exercenda injunximus. Subeſt enim hîc aliquid argutius, quod medicinæ [hujus] Canon & myſterium eſt, ſcil. Facilius patrabiliúſque eſſe, ut quis à prodigalitate ad liberalitatem revertatur, quam ut avaritia ad liberalitatem redeat. Eodémque modo ut qui nullo voluptatum ſenſu tangitur temperans evadat, quam qui cupiditatibus indulget, ideóque magis frequentare jubebimus intemperantem opera ejus qui nullo voluptatum ſenſu tangitur, quam ἀναίδηλον iſtum opera intemperantis, atque ita injungemus meticuloſo audaciam, magis quam audaci, timiditatem; & ſordidum ad prodigentiam magis inſtituemus, quam profuſum ad ſordidam parſimoniam: atque hic Canon eſt medicinæ morum quem obſerves velim: atque hanc ob rationem non ſolebant [viri virtute] præſtantes animi ſui affectus ita ordinare ut in medio prorſus ſtatu eſſent, ſed aliquantulum ad exceſſum aut defectum inclinarent cautelæ gratiâ, ex. gr. à temperantia ad ἀναίδηειαν voluptatum, & à fortitudine temeritatem verſus, & à magnificentia aliquantillum verſus prodigentiam & ab humilitate aliquantillum verſus ſui vilitatem: eodémque modo in reliquis, atque hoc innuitur dicto ipſorum, Infra menſuram juris. Quod ad ea etiam quæ aliquando fecerunt virtute præſtantes nonnulli inclinando ad alterum extremum; dum ſcil. jejunando ſe macerarent, noctu ſurgerent, ab eſu carnis, viníque potu, mulierúmque conſortio abſtinerent, veſtes laneas & cilicinas induerent, montes incolerent, longéque ſe in deſerta ſubducerent, non aliam ob cauſam ex his quicquam factitârunt, quàm Medicinæ, uti diximus, gratiâ, & propter corruptos urbes incolentium mores; cùm viderent ſe, familiaritate ipſorum utendo, factáque videndo, corruptum iri; timeréntque ne à conſortio ipſorum mores ſuos contagio pervaderet; quare ſe ab ipſis ſubduxerunt in deſerta & [loca] ubi nemo repevis inſcius, ea quæ malorum propria ſunt, & ad extremorum alterum relicto prorſus medio pertinget. Eſt autem ſapientibus, in hunc ſenſum, dictum quo non aliud magis mirum [ad aures] meas unquam pervenit, quod habetur in [q] Gemara Occidentalium, Capite nono Nedarim, ubi vituperantes illos, qui ſe juramentis & votis obſtringunt, adeò ut captivorum inſtar ſint, hæc habent verba, Rab. Adai nomine Rab. Iſaac, Annon ſufficit tibi illud quod illicitum fecit lex, niſi & ipſe alia tibi illicita feceris? quæ ipſiſſima eſt, quam commemoravimus, ſententia, ſine additione aut diminutione. Ex omnibus autem quæ hoc Capite jam dicta ſunt conſtat, actiones medias ſectandas eſſe, nec ab iis ad alterutrum duorum extremorum, præterquam medicinæ gratiâ, & ut contrario occurratur, deflectendum. Et quemadmodum medicinæ peritus aliquis, ubi temperamentum ſuum vel aliquantillum immutatum eſſe viderit, nequaquam illud negliget, aut morbum invaleſcere ſinet, donec medicamento admodum forti opus habeat; aut ſi noverit aliquod corporis ſui membrum imbecillius eſſe, illud ſemper tuebitur, ea quæ illi noceant fugiendo, & quæ illi proſint ſectando, donec ad ſanitatem redeat, aut ſaltem non magis infirmetur: ita & virum perfectum mores ſuos aſſiduè ad examen revocare decet, viáſque ſuas perpendere, atque in animi ſui inclinationem quotidiè inquirere, & quotieſcunque ipſum ad aliquod extremum propendere viderit, quam primùm medelam adhibere, ne diſpoſitiones pravas malarum actionum iteratione confirmari ſinat, quemadmodum diximus: eodémque modo ſibi ob oculos quoſcunque mores vitioſos apud ſe [repererit] ſtatuens, eos aſſiduè curare fataget, uti præmiſimus; cùm fieri non poſſit, quin ſit homo vitiis obnoxius. Ita dixerunt Philoſophi, difficile, aut vix poſſibile, eſſe ut reperiatur qui naturâ comparatus ſit ad omnes virtutes, tam morales quàm intellectuales; quin & prophetarum libri multa habent eódem [ſpectantia:] Dixit enim, [r] Ecce in ſervis ſuis non ponit ſtabilitatem, &c. et, Num juſtificabitur natus muliere, &c? [ita] & Salomo de homine in genere dixit, Non eſt homo juſtus in terrâ, qui faciat bonum & non peccet. Nôſti etiam Domino priorum & poſteriorum Moſi Doctori noſtro dixiſſe Deum excelſum, Quoniam non credidiſtis mihi, &c. quia rebellâſtis dum non ſanctificaveritis, &c. Hoc totum, cùm culpa ejus eſſet, quòd inclinaverit verſùs unum duorum extremorum à virtute quadam morali, ſcil. Manſuetudine, dum ad iracundiam propenderet, dicendo, Auſcultate, quæſo, rebelles, ſeverè illi imputavit, quòd iſtiuſmodi vir ad iracundiam, coram toto Iſraelitarum cœtu, ibi moveretur ubi iraſci non decuit, cujuſmodi factum reſpectu talis viri profanatio erat nominis divini, cùm omnes ejus geſtus & verba imitarentur [homines,] iíſque ſe ad felicitatem tum temporalem tum æternam perventuros ſperarent. Quomodo ergò appareret in illo iracundia, quæ (uti oſtendimus) eſt ex actionibus malorum [propriis,] nec aliunde quàm è pravis animi diſpoſitionibus oritur? Quod autem de [facto] iſto dicit, Rebellâſtis in me, hoc eâ, quam explicaturi ſumus, ratione [intelligendum] eſt; ſcil. quòd non idiotas aut virtutis expertes alloqueretur, verùm populum ita comparatum ut vel contemptiſſima fœmina eſſet inſtar Ezekielis f. Buzi, prout locuti ſunt Sapientes, qui omnia quæ diceret aut faceret perpenderent; qui ergò ipſum facilè ad iram provocari videntes dicerent, Non eſt ille, c. p. ex iis in quibus vitium aliquod morale reperitur, niſi ergò Deum nobis iraſci ſciret ideò quòd aquam petierimus, nóſque ad furorem Dominum provocâſſe, haudquaquam iracundiâ commotus fuiſſet, cùm tamen non inveniamus ipſum [Deum, ſc.] dum cum illo hac de re ſermonem habuit, furorem vel iram præ ſe tuliſſe, verùm hoc tantum dixiſſe, Sume baculum, &c. &, bibendum præbe cœtui, & jumentis ipſorum. Verùm digreſſi ſumus à Capitis hujus ſcopo, ita tamen, ut unum ſolverimus ex iis quæ in lege occurrunt dubiis, de quo multum diſſeritur ac diſputatur, quodnam, ſc. peccatum commiſerit Moſe? Perpende igitur & quid nos dixerimus, & quid dici de eo [ſoleat.] Veritas ſibi viam parabit. Ut autem ad inſtitutum meum revertar, Cùm quis perpetuò facta ſua trutinet, & quæ in medio poſita ſunt ſectetur, futurus eſt in ſummo eorum quæ in hominem cadunt gradu, eadémque ratione ad Deum quàm proximè accedet, ac præmium apud ipſum repoſitum accipiet; atque hic eſt perfectiſſimus cultûs [divini] modus. Quam ſententiam commemorârunt etiam Sapientes, ac literis conſignârunt, dicentes, Quicunque diſponit vias ſuas, dignus cenſebitur qui videat ſalutem Domini, ſicut dictum eſt; [s] Et qui diſponit viam ſuam, oſtendam ei ſalutem Dei. Ne legas [inquiunt] veſam derec [& diſponens viam] ſed Sham [ſcil. à Shum Rabbinorum.] Shumma autem eſt æſtimatio & conjectura. Atque hæc eadem prorſus eſt, quam per totum hoc Cap. explicavimus, ſententia; atque hoc ſumma eſt eorum quæ ad ſcopum hunc neceſſaria putavimus.

Oportet hominem omnes animæ ſuæ facultates juxta conſilii præſcriptum ſubjugare, prout Cap. præcedente præmiſimus, ſibíque ante oculos unum ſemper finem ſtatuere, hunc nempe, ut apprehendat Deum Omnip. Interim verò, juxta hanc regulam, non ſectabitur voluptatem tantùm, adeò ut in cibo & potu quod jucundiſſimum eſt eligat, ut nec in reliquo ſui regimine, verùm illud quod utiliſſimum eſt appetet, quod ſive contigerit ſimul jucundum eſſe, ſive ingratum, perinde eſt; aut ſaltem illud quod jucundiſſimum eſt reſpectu quodam medico, appetet; ut ſi cùm langueat ipſi appetitus cibi, eum cibis deſiderabilibus, jucundis, dulcibus excitet: ſimiliter ut ſi ebullierit in ipſo humor melancholicus, eum auditu cantûs & diverſis verſis melodiæ generibus, ſive hortorum & ædificiorum elegantium conſpectu oblectando, formíſque pulchris aſſidendo, aliiſque ejuſmodi rebus, quibus delectetur animus, & tollantur ex eo cogitationes quas ſuggerit melancholia, in quibus omnibus erit illi ſcopus, corpus ſuum ſanum conſervare; corpus autem ideò ſanum conſervare, ut ſcientiam acquirere valeat. Eodem modo cùm acquirendis opibus operam ac ſtudium impendat, eum ad finem in iis congerendis collimabit, ut in res præſtantes eaſdem eroget, & ad corporis ſui ſuſtentationem, ac conſervationem diuturniorem, paratas habeat, quò de Deo quicquid ſciri poſſit perceptum ac cognitum habeat. Ac juxta hanc regulam magnus erit artis medicæ in virtutis ſtudio, cognitione Dei, veráque felicitate aſſequenda uſus, ſtudiúmque ejus è præcipuis cultûs partibus, neque jam inſtar texturæ, aut architecturæ erit, cùm eâ actiones noſtras metiamur, ut ſint humanæ naturæ [conſentaneæ,] & ad virtutes veras perducant. Si enim temerè quis comedat cibum, palato dulcem, odoris boni, gratum, qui [interim] inſalubris & noxius ſit, adeò ut ſæpè morbi gravis, aut mortis ſubitaneæ cauſa ſit; hic ſanè beſtiarum inſtar cenſendus eſt: neque hæc hominis, quâ homo, actio eſt, ſed quâ animal aſſimilatum beſtiis quæ pereunt: verùm tum demum actio hominis propria erit, cùm illud tantum quod ſaluberrimum eſt ſumſerit, illo quod jucundiſſimum relicto, adeò ut quod minus gratum eſt comedat, dum quod utilius eſt quærat: atque hæc eſt actio ex conſilii præſcripto, quo ſolo in actionibus ſuis ab aliis [animalibus] diſtinguitur homo. Eodem modo ſi quis Venere utatur quotieſcunque ejus deſiderio tangatur, nullâ damni aut commodi ratione habitâ, hæc ejus actio eſt quâ animal, non quâ homo. Fieri autem poteſt ut in ſui regimine, illud quod maximè utile eſt, uti diximus, ſectetur, ita tamen ut ſibi interim finem ſtatuat ſolam corporis ſanitatem, atque à morbis immunitatem. Sed neque hic interim virtute præditus eſt, quoniam ſicut hic bonæ valetudinis, ita & alter cibi aut Veneris ſuavitatem prætulit, quorum neutrum verus eſt actionum finis. Recta ergò methodus hæc eſt, ut omnium operationum ſuarum finem ſtatuat, corpus ſuum ſanum & integrum conſervare, quò inſtrumenta facultatum animæ, quæ ſunt corporis membra, integra ipſi permaneant, atque hoc pacto anima ipſius ſine ullo impedimento in virtutibus moralibus & intellectualibus excercere ſe poſſit: ſimiliter de omnibus, quas addiſcit, ſcientiis & diſciplinis, quibus ad iſtum finem tenditur, nulla eſt controverſia. Quod etiam ad eas in quibus nihil eſt quod ad iſtum finem conferat, e. g. que modo quod ad omnes hominis ſermones, non aliud loqui decet, quàm quo aut ſibi utilitatem aliquam afferat, aut malum aliquod ab anima ſua vel corpore repellat, aut quod ad ſcientiam aliquam, vel virtutem aliquam, vel virtutis alicujus, aut viri virtute præſtantis, laudem, vel vitii aut vitioſorum vituperium ſpectet. Sugillatio enim vitiis deditorum & viarum ipſorum vituperatio, ſi eò tendat ut eos apud homines in contemptum adducat, quo ab ipſis caveant, neque facta ipſorum imitentur, neceſſaria eſt, & virtus. An non vides quid dixerit Deus, [t] Inſtar factorum Ægypti, &c. &, Inſtar factorum terræ Canaan, & quomodo deſcribat Sodomæos? Quicquid enim occurrit in Scriptura, [vel] ad hominum ſceleratorum contumeliam & vituperium ab ipſis factorum, vel ad laudem ac commendationem bonorum ſpectans, illud ad eum quem dixi finem tendit, viz. ut ſequantur homines horum viam, illorum fugiant. Cúmque hujuſmodi ſcopum ſibi propoſuerit homo, multa admodum eorum quæ facere ſolet omittet, verbáque ſua diminuet. Quiſquis enim ad hunc ſcopum tendit, non in illud incumbet ut parietes auro ornet, aut veſti auream fimbriam aſſuat, niſi eo forſitan fine ut animum ſuum recreet, quo ſanum eum conſervet, aut ab ipſo ægritudinem repellat, adeò ut terſus ac mundus ſit ad recipiendas ſcientias, juxta illud ipſorum dictorum, Domus pulchra, mulier pulchra, & lectus mollis, diſcipulis Sapientum [conveniunt:] quia, ſcil. mens continuâ rerum difficilium contemplatione obtunditur, atque hebeſcit, non ſecus ac delaſſatur corpus labores difficiles tolerando, donec, poſtquam conſederit ac quieverit, ad temperiem ſuam redeat: Ita opus eſt etiam ut requieſcat animus & ſenſibus recreandis operam det, picturis puta, rebúſque pulchris contemplandis, quò tollatur ab eo hebetudo, quemadmodum dixerunt, Ubi laſſati fuerint Doctores noſtri ſtudendo, locuti ſunt verba hilaritatis, adeò ut penè hac ex parte, non ſint iſta in genere malorum, neque actionibus nihili accenſenda: ſcil. ut quis ædificiis, vaſis, aut veſtibus opere variegato & picturâ ornandis, operam det. Scias autem hunc gradum altum admodum & arduum eſſe, adeò ut cùm occurrerit quis qui ita ſe habeat, non dicam eum eſſe infra prophetarum gradum, qui, ſcil. omnes animæ ſuæ facultates moderetur, earúmque finem Deum ſolum ſtatuat, neque opus aliquod, ſive magnum ſive parvum, præſtet, aut verbum proferat, aliter quàm ut factum illud aut verbum ad virtutem aliquam, aut ad illud quod ad virtutem tendit, perducat, idémque cogitet ac deliberet in omni actione & motu, ut videat num ad iſtum finem perducat nécne, ac tum demum illud faciat. Atque hoc eſt quod requirit à nobis Deus, ut ei ſtudeamus, eo ipſius dicto, [u] Et amabis Dominum tuum toto corde tuo, & totâ animâ tuâ, & totis viribus tuis, i. e. omnibus animæ tuæ partibus, ut uniuſcujuſque partium ejus unum ſtatuas finem, viz. amare Dominum. Quinetiam ad hunc ſcopum [appetendum] incitârunt prophetæ. Ita dicit, [x] In omnibus viis tuis cognoſce ipſum, &c. Quod explicantes Sapientes dixerunt, Etiamſi in re [cui ineſt] tranſgreſſio:

greſſio: Nempe ut & iſtius actionis finem ad veritatem dirigas, etiamſi fuerit in ea aliqua ex parte tranſgreſſio. Complexi ſunt autem Sapientes, q. p. hanc ſententiam quàm pauciſſimis fieri poteſt verbis; totum interim ſenſum, quàm perfectiſſimè exhibentes, adeò ut cùm conſideraveris quomodo verba iſta tanta cum brevitate ſenſum iſtum largum & amplum, totum exhibeant, quem libri integri de eo compoſiti non abſolverunt, ſcias [dictum] iſtud abſque dubio, inſpiratione divinâ prolatum. Eſt autem dictum iſtud è præceptis ab ipſis hoc in Tractatu traditis, ſcil. Et omnia opera tua facias propter Deum. Eâdem planè ſententiâ quam hoc Capite explicavimus. Atque hæc eſt ſumma eorum quæ viſum eſt nobis hîc recenſere, pro harum præfationum ratione.

Caput ſextum, De differentia inter virtute præſtantem, & eum qui ſe continet, [ſeu, Temperantem & Continentem.]

Dicunt Philoſophi, illum qui ſe continet, etiamſi edat actiones præſtantes, ita tamen ipſum facere bona ut interim deſiderio feratur ad opera mala, eáque appetat, contendat licet cum cupiditate ſua, & contraria faciat illis ad quæ ipſum impetus ſuus ac deſiderium animíque affectus incitent, adeò ut dum faciat bona iis faciendis affligatur. Virtute autem imbutum in agendo ſectari illud ad quod incitetur, deſiderio & affectu ſuo, eaque quæ faciat bona appetere, & cupere. Communi autem Philoſophorum conſenſu virtute præſtans excellentior & perfectior eſt eo qui ſe continet: Fieri tamen (inquiunt) poteſt ut qui ſe continet virtute præſtantis multis in rebus locum occupet, cùm tamen gradu neceſſario ipſi inferior ſit, eò quòd deſiderio feratur ad malum faciendum. Quamvis enim illud non fecerit, deſiderium tamen quo ad ipſum propendet, prava eſt in anima diſpoſitio. Habet autem Salomo quæ huc ſpectant, dum dicit, [y] Anima perverſa deſiderat malum. Déque gaudio, quo afficitur virtute præſtans dum facit bona, & dolore, quem concipit qui non eſt virtute imbutus, hoc protulit dictum, [z] Lætitia eſt juſto facere judicium, at contritio facientibus iniquitatem. Atque hoc quod manifeſtum eſt è verbis Legis ei quod dixerunt Philoſophi conſonum eſt. Quòd ſi inquiramus in verba Sapientum huc ſpectantia, reperiemus ipſos [affirmare,] Illum qui deſiderio ad peccata fertur eáque appetit, præſtantiorem ac perfectiorem eſſe illo qui nullo eorum deſiderio tangitur, neque quòd ea relinquere debeat dolore afficitur, adeo ut dixerint, quo quis præſtantior ſit & perfectior, eo majori cupiditate ad illicita ferri, & majori dolore affici quòd ea vitare debeat: quam in ſententiam attulerunt & apophthegmata quædam, dicentes, Quicunque major eſt ſocio ſuo, ejus etiam concupiſcentia major eſt. Neque hoc contenti addiderunt, mercedem ejus qui ſe continet magnam eſſe juxta dolorem quo afficitur in ſe continendo, dicentes, Secundùm moleſtiam, merces. Imo & hoc majus eſt quod homini præceperunt ut ſe contineat, vetantes dicere, Ego naturâ meâ haudquaquam deſiderio in hanc tranſgreſſionem propendeo, etiamſi ipſam non pronuntiâſſet lex illicitam; atque hoc eſt quod dixerunt, Rabban Simeon fil. Gamal: dicit, Ne dicat homo non eſt mihi voluntas edere carnem cum lacte, non eſt voluntas voluntas mihi induere veſtem heterogeneam, non eſt voluntas mihi rem habere cum Conſanguineâ; verùm voluntas mihi eſt, at quid faciam cùm pater meus qui in cœlis eſt contra ſtatuerit? Jam, juxta ſenſum apparentem verborum primo intuitu videntur duæ iſtæ ſententiæ contrariæ, at non ita ſe res habet, verùm utraque vera eſt nullâ inter eas penitus diſcrepantiâ, ídque quia illa apud Philoſophos mala de quibus dixerunt quòd qui ea non cupiat præſtantior ſit cupiente, licet ſe ab illis contineat, iſtiuſmodi ſunt quæ apud omnes homines in confeſſo eſt mala eſſe, qualia ſunt effuſio ſanguinis, furtum, ira, metus, damnum inferre ei qui nullum fecerit malum, benefacienti malum rependere, contemptus parentum, & his ſimilia; atque hæc ſunt præcepta quæ appellant Sapientes, quibus pax, Res quæ ſi non eſſent ſcriptæ, oporteret ſcribi; quæque nominant quidam doctorum noſtrorum recentiorum, qui Scholaſticorum morbo infecti ſunt, Præcepta intelligibilia; nec dubium eſt quin anima quæ hujuſmodi rem aliquam appetat, & deſiderio ejus moveatur, anima ſit defectu laborans, & animam virtute imbutam nullam prorſus harum rerum appetituram, neque dolore affectum iri quòd ab iis arceatur. Illa vero de quibus dicunt Sapientes quòd qui ſe ab iis continet præſtantior ſit, ejuſque præmium majus, præcepta ſunt ab auditu pendentia, de quibus quod dicunt verum eſt. Utpote quæ niſi ob legem [intervenientem] nullo prorſus modo mala eſſent habenda. Atque de hujuſmodi [rebus] eſt quod dicunt Sapientes, oportere hominem ut permittat ſibi illa amare, nec aliud ſibi quo ab illis cohibeatur ſtatuat, præter legem. Animadverte autem ſapientiam eorum, quibus pax, & unde exemplum ſumpſerint: neque enim dicit, Ne dicas, Non eſt voluntas mea occidere hominem, non eſt voluntas mea furari, non eſt voluntas mea mentiri, verùm voluntas mea eſt, at quid faciam, &c. ſed quæ recenſuit omnia [è] præceptis ſunt quæ ab auditu pendent; [viz.] caro cum lacte, veſtes heterogeneæ, & fæminæ ob conſanguinitatem prohibitæ. Atque hæc aliáque ejuſmodi præcepta ea ſunt quæ vocat Deus Chukkothai, ſtatuta mea, Decreta (inquiunt) quæ decrevi tibi, nec licet tibi de iis ſcrupulum movere, cùm gentes mundi contra ipſa objiciant, & Satan accuſet ea; qualia ſunt Vacca rufa, & hircus ἀποπομπαῖος, &c. Ea verò quæ vocant poſteriores Intellectualia, vocantur Mitzvoth, quemadmodum explicârunt Sapientes. Ex his ergò quæ diximus omnibus patet quænam ſint tranſgreſſiones illæ quas qui non appetit præſtantior eſt eo qui, cùm eas appetit, ſe ab iis continet, & in quibus ſe res contrà habeat. Hic autem articulus eſt non vulgaris, & qui duas ſententias miro modo inter ſe conciliat; expreſſa autem duarum ſententiarum verba explicationis noſtræ veritatem oſtendunt, atque hîc abſolutum eſt, quod in hoc Capite propoſitum fuit.

[y] Prov. xxi. 10. [z] Ibid. ver. 15.

Caput ſeptimum, De velo, ejúſque ſignificatione. Frequenter occurit in Midraſhoth, & Haggadoth, nec non aliquando in Talmude, fuiſſe ex Prophetis quoſdam qui Deum ponè vela multa, & alios qui ponè vela pauca viderent, juxta propinquitatis ſuæ ad Deum, & celſioris prophetiæ gradûs rationem, adeò ut dixerint Moſen Doctorem noſtrum vidiſſe Dominum ponè velum unicum terſum, i. e. pellucidum, atque hoc eſt quod dicunt, Vidit in ſpeculari quod oculos illuminat.

[Deum]

[a] Iſa. lix. 2.

[Deum] vidiſſe. Neque negari poteſt quorundam morum defectum gradum prophetiæ diminuere, cùm invenerimus quædam vitia moralia ipſam penitus tollere, veluti Iracundiam. Dicunt, Quicunque iraſcitur, ſi propheta fuerit, tollitur ab ipſo prophetia ipſius: quod confirmârunt exemplo Eliſhæ, qui cùm irâ excandeſceret viſione propheticâ privatus eſt, donec eandem depoſuiſſet: hoc eſt, quod ipſe dixit, Nunc autem ſumite mihi fidicinem, &c. nec non anxietatem & triſtitiam. Quamdiu enim mœrore affectus eſt Jacobus pater noſter ob Joſephum filium ſuum, ſublatus eſt ab eo Spiritus Sanctus, donec lætum vitæ ejus nuntium ipſi afferretur. [b] Et vixit (inquit) Spiritus Jacobi patris ipſorum: ubi dicit Targum (quod explicat ſententias à Moſe per traditionem acceptas) Et reſedit ſpiritus prophetiæ ſuper Jacobum patrem ipſorum. Dictum etiam eſt Sapientûm, Non habitat prophetia vel cum pigritia, vel cum triſtitia, ſed cum re gaudii [cauſâ.] Cùm autem nôſſet Moſes Doctor noſter, non ſupereſſe ſibi velum quod non dirumperetur, & perfectas in ſe eſſe omnes virtutes tam morales quàm intellectuales, petiit ut Deum ſecundum veritatem eſſentiæ ſuæ, cùm nullum jam ſupereſſet impedimentum, apprehenderet, dicens, [c] Oſtendas mihi, quæſo, gloriam tuam; Docuit autem ipſum Dominus, fieri hoc non poſſe, cùm eſſet ipſe intellectus in materia exiſtens, i. in quantum homo eſſet; atque hoc eſt quod dicit, Quia non videbit me homo & vivet. Non reſtabat ergò inter ipſum & apprehenſionem Dei ſecundùm veritatem eſſentiæ ſuæ aliud quàm velum unicum pellucidum, quod erat intellectus humanus, nondum ſeparatus; gratiam tamen illi faciens Deus, indulſit illi poſt petitionem iſtam clariorem ſui apprehenſionem quàm illi antequam petiiſſet fuerat; docens interim illum, ad ſummum gradum ab ipſo perveniri non poſſe quamdiu corpore indutus maneret. Veram autem apprehenſionem, viſionem faciei, appellavit. Cùm enim viderit quis faciem amici ſui, imprimetur ipſi in animo forma quâ cum alio non confundetur. Quòd ſi ipſum à tergo viderit, licèt illum [ope] iſtius viſionis aliquatenùs dignoſcat, non tamen ſine omni dubio, adeo ut apud ipſum cum aliis adhuc confundatur: ita apprehenſio Dei ſecundùm veritatem eſt ut concipiatur de veritate eſſentiæ ejus in animo aliquid quod non ſit rei cuipiam alii cum ipſo, [reſpectu] iſtius eſſentiæ, commune, adeo ut inveniat in animo ſuo eſſentiam iſtam firmam, diſtinctam ab eo quod in animo ſuo de eſſentia rerum aliarum conceperit. Non eſt autem poſſibile ut eò pertingat apprehenſio humana. Moſes verò apprehendit quod parum admodum infra hoc eſſet; illud nempe quod deſcribit dicens, Videbis poſteriora mea. Pleniùs autem de hac re acturi ſumus in Libro de Prophetia. Cùm ergò ſcirent Sapientes, quibus pax, has duas vitiorum ſpecies, ſcil. Intellectualium & moralium, ea eſſe quæ veli vicem inter hominem & Deum præſtent, earúmque reſpectu Prophetarum alii aliis gradu ſuperiores eſſent, dixerunt de quibuſdam ipſorum, ob illud quod de ſcientia & moribus ipſorum perſpectum habuerunt, Dignos fuiſſe ipſos ſuper quos reſideret majeſtas divina, æquè ac ſuper Moſen Doctorem noſtrum. Non autem te fugiat ſignificatio comparationis: comparârunt enim ipſos sos cum illo; non tamen ita ut æquales eos illi ſtatuerent. (Abſit.) Similiter dixerunt de aliis, ut, Æquè ac ſuper Joſuam, eo quo diximus modo. Atque hoc eſt quod in hoc Capite explicandum propoſuimus.

Caput octavum. De indole humana.

Fieri non poteſt ut producatur homo ab ortu ſuo naturâ vel virtute vel vitio præditus; uti neque poſſibile eſt ut producatur naturâ artis alicujus practicæ peritus; hoc autem fieri poteſt, ut producatur aptus natus ſive ad virtutem aliquam ſive vitium, adeo ut actiones ad ea ſpectantes faciliores ipſi ſint quàm quæ ad alia. Exempli gratiâ, ſi fuerit quis temperamenti ad ſiccitatem vergentis, cui ſubſtantia cerebri ſit defæcata non adeo humida, huic facilius erit res memoriâ tenere, & earum ſenſus percipere, quàm phlegmatico cuipiam cui cerebrum eſt valdè humidum: quòd ſi relictus fuerit ille temperamento ſuo ad virtutem iſtam diſpoſitus abſque ulla omnino diſciplina, neque excitetur illa [quâ præditus eſt] facultas, manſurus eſt ſine dubio ſtultus; eodémque modo, ſi inſtitutus fuerit, & ad intelligendum eruditus, alter iſte naturâ hebetior humiditate abundans, diſcet ille, & intelliget, quamvis non ſine difficultate & labore: eodem prorſus modo, ſi cui fuerit temperamentum cordis æquo aliquantum calidius, erit ille fortis, hoc eſt, ad fortitudinem diſpoſitus, adeò ut, ſi fortitudinem edoctus fuerit, facilè fortis evadet. Alius autem, cui temperamentum cordis juſto frigidius, diſpoſitus erit ad timiditatem, & metum, eáque ſi didicerit iíſque aſſuefactus fuerit facilè imbibet. Quòd ſi ad fortitudinem inſtitutus fuerit, non ſine difficultate aliqua fortis evadet, longo tamen uſu proculdubio & talis evaſurus eſt. Hoc autem ideo tibi declaravi, ne futilia iſta, quæ falſo comminiſcuntur Aſtrologi, pro veris habeas, cùm à nativitatibus ſuis homines virtute aut vitio præditos conſtitui aſſerant, eóſque ad actiones iſtas neceſſariò & vi adigi. Verùm ſcias rem in quam conſentiunt & Lex noſtra, & Græcorum Philoſophia, veríſque probationibus confirmatam, eſſe, hominis actiones omnes in ipſius poteſtatem traditas eſſe, ſine ulla omnino ad eas coactione, neque eſſe exterius aliquod impellens, quod ipſum ad virtutem aut vitium inflectat, præter unam temperaturæ diſpoſitionem, (ſicut oſtenſum eſt) quâ fit ut res illi facilior ſit aut difficilior: verùm ut neceſſaria illi fiat, aut impoſſibilis, hoc nullo pacto [concedendum.] Quòd ſi homo actiones ſuas coactus ederet, ceſſarent jam præcepta & prohibitiones legales: eſſéntque ea omnia penitùs fruſtranea, cùm nulla ſupereſſet homini in eo quod agit electio. Indè etiam ſequeretur fruſtra eſſe eruditioni & inſtitutioni operam dare, artéſve ullas practicas addiſcere: quaſi hæc omnia nullius eſſent uſûs, cùm fieri non poſſit, quin homo ob illud quod exterius ipſum incitat, juxta ſententiam eorum qui ita putant, iſtiuſmodi actionem præſtet, aut iſtiuſmodi ſcientiam addiſcat, aut iſtiuſmodi moribus imbuatur. Eandémque ob rationem nihil aliud eſſent præmium & pœna, quàm injuria manifeſta, ſive à noſtrûm aliis ad alios, ſive à Deo ad nos [provenirent.] Cùm enim Simeon qui Rubenem occiderit, vi coactus & adactus fuerit, hic ut occidat, iſte ut occidatur, quare punietur Simeon? & quomodo Deo, qui juſtus & rectus eſt, conveniet de ipſo pœnas ſumere ob rem ſibi factu neceſſariam, quámque non potuit non facere, etiamſi ſtuduiſſet ne faceret? Quin & fruſtranea penitùs reddentur quæ ab hominibus parantur omnia, dum domos extruunt, victum parant, cùm periculi metus ſit fugiunt, &c. quoniam quod decretum eſt ut ſit, fieri non poteſt quin ſit. Hoc autem totum impoſſibile & abſolutè falſum eſt, quódque & intellectui & ſenſui contradicit, legíſque maceriam diruit, & in Deo injuſtitiam ſtatuit, à quâ ille quàm longiſſimè abeſt. Veritas autem, de qua nullum eſt dubium, eſt, actiones hominis omnes penès ipſum eſſe, adeò ut ſi velit faciat, ſi velit omittat, ſine coactione aut vi, quâ ad illud adigatur, ideòque expedire, ut ei præcepta imponantur; dicit [ergò,] [d] Ecce poſui coram te hodiè vitam & bonum, mortem & malum, ut eligas vitam, nobis in hoc ipſo electionem permittens; pœnámque impoſuit ei qui contrà fecerit, præmium ei qui obedierit. Si auſcultaveritis (inquit) &, ſi non auſcultaveritis: injunxit etiam tum docere tum diſcere, [e] Et docebitis ea etiam liberos veſtros, &c. &, Diſcetis ea, & obſervabitis facere: cum cæteris omnibus quæ jubent præcepta, & docere, & iis aſſuefacere. Quin & apparatus omnes, qui cautelæ gratiâ fiunt, injunxit, uti in libro veridico diſertè dixit. [f] Et facies loricam; ne decidat quis: &, [g] Ne fortè moriatur in prælio: [h] in quo cubabit: non accipiet pignora, metam & catillam [i] perquàm multa autem reperiuntur in Lege, & in libris Prophetarum huc ſpectantia, ſcil. ad majoris cautelæ gratiâ apparatus faciendos. Quod autem ad ſententiam illam quæ apud Sapientes habetur, dictum, ſcil. ipſorum, Omnia ſunt in manu Dei excepto timore Dei: eſt illa certè vera, & eódem tendit quò ea quæ diximus, niſi quòd multum in ea [interpretenda,] errent homines, exiſtimantes [hominem] ad quædam è factis ſuis quæ ſub electione cadunt, vi adigi, v. g. ut hanc talem in uxorem ducat, aut ſint hæ opes in manu ipſius; quod minimè verum eſt, nam ſi mulierem iſtam libello contractûs & ſponſalibus acceperit, eſt ea ipſi licita, eámque duxit ad creſcendum & multiplicandum, quod eſt præceptum. Deus autem non decrevit ut faciat quis præceptum: quòd ſi ſequius factum fuerit aliquid in eâ ducendâ, eſt illud tranſgreſſio. Deus autem non decrevit ut fiat tranſgreſſio; ſimiliter, qui rapinâ aut furto opes alterius abſtulerit, aut eas fraude detentas abneget, & falſò illi ob eas juret, ſi dixerimus decreviſſe Deum de iſto ut in manus ipſius pervenirent opes iſtæ, aut è manu alterius iſtius elaberentur, jam tranſgreſſionem decreto ſtabilierit: at non ita ſe res habet, verùm in omnibus hominis actionibus quæ ſub electione cadunt, eſt ſine dubio Obedientia & Tranſgreſſio. Jam enim explicavimus, c. 2. præcepta & interdicta legalia eſſe de factis in quibus homini eſt electio ut faciat ea vel non faciat. Atque in iſta parte animæ eſt Timor Domini, nec eſt in manu Dei, ſed permiſſa libero hominis arbitrio, uti explicatum. Eo ergò quod dicunt Haccol, Omnia, volunt res naturales in quibus non eſt homini liberum arbitrium:

hoc vel illo individuo, ut dicere poſſit de ſe decretum fuiſſe, verum generaliter affirmantur; ita ut permittatur unuſquiſque arbitrio ſuo, prout à natura comparatus eſt: atque ita unicuique Ægyptiorum, qui eos oppreſſerunt, & injuriâ affecerunt, ſi voluiſſet injuriâ illos non afficere, fuit equidem ipſi quod ad illud electio, quoniam non erat de individuo aliquo decretum ut injuriam faceret. Atque idem hoc reſponſum quadrabit [& alteri illi loco,] Ecce tu cubabis cum patribus tuis, & ſurgens populus iſte fornicabitur poſt Deos terræ, &c. Nihil enim aliud hoc eſt, quàm ſi dixiſſet, Illis, qui coluerunt Idola, ita faciemus, vel ita eos tractabimus. Nam ſi non eſſet omnino qui tranſgrederetur, fruſtra eſſent minæ, fruſtra etiam meledictiones omnes, nec non & pœnæ quæ in Lege occurrunt. Neque ideò quod judicium lapidationis in Lege invenimus, dicemus iſtum, qui ſabbatum profanaverit, coactum fuiſſe ad illud profanandum; neque ob maledictiones opus eſt ut dicamus illos, qui Idola coluerunt, adeò ut caderent in ipſas maledictiones, coactos fuiſſe ad ea colenda, verùm ſponte ſuâ coluit ea quicunque coluit, & in quem deſcendit pœna. Etiam illi [inquit] elegerunt vias ſuas, &c. ego etiam, &c. Verùm quod ad dictum ejus; [p] Et indurabo cor Pharaonis, &c. poſt quod vindictam de eo ſumpſit, ipſúmque perdidit, eſt in illo ſermoni [dilatando] locus; & ab eodem magnum oritur fundamentum. Perpende ergò quid in hanc ſententiam dicturus ſum, illíque animum appone, cumque omnium qui de eo locuti ſunt dictis conferas, ut tibi quod optimum videtur ſeligas. Hoc autem eſt, ſcil. quòd ſi Pharaoni & aſſeclis ejus non fuiſſet aliàs culpa niſi quòd Iſraelem non dimitterent, eſſet res ſine dubio difficilis; quoniam ipſe [Deus ſcil.] cohibuit illos ne dimitterent, ſicut dixit, [q] Quoniam ego induravi cor ejus, & cor ſervorum ejus, &c. Deinde petiit ab ipſo ut illos dimitteret quos coactus fuit non dimittere, ipſúmque quòd non dimitteret unà cum populo ſuo punivit ac perdidit; quod cùm ſpeciem habet injuſtitiæ, & contradicere [videtur] omnibus à nobis præmiſſis, reſtat dicendum non ita ſe rem habuiſſe, ſed Pharaonem & populum ipſius libero arbitrio ſuo tranſgreſſos fuiſſe ſine ulla omnino vi aut coactione, & peregrinos qui inter ipſos erant, oppreſſiſſe, illíſque injuriam manifeſtam intuliſſe, prout diſertè aſſerit, [r] Et dixit ad populum ſuum, Ecce populus filiorum Iſraelis, &c. Agite, prudenter agamus cum ipſis, &c. Hoc autem factum ab ipſis ſponte ſuâ & malo ipſorum conſilio prodiit, neque ulla ipſis quod ad hoc coactio incubuit: ideóque hæc ipſis à Deo ob illud inflicta eſt pœna, ut ipſos à pœnitentia cohiberet, quò caderet in ipſos pœna juſtitiæ ipſius conſentanea. Illud enim pœna ipſorum, & cohibitio à pœnitentia, fuit ut non dimitterent ipſos. Atque hoc declaravit illi Deus & notum fecit. Quòd ſi illos tantùm educere voluiſſet, ipſum & populum ipſius perdere potuiſſet, ut ita exirent; verùm hoc jam voluit, ut unà dum educeret illos de ipſo, ob injuriam illis antea illatam, pœnas ſumeret, ſicut in principio hiſtoriæ dicit, [s] Atque etiam gentem cui ſervient judicabo ego. Non potuiſſet autem punire ipſos ſi pœnitentiam egiſſent: cohibiti ergò à pœni-

[p] Exod. iv. 21. [q] Ib. x. 1. [r] Ib. i. 9. 10. [s] Gen. xv. 14.

pœnitentia ipsos detinuerunt, sicut dicit, [t] Quia nunc immittam manum meam, &c. Ac certè propter hoc suscitavi te, &c. Neque ad absurdum cogemur, dum dicimus, Deum hoc punire aliquem, ut non resipiscat, neque permittat ipsi liberum arbitrium ad resipiscendum, cùm & Deus peccata noverit, & sapientia & justitia ipsius pœnæ mensuram statuant. Punit autem aliàs in hoc mundo tantùm, aliàs in futuro tantùm, aliàs in utroque simul. Discrepat etiam pœna ejus in hoc mundo, dum aut in corpore, aut facultatibus, aut utrisque simul punit; aut dum aliquem è motibus hominis voluntariis ratione pœnæ tollit. e. g. cùm manum ejus ineptam reddit ad prehendendum, ut fecit in Jeroboamo; aut oculum ipsius ad videndum, ut fecit in Sodomæ incolis qui contra Lotum congregati fuerant: eodem modo tollit etiam ab eo libertatem pœnitentiæ, ne ad eam ullo modo moveatur, sed in peccato suo pereat. Neque opus est nobis ut perspectam habeamus sapientiam ipsius adeò ut sciamus quam ob causam hunc hoc pœnæ genere, non autem alio, afficiat, uti nec scimus quid in causa fuerit ut sit huic speciei hæc forma, non alia. Verùm summa hæc est, quòd Omnes viæ ipsius judicium sint, & de peccatore pœnas juxta mensuram peccati sui sumat, & bene facientem pro ratione bonorum ipsius operum remuneret. Quod si dixeris, Quare ergò illum dimittere Israelem vice post vicem jussit, cùm ab ipso cohibitus esset? Ut nempe descenderent in ipsum plagæ perstante ipso in obduratione sua (sicut diximus hoc punitum fuisse ipsum, ut persisteret in pertinacia sua;) neque enim ab ipso frustra requirendum erat [illud] quod facere non potuit; hoc etiam ipsum fuit à sapientia divina, ut doceret ipsum, potuisse Deum etiam liberum ejus arbitrium cùm vellet tollere. Dicit ergò illi, Requiro ego abs te, ut dimittas illos, & si dimiseris illos, evasurus es, tu autem non dimittes, ut perdaris: oportebat ergò ipsum gratiam illis facere, ut ita manifestò contrairet dicto Prophetæ [affirmantis] ipsum cohibitum fuisse ne illis gratiam faceret, at non potuit. Qua in re miraculum fuit insigne, omnibus conspicuum (sicut dixit, [u] Ut declaretur nomen meum in tota terra) quod puniret Deus hominem impediendo ipsum liberè aliquid facere, cùm ipse illud sciret, nec posset animam suam eripere eámque libertati restituere. Atque eodem prorsus modo se habuit pœna Sihonis Regis Heshbon; nam & ipsum ob rebellionem suam quâ priùs peccaverat non coactus, punivit Deus impediendo ipsum quo minùs Israeli annueret, adeò ut ipsum interficerent: atque hoc est quod dicit, [x] Et noluit Sihon permittere ut transirent per ipsum, quoniam obduraverat Dominus Deus spiritum ejus, &c. Illud autem quod fecit ut hoc difficile videretur omnibus interpretibus, est, quòd putarent Sihonem ideò punitum, quòd non permitteret Israelem transire per regionem ipsius. Dicunt ergò, Qomodo punitur cùm coactus fuerit [ita facere?] sicut putarunt Pharaonem ac populum ipsius ideò punitos fuisse quòd Israelem non dimitterent; Res verò non aliter se habet atque explicavimus, scil. Pharaoni & populo ejus pœnam ob injustitiam ipsorum præcedentem, à Deo inflictam, hoc fuisse ne pœnitentiam agerent, adeò ut in ipsos omnes plagæ istæ descenderent. Et fuisse pœnam Sihonis ob oppressionem & injustitiam fectûs luminis viſûs ad apprehendendam lucem Solis: Neque eſt hoc ob debilitatem lucis Solis, verùm quòd lux iſta fortior ſit luce quæ eam apprehendere vult. Multa autem in hanc ſententiam dixit, quæ omnia perſpicuè vera: ideóque neceſſariò ſequitur etiam, nos non ſcire ſcientiam ejus, neque eam ullatenùs comprehendere, cùm ipſe ſit ſcientia ſua, & ſcientia ſua ipſe. Atque hæc eſt notio rara & mira, quæ cùm ipſos fugeret, perierunt. Nôrunt enim eſſentiam Dei perfectam, quâ in ſe eſt, non poſſe apprehendi. Studuerunt ergò apprehendere ſcientiam ipſius, quò ſub intellectu ipſorum caderet, quod & impoſſibile eſt. Nam ſi comprehenderemus ſcientiam ipſius, comprehenderemus etiam eſſentiam ipſius, cùm utræque res una ſint. Perfecta enim ejus apprehenſio ea eſt, ut apprehendatur ſicut ipſe in ſe eſt, [reſpectu] ſcientiæ, potentiæ, voluntatis, vitæ, aliorúmque ejus attributorum præſtantium. Jam autem explicavimus omnem de apprehendenda ipſius ſcientia cogitationem meram eſſe ſtultitiam, ultra quàm ut ſciamus ipſum ſcire, ſicut ſcimus ipſum eſſe: Si autem interroget [quis,] Quomodo ſe habet ſcientia ipſius? reſpondemus, nos illud non apprehendere, ſicut nec perfectè apprehendimus eſſentiam ipſius. VIſum eſt mihi, antequam hujus ordinis explicationem aggrediar, de Oblationum diviſione, & ſpecierum earum enumeratione ſermonem præmittere. Ad quod faciendum me invitavit, quod licèt ipſarum diviſio res ſit manifeſta totáque diſertis Scripturæ verbis [explicata,] adeò ut non poſſit de eâ quis, ne poſt accuratam ipſius inſpectionem, novi aliquid proferre, res tamen ipſa (Oblationes inquam) ob iniquitates noſtras, quæ multæ ſunt, jam deperdita ſit, ut pauci admodum ei animum advertant, nec ſubinde occurrat alicui, etiamſi adverterit, ejus mentio, cùm nihil jam agatur quod eandem ſæpiùs in memoriam revocari faciat, nec de ea quis penitùs ulla ex parte conſulatur, adeò ut quod ad ipſam eadem ſit doctrinâ præſtantis, & imperiti cujusvis è plebe, ratio, nec de Oblationibus ſciat maxima ſtudioſorum pars, vel ea quæ multis Scripturæ textibus explicantur. Hoc in genere eſt, quòd quæ ex animalibus ſunt Oblationes, è quinque tantùm ipſorum ſpeciebus [deſumantur,] viz. ovibus, bobus, capris, columbis parvis, & turturibus grandioribus. Oblationum autem ſpecies quatuor ſunt, Holocauſtum, Sacrificium pro peccato, pro delicto, pacificorum, aut quod ejuſdem cum eo rationis ſit. Nec ulla omnino in lege noſtra oblatio occurrit, ſive privati alicujus, ſive totius cœtûs, quæ non ſit vel harum quatuor ſpecierum una aliqua, vel è pluribus compoſita. Quod ad Holocauſtum, illud totum igne abſumitur, cujuſcunque tandem generis fuerit, ſive privati alicujus, ſive totius cœtûs Oblatio; neque aliunde deſumitur quàm ex ovibus, bobus, aut capris maſculis. Eſt etiam è turturibus & columbis; in his autem nulla inter marem & fœminam diſcrepantia. Sacrificiorum pro peccato duo ſunt genera, alia, ſc. quorum partes lege præceptæ offeruntur, reliquum verò comedunt in atrio generis Sacerdotalis mares; alia quorum reſiduum etiam crematur, ſicut oſtenſuri ſumus, quæque tam è maſculis quàm è fœminis ſumuntur, ídque ſine diſcrimine, è quinque illis animalium ſpeciebus. Sacrificii pro delicto offeruntur partes lege præſcriptæ, reliquum in atrio comedunt Sacerdotes maſculi, neque aliunde deſumitur quàm ex ovibus maſculis, aliàs grandioribus, aliàs minoribus, quod & explicaturi ſumus. Non eſt autem omnino inter Oblationes cœtûs, oblatio pro delicto, ſed eſt ea ſemper privati oblatio. Pacificorum offeruntur tantùm partes. Quòd ſi privati fuerit oblatio, accipient de ea Sacerdotes pectus & armum, reſiduum comedentibus iis qui obtulerunt qualibet urbis Hieroſolymitanæ parte. Intelligo autem, cùm dico eos qui obtulerunt, licitum eſſe cuilibet Iſraelitæ iis veſci, tam viris quàm fœminis; ſin totius cœtûs oblatio fuerit, reſiduum comedent Sacerdotes in atrio, viz. generis Hieratici mares: neque è volucribus omnino offeretur, ſcil. è columbis & turturibus: ſed è reliquarum trium ſpecierum ſive majoribus, ſive minoribus, ſive maſculis ſive fœminis. Ita & omnes oblationes cœtûs è tribus iſtis ſpeciebus erunt, non è columbis

& turturibus. Immurin autem, ſeu partium quarum meminimus, nomen cadit in res illas quæ ſuper altari cremantur, è Sacrificiis pro peccato, & delicto, & pacificis, quæ eo ſe habent, quem deſcripturus ſum, modo. Si ſpecies è quâ offeruntur Pacifica, boum fuerit, igne abſumetur de oblatione totum illud operimentum adipoſum quod alvum interiùs obtegit, nec non renes cum ipſorum adipe, & jecoris reſiduum quod eſt extremitas quædam parva è corpore ipſius, inſtar pollicis è manu, prominens. Eædem prorſus res cremantur etiam de pacificis quæ è ſpecie caprinâ fuerint: quòd ſi de ovillâ fuerint, ultra hæc comburitur etiam cauda integra una cum vertebris cum ea conjunctis, ſúntque eæ vertebræ inter duo femora mediæ, quas vocat laniorum vulgus Spinam dorſi. Porrò res iſtæ quæ de pacificis comburuntur, pro ratione ſpeciei è qua ſunt, uti oſtendimus, eædem prorſus etiam in ſacrificiis pro peccato & delicto igni traduntur ſine additione vel detractione: atque hæc omnia appellantur Immurin, i. e. res quas cremare jubemur. Uno autem hîc præmiſſo, pergam ad aliam quandam oblationum diſtinctionem. Dico ergò, ubi dixit Dominus, de oblationibus loquens, Cebes, Ciſbah, Ceſeb, aut Cebaſim, [Agnum, Agnam, vel Agnos,] intelligendam eſſe ovem anniculam; nomen autem Seh, [pecus,] ſpeciei tam ovillæ quàm caprinæ attribui. Ubi dicit etiam pecus annicula, de ovibus aut capris minoribus intelligi; ubi Ail, aut Ailim, [Aries vel Arietes,] de ove bimulâ maſculâ; ubi Par aut Parim, [Juvencum aut Juvencos,] bovem [g] trimum; ubi autem Egel, [vitulum] anniculum, Shair izzim [hircus caprarum] poſt annum hoc nomen ſortitur. Declarabuntur hæc omnia in tractatu Parah, claſſis Taharoth. His præmiſſis dico, Oblationes alio reſpectu in quatuor ſpecies dividi, Oblationem cœtûs, Oblationem privati, Oblationem cœtûs quæ ſimilis eſt oblationi privati, & Oblationem privati quæ ſimilis eſt oblationi cœtûs. Primum diviſionis membrum, viz. oblatio cœtûs eas continet oblationes, quæ offerebantur ſingulis diebus, & ſingulis ſabbatis, ſingulíſque menſium initiis, & diebus feſtis, ſine ulla unquam additione aut diminutione. Quod quotidiè per omnem ſeculorum decurſum offerebatur, hoc erat: duo agni in holocauſta, quorum unus mane, alter inter duas veſperas [offerebatur;] hi Sacrificium juge, abſolutè appellantur. His omni Sabbato addebantur duo etiam agni in holocauſta, qui poſt Juge matutinum, & ante Juge quod inter duas veſperas, offerebantur. Ita omni Sabbato offerebantur quatuor Holocauſta; nunquam pauciora. Duo quæ addebantur illa ſunt quæ Muſaph [i. additamentum] Sabbati audiunt. Primo cujuſlibet menſis die addebantur duobus Jugibus juvenci duo, aries unus, agni anniculi ſeptem, omnia in holocautomata; & hircus caprarum in Sacrificium pro peccato: quæ omnia appellantur Additamentum initii menſis: quia ſcil. ultra jugia addebantur: ita quolibet novilunio offerebantur duodecim holocauſta & hircus in Sacrificium pro peccato, non pauciora. Quòd ſi accideret initium menſis die Sabbati, erant tum holocautomata numero qua-

Tempore feſti azymorum per ſeptem dierum ſpatium quotidiè offerebatur, ultra duo jugia, & ultra additamentum Sabbati in Sabbato, inſtar additamenti Novilunii, ſcil. duo tauri, aries, ſeptem agni; quæ omnia decem holocauſta conficiunt, & hircus in ſacrificium pro peccato: hæc in ſingulis ſeptem dierum offerenda erant. At ultra hæc die feſti iſtius ſecundo, qui eſt dies agitationis manipuli, agnus in holocauſtum. Die autem Congregationis offerebantur, ultra jugia, duæ Oblationum ſpecies, una (in additamentum ſc. diei iſtius) inſtar additamenti Novilunii, viz. Duo juvenci, aries, & ſeptem agni in holocautomata, & hircus in ſacrificium pro peccato. Altera, cum duobus panibus offerenda, prout in textu declaratum, ſcil. Juvencus, duo Arietes, & ſeptem Agni, omnia in holocauſta, Hircus in Sacrificium pro peccato, & duo agni in pacifica. Ita eorum quæ die Congregationis offerebantur ſumma erat, agni quatuordecim in holocauſta; agni duo in pacifica; tres tauri, ut & tres arietes in holocauſta; duo hirci in ſacrificium pro peccato; omnia numero viginti quatuor. Die primo anni, ultra jugia, & additamentum novilunii jam memorata, offerebantur juvencus, aries, & ſeptem agni in holacauſta, cum hirco caprarum in ſacrificium pro peccato. Die jejunii expiationis offerebat cœtus juvencum, arietem, & ſeptem agnos, omnia holocauſta, hircum in ſacrificium pro peccato, prorſus inſtar additamenti initii anni, nec non hircum alium in ſacrificium pro peccato (is cui eâdem ſorte conſociatus erat hircus ἀποπομπαῖος) qui eâ quam deſcribit Scriptura, ratione comburendus erat. Die primo feſti Tabernaculorum, ultra jugia, offerebantur boves tredecim, arietes duo, agni quatuordecim, holocautomata omnes; hircus in ſacrificium pro peccato: omnia offerenda numero triginta. Eodem modo ſe habebat cujuſlibet è ſeptem diebus Feſti, oblatio, viz. duo arietes, agni quatuordecim, hircus in ſacrificium pro peccato: de juvencorum autem numero ſingulis diebus detrahebantur ſinguli, adeò ut diei ſeptimi oblatio eſſet juvenci ſeptem, arietes duo, agni quatuordecim, omnes in holocauſta, cum hirco in ſacrificium pro peccato: omnium ſumma viginti quatuor. Die octavo offerebatur, ultra jugia, juvencus, aries, ſeptem agni; omnes holocauſta; & hircus in oblationem pro peccato. Oblationes iſtæ, quas diximus conſtitutis iſtis diebus oblatas fuiſſe, appellantur Additamentum diei [iſtius,] quia ſc. die iſto offerebantur ultra duo jugia. Quòd ſi contingeret quemlibet dierum iſtorum cum Sabbato coincidere, offerebatur additamentum diei poſt additamentum Sabbati; adeò ut ſi dies anni primus eſſet Sabbatum, offerrent primò juge matutinum; dein additamentum Sabbati; ac poſtea additamentum novilunii; ac poſt illud additamentum diei; dein ultimo loco juge inter duas veſperas offerendum. Hanc autem regulam obſerva, quæ & poſtea Cap. decimo Zebachim eluçidabitur. Hæ sunt in genere, oblationes cœtûs, quæque continuè sine additione aut detractione offerebantur; eæque omnes Sabbatum loco pellebant, & immunditiem, prout in tractatu Pesachim ostensum est. Jam autem tibi notum est, non esse inter oblationes cœtûs, Pacifica, duobus tantum diei Congregationis agnis exceptis, nec inter ea omnino esse Sacrificium pro Delicto, & ex oblationibus cœtûs duas esse species sacrificiorum pro peccato, quarum sc. unius residuum comedebatur, alterius cremabatur; cujusmodi erat hircus diei expiationis tantùm.

Species secunda, quæ est oblatio Privati, quinquefariam dividitur. Primo, cùm tenetur privatus oblatione ob factum aliquod quod patraverit, aut verba quæ protulerit. Secundò, cùm incumbat ipsi oblatio ob statum aliquem [corporis] qui ipsi contigerit. Tertiò, cùm ob aliquid quod facultatibus ipsius contigerit, offerenda ipsi sit. Quartò, cùm temporis alicujus noti periodus illam ab ipso offerri requirat. Quintò, cùm se sponte ad illam offerendam obligat. Prima harum Classis eo se habet quem descripturus sum modo, viz. Cùm Excidii causæ, quarum in lege fit mentio, triginta sex sint, prout primo Tractatus Ceritoth [de Excidiis] Capite enumeratæ sunt, harum tres sunt, in quibus qui transgressus fuerit nullâ tenetur oblatione, viz. qui Pascha tempore suo celebrare neglexerit, qui circumcisionem omiserit, & blasphemus (cujus rei causam ostendimus Capite secundo Tractatûs Horaioth, atque insuper primo Capite Ceritoth explicaturi sumus,) reliquarum verò triginta tribus quicunque in una aliquâ per errorem peccaverit, Sacrificium pro peccato offerre tenetur, vel, si dubitaverit fecerit nécne, Sacrificium pro delicto dubium, excepto eo qui Sanctuarium & sacra ipsius polluerit: Neque enim ille ob ignorantiam sacrificio ob delictum dubio tenetur, uti Cap. primo Ceritoth declarabitur. Jam verò è numero peccatorum istorum triginta trium, ob quorum singula debetur sacrificium, sunt Idololatria, & qui Sanctuarium & res ejus sacras polluerit. Ratio autem Sacrificii ob errorem qui in horum præceptorum aliquo contigerit, eo se habet, quem descripturus sum, modo. Si privatus iste per errorem in Idololatria peccaverit, tum qui ita erravit, capram anniculam in oblationem pro peccato offeret, sive fuerit privatus iste Rex, sive Idiota, sive Sacerdos unctus: quòd si in pollutione Sanctuarii aut rerum ejus sacrarum erraverit, tum ovem aut capram grandiorem; quod si hoc præ facultatum tenuitate non poterit, tum turturum, aut pullorum columbinorum par offeret, alterum in holocaustum, alterum in sacrificium pro peccato; vel si nec hoc assequi potuerit, tum decimam Ephæ partem, prout in textu expressè mandatum. Atque in hoc etiam erroris [genere] eadem est ratio errantis, sive Rex fuerit, sive Idiota, sive Sacerdos unctus. Quòd si erratum fuerit in aliquo reliquorum triginta & unius peccatorum, in eo discrepantia inter errantes statuitur. Si enim qui in horum aliquo erraverit privatus fuerit è vulgo hominum, qualem Scriptura [unum] è populo terræ appellat, tenetur ille hirco caprarum, vel ove fœminâ in Sacrificium pro peccato: quòd si Princeps fuerit, viz. Rex qui summum obtinet imperium, offeret ille hircum caprarum. si Sacerdos unctus, & ob eas quæ Capite secundo Horaioth recensentur conditiones, offeretur Juvencus filius bovis in Sacrificium pro peccato; idémque juxta expreſſa Scripturæ verba comburetur: audítque iſte Juvencus qui omnium mandatorum gratiâ offertur.

Porrò ex oblationibus privati eſt etiam illa, quâ tenetur ſi tranſgreſſus rem habuerit cum ancilla deſponſata. Quincunque enim fuerit, ſive per errorem, ſive ex ſuperbia peccaverit, arietem offerre tenetur [in oblationem] pro delicto, quæ [Piaculum] pro delicto manifeſtò appellatur; nec non, Piaculum pro delicto ancillæ. Similiter qui è re ſacra numuli valore utilitatem ceperit, tranſgreſſus eſt, & arietem pro delicto offerre tenetur, qui Piaculum tranſgreſſionis nominatur; eâ ſcilicet conditione, ſi per errorem peccaverit; quòd ſi ſuperbè egerit, non tenetur piaculo tranſgreſſionis; quod ſacrum eſt enim non polluitur cùm quis ex ſuperbia peccat, ſed ſanctitatem ſuam retinet, uti Cap. ſecundo Tract. Kidduſhim oſtendimus. Similiter in juramento, tam ad teſtimonium adhibendum, quàm de pignore, tenetur oblatione, tam qui per errorem, quàm qui ex ſuperbia pejeraverit; quemadmodum C. ſecundo Tract. Ceritoth oſtenſuri ſumus. Oblationis autem ob perjurium in teſtimonio perhibendo eadem prorſus eſt ratio quæ [oblatæ] ab eo qui Sanctuarium ejúſque ſacra polluerit. At in juramento de pignore, viz. cùm pignus [apud ſe depoſitum] denegans falſò de eo juraverit, oblatio eſt aries pro delicto offerendus. Similiter cùm aliquid furatus falſò juraverit; aut ſi jus alicui ſit ad facultates quæ penès ipſum fuerint, ſive ob conſortium, ſive deperditum ab ipſo repertum, ſive aliquid vi ablatum, ſive quòd fraude in commercio uſus, detinuerit bona iſta, quæ reddere tenetur, in horum generum aliquo, ſi denegaverit, ídque adhibito juramento, offerendus eſt illi aries ob delictum, qui Piaculum furti appellatur. Ac eadem eſt in his omnibus ratio, ſive per errorem, ſive per ſuperbiam peccantis; tenetur enim ſacrificio pro delicto offerendo, ubi juraverit: uti & Cap. nono, Tract. Kama oſtendimus. Quòd ſi falſò quis juramentum temerarium per errorem protulerit, ſacrificium ei offerendum incumbit, quale ei qui Sanctuarium ejúſque ſacra polluerit. Atque hæc oblationum, quibus obnoxius eſt privatus quis, ubi peccatum facto aut dicto commiſerit, juxta partitionem hujus generis, ſumma eſt.

Claſſis ſecunda eſt, cùm alicui incumbit Oblatio ob eorum aliquid quibus affectum eſt corpus: viz. ſi gonorrhœâ laboraverit, ſi leprâ correptus, aut ſi mortui contactu pollutus fuerit Nazireatum profeſſus, qui perindè eſt ſive per errorem, ſive ſponte immunditiem contraxerit; atque hoc etiam in genere ſunt Proſelytus & Puerpera. Oblatio quâ tenetur tam Gonorrhœicus quàm Gonorrhœica, ubi mundi evaſerint, eſt par turturum, vel duo pulli columbarum, quorum alter in ſacrificium pro peccato, alter in holocauſtum cedit. Puerperæ verò agnus anniculus in holocauſtum, & pullus columbæ aut turtur in ſacrificium pro peccato; vel, ſi pauper fuerit, par turturum, aut duo pulli columbarum, alter in holocauſtum, alter in ſacrificium pro peccato. Naziræi, ubi pollutus fuerit, oblatio eſt par turturum, aut duo pulli columbarum, alter in holocauſtum, alter in ſacrificium pro peccato; & agnus anniculus in ſacrificium pro delicto. Leprâ affecti, duo agni, alter in ſacrificium pro delicto, qui Aſham Metzurraa, i. eſt Leproſi ſacrificium pro delicto appellatur, alter in holocauſtum, & agna in ſacrificium pro peccato; quòd ſi pauper fuerit, offerat [licet] par turturum, aut duos pullos columbarum, alterum in ſacrificium pro peccato, alterum in holocauſtum, cum agno in ſacrificium pro delicto. Jam verò Proſelytus non plenè admittitur in religionem [Judaicam,] ut ſit inſtar reliquorum Iſraelitarum, niſi tribus intervenientibus, viz: Circumciſione, Baptiſmo, & acceptatione Sacrificii; ſicut nec ipſi Iſraelitæ, cùm in religionem hanc à Deo inſtitutam reciperentur. Circumcidit enim eos [Dei] Legatus in Ægypto, cùm legem de ſacrificio Paſchatis ipſis traderet, ne quis incircumciſus ipſum comederet, vetans. Baptizati autem ſunt in deſerto, antequam ad ipſos demitteretur Lex, ubi & holocauſta, & pacifica obtulerunt. Hoc eſt quod dicit, [h] Miſítque juniores filiorum Iſraëlis, & obtulerunt holocauſta: ac tum demiſſa eſt ad ipſos lex. Sacrificium igitur à Proſelyto offerendum eſt par turturum, aut duo pulli columbarum, uterque holocauſtum. Innuitur hoc eo quod dicit Deus, [i] Cùm peregrinatus fuerit apud vos peregrinus, aut quicunque eſt in medio veſtri per generationes veſtras, fecerítque oblationem ignitam odoris quietis Domino. Expreſſa autem verba Sifræ ſunt, Sicut Iſraelitæ non introeunt in fœdus niſi adhibitis tribus rebus, Circumciſione, Baptiſmo, & acceptatione Oblationis; ita nec Proſelyti aliâ ratione. Vel, Sicut Iſraelitæ initiati ſunt ſanguine holocauſti, & ſacrificiis pacificis, ita & proſelyti ſanguine holocauſti, & ſacrificiis pacificis [initiandi.] Quid hoc vult dicere? Et fecerit oblationem ignitam: Dicas, Abi & vide quodnam ſit pretium quod totum [in] oblationem igne conſumendum cedat, cujus in nullam partem poteſtatem habes. Non reperies præter holocauſtum ex avibus, i. e. non invenies nummos quibus ematur oblatio, cujus pretii nulla pars tibi utilis ſit, ſed tota ſuper altari cremanda ſit, præter holocauſtum ex avibus: holocauſti enim è quadrupedibus pellis Sacerdotibus cedit. Quod ſupereſt, Singulare aliquid offerre non licet; quia in tota Lege non reperimus unum aliquid ſeorſim offerendum præcipi. Unde dicunt, Omnium quorum in Lege mentio eſt nidorum dimidia pars in holocauſtum cedit, exceptis à Proſelyto offerendis, qui toti igne abſumendi ſunt. Et in additamento Cerituth dicit, Si attulerit quis jumentum in [ſacrificium] expiatorium, liber eſt; ſin frumentacea & libamina, haud ita: non ita dictum eſt aliam ob cauſam, quàm ut rem illi leviorem reddat.

Claſſis tertia eſt, cùm ſacrificium offerre tenetur quis ob aliquid quod facultatibus ipſius contigit: cujuſmodi ſunt Primogenitum, & Decimæ jumentorum, quorum utraque ſimilia ſunt pacificis, niſi quòd jumentorum decimas comederent Domini Hieroſolymis, inſtàr decimarum ſecundarum; Primogenitum autem, ſi perfectum eſſet, oblatum comederent Sacerdotes, uti in Tract. De Primogenitis oſtendetur. Similiter cùm primitias offerret quis, eas in ſacrificium pacificorum offerebat, uti Cap. ſecundo, Tract. Biccurim explicabitur.

Claſſis quarta eſt, cùm offerendum ſit cuipiam ſacrificium ob temporis deſignati adventum: cujuſmodi ſunt tria feſta [illa.] Unicuique enim Iſraelitæ tempore feſti offerendum erat holocauſtum; illud nempe quod Olath Rayiah, holocauſtum comparitionis, nuncupabatur; & Sacrificium pacificorum, illud quod Chagigah, i. e. Feſtivitas audit: de quo dicit Dominus, Feſtum celebrabis Domino Deo tuo; dein & ſacrificium pacificorum alterum præter Chagigah; illud nempe quod Pacificum lætitiæ vocant, de quo quo dicit, Et lætaberis in feſto. Harum autem trium oblationum præceſſerunt leges, ſc. quâ ratione augendæ vel minuendæ ſint, & quis ad eas offerendas obligetur, & quomodo, déque tempore oblationis ipſarum, [diebus] feſtivitatis primo & ſecundo, ſúntque omnia neceſſariò debita, ſcil. Comparitionis, Feſtivitatis & Lætitiæ [teſtandæ ſacrificia.] Quod autem ad ſacrificium feſtivitatis diei decimi quarti, viz. pacificorum, quod etiam privato offerendum erat die decimoquarto menſis Niſan, unà cum Paſchate, de quo loquitur Dominus. [k] Et immolabis Paſcha Domino Deo tuo oves & boves, &c. eſt illud uniuſcujuſque arbitrio permiſſum, uti Cap. ſexto Peſachim oſtenſum eſt. Ac licèt Talmud [ſacrificium] feſtivitatis oblationem cœtûs appellet, quod ab univerſo populi cœtu offerretur, ego tamen in claſſe Sacrificiorum à privatis offerendorum collocavi, cùm unuſquiſque ſingulatim ipſum offerret; neque vel Sabbatum, vel pollutionem loco cedere faciat.

Claſſis quinta eorum eſt, quæ ſibi quis ſponte imponat, viz. ſi quis ad Naziræatum ſe ad certum aliquod temporis ſpatium obliget, aut votum aliquid concipiat, aut ſponte aliquod Deo offerat. Quòd ſi Naziræatum in ſe ad tempus ſuſceperit, ſpatio illo exacto offerendum eſt ipſi ſacrificium purificationi [inſerviens,] ſc. agnus anniculus, in holocauſtum, & agna annicula in ſacrificium pro peccato, & aries in ſacrificium pacificorum. Votum eſt cùm dixerit quis, Ecce ego in me holocauſtum; aut, Ecce in me ſacrificium pacificorum [offerendum ſuſcipio.] Oblatio ſpontanea, cùm certum aliquod animal innuens dixerit, Ecce iſtud holocauſtum eſt, vel, Ecce illud ſacrificium pacificorum. Quod ad diſcrepantiam autem inter votum & oblationem ſpontaneam, jam ſæpiùs repetitum præceſſit, oblationibus votivis obſtrictum ad earum damnum (ſi quid illis acciderit) præſtandum teneri; ſpontaneis, haud ita. Quod autem ad ſacrificium confeſſionis, cujus apud ipſos mentionem audies cùm dicunt, Ecce teneor ego ſacrificio confeſſionis, eſt illud ſacrificium pacificorum, unáque munus frumentaceum, uti in Tractatu Menachoth oſtendetur. Jam ex iis quæ tibi à me expoſita ſunt, conſtat non licere cuipiam aut vovere, aut ſponte offerendum in ſe ſuſcipere vel ſacrificium pro peccato, vel pro delicto; holocauſtum tantùm aut ſacrificium pacificorum in votum, vel oblationem ſpontaneam adhibebit, ſive ex volucribus, ſive è quadrupedibus: quin & notum tibi feci ſacrificium pacificorum è volucribus non deſumi. Atque hæc ſacrificiorum à privatis offerendorum ſumma eſt, quibus omnibus hoc commune eſt, quòd nec Sabbati, nec pollutionis lege quenquam ſolvant.

Species tertia eſt, Sacrificium cœtûs, quod ſimile eſt ſacrificio privati, ſc. Cùm Conſiſtorium magnum per errorem ut licitum permiſerint aliquid, quo qui per ſuperbiam peccaverit, excidii reus eſt, qui ex errore, ſacrificio ob peccatum definito; ſi populus, eorum ſententiâ in errorem inductus, tranſgreſſus fuerit, (ſicut in Tract. Horaioth oſtenſum eſt) tenentur illi ſacrificio ob peccatum offerendo: quòd ſi error in rebus ad Idololatriam ſpectantibus fuerit, offerendus eſt ipſis juvencus vitulus in holocauſtum, cum hirco caprarum in ſacrificium pro peccato. Juvencus autem ac hircus iſti ſingulis tribubus (uti in Horaioth explicatum eſt) incumbunt, ac hirci comburendi ſunt, quòd ſacrificium pro peccato cœtûs ſint; de juvenco antem ob rem latentem, quem cremandum præcepit, diſerte dicit Dominus, Sacrificium crificium ob peccatum cætûs eſt. Et in Sifra dixerunt, Regula generalis eſt de omnibus cætûs ob peccatum ſacrificiis, comburenda eſſe ipſa. Atque hirci iſti in ſacrificium pro peccato oblati, ii ſunt qui Hirci Idololatriæ appellantur, ideò quòd Conſiſtorium Judicum ipſos ob errorem in rebus ad Idololatriam ſpectantibus adducit. Quòd ſi in reliquis præceptis erraverit Judicum concilium, (uti in Horaioth oſtenſum eſt,) ſacrificium ab ipſis offerendum eſt Juvencus filius bovis in ſacrificium pro peccato, qui, Juvencus cùm latuerit res à cætu [offerendus] vocitatur, quòd nempe initio pericopæ dixerit, Et latuerit res. Appellatur etiam aliàs, Juvencus qui ob omnia præcepta offertur: de quo expreſſum Scripturæ mandatum eſt, comburendum eſſe: atque hunc etiam ſingulæ tribus offerre tenentur, uti Cap. primo Horaioth oſtenſum eſt. Hoc autem genus inter oblationes cœtûs recenſuimus, eò quòd dixerit Dominus, Offerétque cætus; nec non, Et faciet tota congregatio; item, Expiabítque Sacerdos totum cætum; ac rurſum, Et remittetur toti Iſraelitarum cætui. Oblationi interim privati in hoc ſimile eſt, quòd nec Sabbatum, nec immunditiem loco pellat, uti nec Sacrificium privati.

Species quarta eſt Oblatio privati, quæ oblationi cœtûs ſimilis eſt; eſtque ea ſacrificium Paſchatis ab unoquoque decimoquarto die Niſan immolandum, quemadmodum in Tract. Peſachim oſtenſum eſt; nec non juvencus in ſacrificium pro peccato, & aries in holocauſtum, quos offerebat Sacerdos ſummus die jejunii expiatorii; qui, Juvencus diei expiationis audiebat, atque ille eſt de quo dictum eſt, Cum hoc ingredietur Ahron in Sanctuarium; cujus ordo in Tract. Yoma explicatus eſt; & de eo comburendo expreſſum eſt Legis præceptum. Ideò autem ſimilis perhibetur ſpecies iſta oblationi cœtûs, quòd & Sabbatum, & immunditiem loco cedere faciat, inſtar ſacrificii à cœtu offerendi. Regula enim apud nos fundamentalis eſt, Omnem oblationem, cui certum tempus præfinitum eſt, Sabbatum & immunditiem pellere; iis autem omnibus, quibus certum aliquod tempus ſtatutum non eſt, nec ſabbatum, nec immunditiem pelli. Ne autem te in errorem ducat Sacrificium Feſtivitatis, cùm homini liberum ſit ipſum toto ſeptem dierum ſpatio offerre; ut & illud Diei congregationis, cùm ipſum quolibet tempore durante hebdomadâ præſtare liceat, quemadmodum in Tract. Chagigah oſtenſum eſt, ideóque nec Sabbatum, nec immunditiem loco cedere facit. Porrò, ſi omnes oblationes prædictas percurreris, reperies haudquaquam eſſe in omnibus totius cœtûs ſacrificiis fœminam, neque in iis quæ inter ea oblationi privati aſſimilantur; neque ex omnibus totius cœtûs pro peccato ſacrificiis, quod comburatur, excepto hirco diei expiationum, cui conſors erat hircus ἀποπομπαῖος, ac hircis Idololatriæ cauſâ offerendis, & juvenco ob peccatum quod committentem latuerit: reliqua enim ſacrificia ob peccatum à proſapiæ Sacerdotalis maribus comedebantur. Eodem modo reperies omne privati ob peccatum ſacrificium ſexûs eſſe fœminei, tribus tantum exceptis, quæ è maribus ſunt etiamſi à privato ob peccatum oblata, viz. hirco quem offerebat Rex cùm erraret in re aliquâ quæ ex ſuperbia commiſſa excidio obnoxios reddebat homines, per errorem verò, ſacrificio ob peccatum definito; & juvenco omnium præceptorum cauſâ oblato, quem ob errorem ſuum offerebat Sacerdos Unctus; & Juvenco diei expiationum.

Notum etiam tibi fiet, non esse inter privati ob peccatum sacrificia quod comburatur, exceptis juvenco quod omnium præceptorum nomine venit, & juvenco diei expiationum; cùm reliqua omnia comederentur. Constabit etiam non esse inter omnia à toto cœtu oblata, sacrificium ob peccatum è specie ovilla, vel holocaustum è caprina: neque esse inter omnia privati munera, Sacrificium ob peccatum è specie bovina, excepto juvenco omnium præceptorum nomine oblato, & eo qui die expiationum immolabatur, qui (ut ostendimus) cremabantur. Conclusio autem ex hac recensione emanans est, omnem privati ob peccatum oblationem comedi, sexúsque esse tantùm fœminei, neque è specie bovina desumi, excepto hirco à Principe offerendo, utpote qui mas erat; & juvenco omnium præceptorum nomine allato; eóque qui diei expiationum proprius, utpote qui & mares & de genere bubulo erant, atque omnes comburebantur. Ideo autem appellabatur Juvencus qui omnium præceptorum nomine venit, quod de eo dixerit Scriptura,[1] Anima cùm peccaverit per errorem [in aliquo] ex omnibus præceptis Domini quæ non sunt facienda, &c. Atque hæc omnia sunt quæ ex animalibus offeruntur munera, quorum usus perpetuus est secundum legem à Deo institutam, quæ comprehendit nomen Sacrificii unum omnibus commune: Alia omnibus, specie licet differentibus, communia hæc sunt. 1. Quòd non offeratur ex iis aliquid maculâ aliquâ vitiatum: vitiorum autem hoc in ordine fiet mentio. 2. Quòd nihil eorum in altari offerat quispiam excepto Sacerdote ritè disposito, vitiorum, quam maxime fieri potest, immuni, quod etiam hoc in ordine declarabitur. 3. Ne offeratur munus ex iis aliquod, nisi tempore diurno, eò quòd dictum sit, Die quo præcepit filiis Israel, &c. Indè traditione acceptum est, Interdiu, non noctu. 4. Et ne quispiam eorum alibi offeratur quàm in Sanctuario, ubicunque tandem esset Sanctuarium. Cùm ergò notum jam fecerit Deus locum quem in Lege innuit, montem Moriæ esse, fieri non potest, ut alibi in tota terra offeratur sacrificium quàm Hierosolymis, ídque privatim in monte Moriæ ex omnibus urbis Hierosolymitanæ partibus, & in ea montis parte quæ [ei rei] designata est, uti in Tractatu Middoth ostensuri sumus. In multis autem inter se discrepant, variísque perficiuntur modis, nec non varia unicuique speciei quibus vitientur, accidunt, in quorum pleraque hoc Tractatu Zebachim inquiretur, & in diversis aliarum hujus ordinis, cujus explicationem jam aggrediar, partium locis.

NOtum eſt præceſſiſſe nobis in quinque ordinibus iſtis jam explicatis, multa quæ ad pollutionem & purificationem ſpectant fundamenta, ac privatim in Tractatu Adaioth [de teſtificationibus] quorum unumquodque, ubicunque tandem occurrerit, allatum eſt ob cauſam aliquam loco non ſuo, cùm & radices earum & rami univerſi hujus ſint Claſſis: quâ igitur [in explicandâ,] nullo habito reſpectu ad ea quæ explicata ſunt in Claſſe aliqua præcedente, ex iis quæ ſpectant ad pollutionem aut munditiem, ita de hoc argumento ſermonem inſtituam, ut ſibi ſufficiat, minimè indigus Claſſis alicujus alterius. Quædam autem hoc loco præmiſſurus ſum, quæ ſint vice clavis ad ea quæ continet Claſſis iſta, ubi monuero unamquamque immunditiem, cujus in Lege eſt mentio, ortum ac principium neceſſariò ducere ab aliqua animalis ſpecie, exceptâ leprâ quæ veſtes & parietes polluit; cùm non ſit hominum quiſpiam ejus principium, quemadmodum expreſſè dicit Lex: quinetiam inter omnes animalis ſpecies non eſſe quæ dum vivit polluat aut polluatur, homine ſolùm excepto; reliquæ enim animalis ſpecies omnes dum in vivis ſunt mundæ ſunt, ut nec alia polluant, nec ab aliis polluantur: homo ſolus dum vivit polluit & polluitur, eâ quæ deſcribetur pollutione. Siquidem immunditiæ ſpecies, juxta illud quod in textu Legis habetur, undecim ſunt. Immundities, ſcilicet, reptilis; Immundities cadaveris; Immundities mortui; Immundities concubitûs ſeminis; Immundities aquæ oblationis pro peccato; Immundities oblationum pro peccato; Immundities gonorrhaici; Immundities gonorrhaicæ; Immundities menſtruatæ; Immundities puerperæ, & Immundities lepræ. Harum autem immunditiarum in aliquibus plures ſunt Patres, [ſive principes] in aliquibus pater unicus. Atque hæc eſt earum partitio. Immunditiei reptilis unus eſt tantùm pater; ſcil. quòd ipſum reptile ſit pater pollutionis; quod nomen (reptilis ſcil.) competit unicuique individuo octo ſpecierum iſtarum, quarum in Lege fit mentio: Sunt autem Muſtela, [m] Mus, Rubeta, Mygale, Chamæleon, Stellio, Lacerta, Talpa. Porrò, reptilium ſanguis, caro, & adeps, æquè polluunt; nec non quatuor eorum pelles & carnes; Mygales, ſcil. Chamæleontis, Stellionis, Lacertæ; at oſſa reptilis carne nudata ſola non polluunt. Cætera abominanda & reptilia, veluti rana, teſtudines, viperæ, ſerpentes, &c. munda ſunt omnia, nec polluunt. Immunditiei autem in cadavere pater unicus eſt; ipſum ſcil. cadaver, quod pater eſt immunditiei, quo nomine ſignificatur quodvis mortuum ex omnibus ſpeciebus jumentorum & animalium, ſive immundorum, ſive mundorum, [certâ] tamen inter immunda & munda differentiâ; nempe quòd mundum, ſi ritè mactetur, prout in Tract. Cholim explicatum eſt, mundum ſit; at immundum mactetur, an jugule-tur, an morte naturali moriatur, nihil interſit: nec non quòd [in] cadavere beſtiæ immundæ, & animalis, ſive immundi, ſive mundi, nulla ſit differentia inter carnem & adipem reſpectu pollutionis; at in beſtia munda ſecus ſe res habeat, cùm adeps mortuæ nullatenus polluat; cujus cauſam explicaturi ſumus loco ſuo in Tract. Oketzim: quin & ſanguis cadaveris non polluit eâ immunditie quâ cadaver [animalis] ſive mundi ſive immundi: ſimiliter, & oſſa carne nudata, cornuáque & ungues & ungulæ cadaveris non polluunt; at medulla quæ intra oſſa eſt cadaveris polluit, æquè ac caro: eodémque modo in reptili, perinde eſt ac caro ipſius, & in mortuo inſtar carnis mortui. Explicata autem ſunt iſta in Toſephet Oholoth, ubi dictum eſt, Medulla omni reſpectu eſt inſtar carnis. In immunditia autem mortui novem ſunt patres; primò enim ipſe mortuus eſt pater pollutionis. Nolo autem, cùm dico Mortuum, integrum mortuum, ſed rem quæ polluit immunditie mortui, veluti particulam quamvis carnis ipſius magnitudine olivæ, & carnem ejuſdem coagulatam, & cochleare putredinis, & oſſa, & ſanguinem, &c. quæ enumerabuntur Capite ſecundo Oholoth: nec intereſt ſit mortuus Ethnicus an Iſraelita, præterquam in immunditie tentorii privatim, cùm Ethnici non polluant immunditie tentorii. Nam expreſſè dicit Talmud, Iſraelitæ polluunt tentorium, Ethnici autem non polluunt; quod nititur dicto ipſius iſto, [n] Hæc eſt Lex: Homo cùm mortuus fuerit in tentorio. Dixit enim [alibi] Et vos pecus meum, pecus paſcuæ meæ, vos homo, vos vocamini Homo, at gentes mundi non vocantur Homo. Sepulchrum etiam eſt pater immunditiei. Quin & homo qui mortuo pollutus fuerit, appellatur pater: paritérque vaſa quæ ipſum tetigerint, nec non vaſa quæ tetigerint mortuum, & homo qui ipſa tetigerit, & vaſa quæ hominem iſtum tetigerint; horum trium unumquodque eſt pater pollutionis, ſcil. vaſa prima, nec non homo & vaſa illa altera, paritérque vaſa quæ tetigerint vaſa iſta mortuo polluta, ſunt & ipſa pater immunditiei: quorum uniuſcujuſque probationem allaturi ſumus Capite 2. Tract. Oholoth. Hæc autem omnia [ita ſe habent] eâ conditione, ut ſit homo iſte Iſraelita, quòd ſi Ethnicus fuerit qui mortuum tetigerit, neque ipſe pollutus mortuo cenſetur; nec polluit eo modo quo polluit mortui [contactu] immundus. Initio autem Toſephet Tract. Oholoth dixerunt [Magiſtri,] Ethnicus & Beſtia, partus octimeſtris, vas teſtaceum, cibi, liquores qui tetigerint mortuum, vaſa quæ ipſos tetigerint, munda ſunt. quæ mortuum tetigerint. Ea autem ſingillatim recenſuimus, quoniam pellis & veſtis, & cilicium, cum mortuo tabernaculum fuerint, immunditiem contrahunt. Secus autem reliquæ vaſorum materiæ. Nam ſi fuerit tabernaculum è ligno, aut teſta, aut oſſe, non omnino polluitur, niſi vas illud ligneum aut oſſeum tabernaculi inſtar mortuo ſuperimmineat, adeo ut ſit ratio eorum eadem ac vaſorum immerſionis, quæ mortuum tetigerint, uti explicaturi ſumus Capit. 27. hujus Tractatûs. Et in Toſephet Niddah dixerunt, Quodcunque polluitur [reſpectu] Tabernaculi, polluitur ad ſeptem dies; eſt tamen quod polluatur ad ſeptem dies, nec interim polluitur ratione Tabernaculi. Innuit vaſa immerſionis, ſicut declaravimus. Porrò ex iis, quæ ſcire debes, eſt, quòd cùm iſta omnia ad mortuum [ſpectantia] patres fuerint, [hoc fiat] ut in iis primum & ſecundum reſpectu immunditiei [qd ad] Terumah & res ſacras numeremus, uti hac ipſâ præfatione oſtenſurus ſum; non quòd qui aliquo ex iſtis pollutus fuerit, reus excidii fiat, ſi ingreſſus fuerit ſanctuarium, aut res ſacras comederit. Ita expreſſè in Toſiphta dicitur, De quibus hæc intelligenda? in Terumah & rebus ſanctis; at non ſe radit Naziræus niſi ob mortuum tantùm, neque rei fiunt ob pollutionem Sanctuarii & rerum ejus ſanctarum, niſi ob mortuum tantùm. Pollutiones autem à mortuo, ob quas ſe radere tenetur Naziræus, enumeravimus Cap. 7. Tract. Neziruth. In concubitu autem ſeminis pater unicus eſt; quòd ſc. ſemen ipſum pater immunditiei ſit hac conditione ut profluat ab eo qui novenni, uno die aut ampliùs, major eſt. In Sifra legitur, Iſh [vir,] ad excipiendum Minorennem. At forſan excipere poſſum novenni uno die majorem: Dicit, Et vir cùm exierit, &c. declaravimus autem ſæpius novenni uno die majoris concubitum pro concubitu haberi, neque requiritur arrectio aut voluptas, uti in Gemara Yoma explicatum eſt, verùm requiritur tantùm quò polluat, ut ſit coloris albi inſtar ſeminis noti: ita in Toſephet Zabim dicitur, Concubitus ſeminis rubentis mundus eſt. Sæpe autem evenit, ut profluat ſemen iſtiuſmodi, cùm quis continuis vicibus brevi temporis ſpatio coitum repetierit, adeò ut prodeat ſanguis antequam mutatus in vaſis ſpermaticis fuerit.

In immunditie aquæ purgando peccato deſtinatæ, unicus eſt pater, quòd ſc. cùm cinis vaccæ rufæ commiſtus fuerit cum aqua fontana (uti in Tract. Parah diſcribitur) ita ſtatim afficiatur aqua iſta, ut ex parte polluat, & ex parte non polluat, quâ autem polluit ſit pater immunditiei, quam proprietatem declaraturi ſumus Cap. 1. hujus Tract. At in immunditie oblationum pro peccato tres ſunt patres, quorum unus eſt Vacca rufa; qui enim eâ comburendâ, aliiſque quæ ad ipſam ſpectant peragendis, occupatur, polluit veſtes inſtar ejus qui tetigerit patrem immunditiei, ut loco ſuo Tract. Parah declarabitur. Secundus juvenci & hirci, quorum ſanguis intrò affertur, nam & qui hos comburit, polluit veſtes; horum autem juvencorum & hircorum mentionem fecimus diverſis locis Tract. Zebachim; in textu autem Gemaræ Zebachim dicitur, Ecce diſcis, quod ad omnia quæ expiant, eum qui ipſa comburit polluere veſtes. Tertius eſt hircus ἀποπομπαῖος. Qui enim hircum emiſſarium dimittit, polluit veſtes. Immundities autem [fœminæ] profluvio laborantis continet ſeptem patres. Ipſa enim mulier profluvio laborans eſt pater immunditiei; & qui cum ea coit, pater immunditiei; & ſanguis profluvii ipſius pater immunditiei; & ſputum, & urina, & illud cui inſidet, & lectus, ſingula patres. Notum autem eſt è diſertis legis verbis, immunditiem menſtruatæ & puerperæ eodem modo ſe habere, dicente Domino, [o] Secundùm dies ſeparationis morbi ſui immunda erit: Nec non, Et immunda erit hebdomadibus duabus juxta ſeparationem ſuam. Menſtruatæ autem ſunt iidem ipſi ſeptem iſti patres. Eodémque modo Immundities Gonorrhaici ſeptem patres continet: qui ſunt, Ipſe Gonorrhaicus, fluxus ejus, concubitus ſeminis ejus, ſaliva ejus, urina ejus, ſtratum ipſius, & illud cui inſidet. Cùm autem notum ſit nullum eſſe diſcrimen, reſpectu pollutionis, inter eum qui cum menſtruata, aut profluvio laborante, aut puerpera, rem habuerit intra ſeptem dies à partu maſculi, aut quatuordecim à partu fœmellæ (ſicut dixit Dominus. [p] Et viro qui dormierit cum immunda) appellabimus ipſum congredientem cum immunda; quem etiam ut unum è numero patrum immunditiei recenſebimus, non autem congredientem cum menſtruata ſeorſim, cum profluvio affectâ [q] ſeorſim, & cùm puerpera ſeorſim, cùm omnes ut res una ſe habeat. Ex iis autem quæ oportet ſcire eſt, quod quamdiu purgata non fuerit quæ immunda eſt aquâ in conceptaculo [contentâ] polluat congredientem cum ipſa etiam poſt annos aliquot à ceſſatione fluxus ſanguinis. Neque enim temporis [morâ] abſque aqua conceptaculi mundatur. Sic & ſedile, & ſtratum, utrumque pater eſt. Neque enumerabimus ſtratum Gonorrhaici, & ſtratum leproſi, & ſtratum Gonorrhaicæ, & ſtratum menſtruatæ, ſeorſim, cum una ſit omnium ratio; verum ſtratum tantùm à quocunque tandem pollutum recenſebimus. Eodémque modo, dum recenſebimus ſanguinem immundæ, erit [nomen illud] ſanguini menſtruatæ, profluvio affectæ, & puerperæ commune: ſimiliter cùm dicemus ſaliva immundi, aut urina ipſius, comprehendet illud gonorrhæâ laborantem, profluvio affectam, menſtruatam, & puerperam, cum ſalivæ, & urinæ uniuſcujuſque è quatuor iſtis eadem ſit ratio reſpectu immunditiei. Porrò in immunditie lepræ quatuor ſunt patres: Leproſus abſolutè, qui etiam appellatur leproſus intra dies conſummationis ſuæ, & leproſus intra dies ipſi enumerandos, & veſtis plagâ affecta, & domus plagâ effecta. Intelligo autem, cum hic dico veſtem, quodcunque pollutioni lepræ obnoxium eſt, ſive veſtis ſit lanea, ſive linea, ſive ſtamen, ſive ſubtegmen, ſive vas quodcunque coriaceum; ſic & cùm dico [domus plagâ affecta] intelligo univerſam domus materiam, ipſius ſcil. lapides, ligna & pulverem. Cùm unaquæque harum partium polluat ſi magnitudine olivam æquet, uti declarabitur Cap. 13. Tract. Negaim, hujus claſſis. Sunt ergò patres immunditiei, numero 32. iſti ſcil. Reptile, Cadaver, Mortuus, Homo pollutus mortuo, Vaſa polluta mortuo, Vaſa quæ tetigerint hominem mortuo pollutum, Vaſa quæ tetigerint vaſa mortuo polluta, Homo qui tetigerit vaſa mortuo polluta, Vaſa quæ tetigerint hominem qui tetigerit vaſa, Tabernaculum, Sepulchrum, Concubitus ſeminis, Aqua expiando peccato,

Vacca rufa, Juvenci & Hirci qui comburuntur, Hircus emiſſarius, Gonorrhaicus, Profluvio affecta, Menſtruata, Puerpera, Sedile, Lectus, Rem habens cum immundâ, Sanguis immundæ, Saliva immundi, Urina ejuſdem, Fluxus gonorhaici, Concubitus ſeminis ipſius, Leproſus diebus quibus ſecluſus manet, Leproſus diebus quibus abſolutè pronuntiatus fuerit immundus, veſtis plagâ affecta, Domus plagâ affecta. Oſtenſum autem eſt initio Tractatûs Megillah, nullum eſſe diſcrimen inter leproſum dubium, & leproſum abſolutè ſic denunciatum quod ad pollutionem. Porrò ſcias nomen Vaſorum competere octo ſpeciebus, viz. veſtibus, cilicio, vaſis teſtaceis, vaſis coriaceis, vaſis ex oſſe, è vitro, è metallo, è ligno confectis. Sportæ autem & ejuſmodi vaſa è viminibus, palmarum foliis, juncis, palmarum ſurculis, arundine, &c. contexta, omnia in vaſorum ligneorum numero cenſentur, prout hoc ipſo Tractatu docebitur. Expreſſè autem in lege aſſeritur omnes has ſpecies pollutioni obnoxias eſſe, exceptis tantùm vaſis vitreis, quæ quòd pollutioni obnoxia cenſeantur, ex decreto Magiſtrorum eſt. Verba enim Gemaræ ſunt, Joſi filius Joezerei vir Zeredæ, & Joſeph filius Juchanâni vir Hieroſolymitanus decreverunt vaſa vitrea pollutionem recipere. Et in Toſephet Tractatus Celim dixerunt, Vaſa vitrea ob verba Scribarum, reliqua autem vaſa ex Legis [ſententia] polluuntur. Dixit Dominus, De omni vaſe ligneo, aut veſte, aut pelle, aut cilicio. Cilicium autem eſt illud quod contexitur è pilis, ſive ſubtilius, ſive craſſius fuerit, inſtar ejus ex quo conficiuntur ſacci, cùm univerſim vocetur Saccus: Veſtes autem ſunt quæ ex aliis rebus quam pilis contexta, veluti lino, lanâ, ſerico, goſſypio, &c. quia & filtra etiam inter veſtes cenſentur: Ita expreſſè dicitur in Toſiphta, Qui fecerit induſium è filtro, ſi tres [palmas] latum ac totidem longum fuerit, &c. hæc autem menſura eſt quâ veſtis pollutioni obnoxia redditur, prout Cap. 27. hujus Tract. oſtendetur, & in Siphra [aut veſtis] (inquit) ad includendum filtra. De immunditie autem vaſis teſtacei dicit, Et vas Teſtaceum in quod ceciderit ex iis, &c. De vaſis autem è metallo conflatis, [r] veruntamen aurum & argentum, &c. Vaſa autem ex oſſe comprehenduntur ſub dicto ipſius,[s] Et omne opus è pilis caprarum, uti oſtenſuri ſumus Cap. 2. hujus Tractatûs. Vaſa autem vitrea adjuncta ſunt teſtaceis, uti Cap. etiam ſecundo explicabimus. Porrò, omnibus his vaſorum generibus [ad] purgationem ſufficit aqua conceptaculi, exceptis teſtaceis. Illis enim non competit alia mundandi ratio quam confractio, adeò ut nullatenus [aquâ] conceptaculi mundentur, atque hoc eſt quod dixit Dominus, [t] Et ipſum confringetis: dicit etiam, [u] Et omne vas ligni immergetur aquis. Similiter, vaſa fuſa ſpeciatim appellant [nomine] vaſorum è metallo conflatorum, neque in eorum numero cenſentur vitrea. Omnia item texturâ [confecta] appellant veſtes, etiam è pilis contexta. Plerumque autem vaſa teſtacea in numero vaſorum non includuntur, quia peculiares ſunt ipſis leges, uti dicturi ſumus. Reliqua autem vaſa, ſcil. lignea, oſſea, coriacea, vaſa immerſionis appellant, quoniam mundatio ipſorum [immerſione in] aquæ conceptaculum [peragitur.] Cùm autem audieris ipſos dicentes, Polluit vaſa, aut, polluit veſtes, ſcias [illud de quo hoc aſſerunt] polluere has ſpecies omnes exceptis vaſis teſtaceis; illa enim non polluit polluit aliud quid quam pater immunditiei, (uti oſtenſurus ſum.) Privatim autem in immunditie ob mortuum, reſpectu cujus has vaſis leges aſſignavimus, diſcrimen eſt. Vas autem teſtaceum, quomodocunque immuditiem contraxerit à mortuo, fit primarium reſpectu pollutionis, non autem pater, etiamſi vel mortuum ipſum tetigerit, aut in tabernaculo mortui fuerit. Præivit autem nobis Toſiphtæ textus hac in re, Dixit Dominus, [x] Et omne vas apertum, ſuper quo non eſt operculum adjunctum, immundum eſt. Dixerunt, Ipſum immundum eſt, at non fit pater immunditiei, ad polluendum. In Sifre autem docetur ſcripturam loqui de vaſe teſtaceo, quod & oſtenſurus ſum Capite decimo hujus Tract. Reliqua autem vaſa & veſtes ea ſunt, quæ cum prope admota fuerint homini qui pollutus fuerit mortuo, evadunt ipſa Pater immunditiei, quæque ſi eorum aliquod ad mortuum propius acceſſerit, deinde ipſum tetigerit homo, deinde [alia ex ipſis] hominem tetigerint, tria ſimul Patres fiunt, uti diximus, útque declaraverunt in Sifre, ſicut explicaturus ſum initio Tract. Oholoth. Porrò, ſcias vaſa ſolùm teſtacea patres immunditiei nunquam evadere, neque ejus quæ eſt à mortuo, neque alius alicui immunditiei reſpectu: quod oſtenſurus ſum diverſis hujus claſſis locis.

Doctorum noſtrorum, qui Cap. 7. Tract. de Nazireatu dixerunt, Os magnitudine grani hordei conſtitutio eſt: quod dictum ibi expoſuimus. Et in Gemara, Tract. Niddah, Sanguis commixtionis eſt à Doctoribus noſtris. Et in Gemara, Tract. de Sabbato decretum de terra gentium ediderunt. Et in Peſachim [dicunt,] Beith Happares, ex magiſtrorum ſententia eſt. Hæc autem quatuor Patres ſunt: eodémque modo Tabernaculum quod pollutum fuerit ſanguine commixto; nec non homo qui aliquo quatuor iſtorum pollutus fuerit, vaſáque quæ eundem tetigerint, paritérque vaſa quæ iiſdem polluta fuerint, ut & homo qui eadem tetigerit, nec non vaſa quæ hominem iſtum tetigerint: etiam vaſa quæ tetigerint vaſa iiſdem polluta; horum ſingula Patres ſunt ex ſententia Scribarum. Immundities fluxûs continet novem Patres. Quod enim in præcedentibus diximus, Non polluit, nec polluitur dum vivit [quicquam] excepto homine, juxta legem [intelligendum] eſt de ſolo Iſraelita, cùm Ethnicus nec polluat, nec polluatur ullo immunditiei genere, at ex Rabbinorum noſtrorum ſententia ſtatuerunt eos ſe inſtar fluxu laborantium habere in omnibus ad ipſos ſpectantibus. Dixerunt, Iſraeltæ polluunt fluxu, Ethnici autem non polluunt fluxu, verùm decreverunt ipſos pro Gonorrhaicis habendos in omni prorſus reſpectu, uno excepto, ſcil. concubitu feminis; eſt enim ſemen Ethnici abſolutè mundum, uti in Gemara, Tract Niddah, explicatum eſt: neque de eo decreverunt fore inſtar concubitûs feminis Gonorrhœâ affecti, quod eſt Pater immunditiei, qui & contactu & geſtatione polluit, uti declarabitur; atque hoc loco dictum eſt. Fecerunt in eo Magiſtri noſtri diſcrimen, ne comburemus ob ipſum Terumah, & res ſanctas, verùm dignoſceretur immunditiem ipſius eſſe ex decreto Doctorum noſtrorum: ideóque non polluit concubitus feminis ipſius; ſi enim re verâ Gonorrhaicus eſſet ex lege, polluoret concubitus feminis ipſius & contactu & geſtatu; at oſtenſum eſt Ethnicos quoſlibet mares & fœminas, minores & grandiores, Gonorrhaicos cenſeri reſpectu omnium ad ipſos ſpectantium, [y] præterquam reſpectu concubitûs feminis ipſorum, quemadmodum explicavimus, neque intereſt revera fuerit quis gonorrhœâ, vel leprâ affectus, an ab his morbis liber; utcunque enim Gonorrhaicus eſt ex decreto Magiſtrorum noſtrorum. Cùm autem dico, Minores ipſorum, intelligo maſculum die uno vel amplius novenni majorem, fœminam verò diebus uno vel pluribus trienni, non iſtâ [ætate] minorem, ſicut explicatum eſt in Gemara Avodah Zarah. Erunt ergò Ethnicus, & ipſius fluxus, ſaliva, urina, vehiculum, ſtratum, ſanguis alienigenæ, & rem habens cum Ethnica; horum, inquam, octo ſingula, Pater immunditiei, ex ſententia Scribarum. Quinimo Gonorrhœâ affectus, profluvio laborans, Menſtruata, Puerpera, Leproſus, ſinguli lectum & cathedram polluunt, ex ſententia legis, uti in ſuperioribus diximus. Mortuus autem non polluit lectum: verba autem Siphræ ſunt, Gonorrhœâ laborans afficit lectum, at mortuus non afficit lectum: verùm dixerunt [Magiſtri] prædictos iſtos ubi mortui fuerint, & lectum & cathedram, eo modo quo dum in vivis eſſent, polluere, cujus cauſam ad finem Tract. Niddah in hac claſſe aſſignaturi ſumus, ad dictum ipſorum, Gonorrhaicus, profluvio affecta, menſtruata, puerpera, & Leproſus, qui mortui fuerint, polluunt geſtatu, donec contabuerit caro ipſorum. Eſtque hoc à Magiſtris [ſtatutum.]

tutum.] In Sifra [dicitur] Gonorrhœâ affectus, qui mortuus fuerit, polluit geſtatu, donec contabuerit caro ipſius, ex verbis Scribarum. Et in Toſephet Tract. Niddah dixerunt, Gonorrhœâ affectus, profluvio laborans, menſtruata, puerpera, & leproſus, qui mortui fuerint, ſi geſtentur, polluunt, donec contabuerit caro [ipſorum,] non tamen polluunt niſi maximâ ipſorum parte, neque aliunde eſt pollutio ipſorum quam à verbis Scribarum; ſcil. quòd polluant ſtratum ſuum juxta verba Scribarum, qui illud adjunxerunt ſtrato Gonorrhœâ affecti. Senſus autem ejus quod dicunt [geſtatu] eſt, quòd ubi major ipſorum pars ſuper lectum geſtata fuerit, polluatur lectus, etiamſi inter corpus Gonorrhaici ipſius mortui, & lectum fuerit lapis qui ea ſeparet, eo modo quo vivus eundem pollueret, uti hoc Cap. declarabitur: at non ita ſe habet omnis mortuus. Hæc autem fuſiùs declaraturi, atque explicaturi ſumus loco ſuo. Immundities autem Menſtruatæ novem etiam continet Patres, à Doctoribus conſtitutos. Nam, ut docebitur in Tract. Niddah, decretum eſt de Menſtruata fore ipſam immundam retrò [numerando] de tempore in tempus, ab exploratione ad exploratione, eo modo qui ibi declarabitur. Dixerúntque, A tempore in tempus, juxta Doctorum [conſtitutionem:] Nec non de eadem dixerunt, polluere ipſam ſtratum & cathedram retrò numerando, at non polluere illum qui cum ipſa rem habuerit. Quin & maculas ignotas ſtatuerunt pro ſanguine menſtruatæ [habendas,] ex ſententia Magiſtrorum, uti ibi explicabitur; ſúntque verba Gemaræ, Quæ videt maculam polluit retrò [numerando] ſtratum & cathedram; polluitque concumbentem in futurum. Eodem modo eſt etiam induſium immundum: tempus autem iſtud, quo retrò [numerando] polluit, definientes, dixerunt, Donec dixerit, Exploravi induſium iſtud, neque fuit in ipſo macula, vel ad tempus lotionis. Paritérque verba quæ ſequuntur in Gemara, Tract. Niddah, conſuetudines eſſe à Magiſtris, & mulierem quæ ubi advenerit conſuetudo ſua non exploraverit ſe, deinde poſt aliquot dies exploratam ſe pollutam invenerit, pro menſtruata habendam à tempore conſuetudinis ſuæ ad illud uſque tempus: Atque hoc eſt quod dicitur, Immunda retrò [numerando.] Ibidem dictum eſt, Gonorrhœâ laborans, profluvio affecta, obſervans diem juxta diem, puerpera, omnes de tempore in tempus polluunt: ac notum eſt tempus illud in quo fuerit pollutio juxta [ſententiam] Doctorum retrò cenſeri. Quod ad omnem verò menſtruatam, aut videntem maculam, aut quæ non exploraverit ſeipſam tempore conſuetudinis ſuæ, cum ſtrato & cathedra, quæ polluerit iſto temporis ſpatio, Patres erunt immunditiei ex decreto Magiſtrorum; ut & qui rem habuerit cum ea quæ viderit maculam, in futurum: ſic & ipſius ſaliva & urina iſto temporis ſpatio, & ſanguis qui in induſio cernitur, quem non eſt certum ſanguinem eſſe menſtruum. Sunt hæc omnia Patres ex inſtituto Magiſtrorum. In immunditie pariter puerperæ tot ſunt Patres ex inſtituto Magiſtrorum, quot in Menſtruata: i. e. eadem eſt puerperæ & menſtruatæ ratio, uti in præcedentibus dictum eſt, & in Gemara Niddah dixerunt, Si emiſerit fœtus manum ſuam, deinde retraxerit, mater ipſius immunda eſt ob partum: Hoc autem declarârunt eſſe ex conſtitutione Magiſtrorum, ideóque neque ipſi dies purificationis [à tempore iſto] numerabimus, ac ſi dice-diceremus, cùm videret ſanguinem, ſanguis mundus fuit, verùm illud quod per omnia graviſſimum eſt ipſam obſervare cogemus. Dixerunt, Curâ angitur, neque concedimus ipſi dies purificationis : Immunda ergò erit quatuordecim diebus, inſtàr ejus quæ fœminam peperit, ad aggravandum ex inſtituto Magiſtrorum. Quòd ſi ſanguinem viderit poſt illud temporis ſpatium, ſanguinem illum mundum haud cenſebimus, cùm nullus fuerit partus, verùm ſanguis menſtruus habebitur, aut ſanguis fluxûs [cujuſdam] pro temporis quo ipſum viderit ratione, uti in Tract. Niddah oſtenſuri ſumus. Hîc autem idem faciamus in enumerandis Patribus ex inſtituto Magiſtrorum, quod fecimus in enumerandis Patribus lege [conſtitutis] ſcil. ut ſtratum immundi pro unico habeamus, quod comprehendat ſtratum Ethnici, ſtratum Gonorrhœâ affecti qui mortuus fuerit, ſtratum menſtruatæ retrò numerantis, ſtratum ejus quæ maculam viderit retrò numerando, ſtratum ejus quæ manum pepererit, ſtratum ejus quæ ſe non exploraverit, tempore conſuetudinis. Eodémque modo faciemus & in ſella, & in ſaliva, & urina, quo in jam numeratis, cùm ſpecies immunditiei una ſit ; atque hæc ſint quaſi individua ipſius, Pater autem ſit Stratum, ex inſtituto Magiſtrorum. Similiter & qui rem habuerit cum immunda, ex ſententia Magiſtrorum, comprehendet rem habentem cum alienigena, & cum ea quæ maculam viderit, eáque ex cujus utero manus exerta eſt. Immundities autem ab Idolo [contracta] quatuor continet Patres, quorum omnium immundities eſt ex decreto Magiſtrorum. In Gemara Sabbathi dixerunt, Immundities ab Idolo eſt à Magiſtris ; ſubindicatur tamen in ipſo legis textu ubi dicit Jacobus pater noſter, [z] Amovete Deos extraneos qui ſunt in medio veſtri, & mundate vos & mutate veſtimenta veſtra. Primus autem quatuor patrum iſtorum eſt ipſum idolum ; quoniam Idolum ipſum polluit inſtar reptilis ; i. e. polluit & homines & vaſa contactu, & vaſa teſtacea aëre, non autem polluit geſtatu ; atque hoc eâ conditione ut ſit quantitate olivæ, uti oſtendimus Cap. 3. Tract. Avodah Zarah. Nam ſi minus ſit quantitate olivæ Idolum illud, haudquaquam polluit. Quòd ſi ſumatur de corpore Idoli pars quanta fieri poteſt maxima, non polluit ; Idolum enim non polluit membratim, verum integrum polluit, cùm magnitudine æquet olivam vel ſuperet. Pater ſecundus, quæcunque Idolo inſerviunt, quorum quicquid eſt inſtar olivæ polluit pollutione reptilis : imò ſi abſciſſum ab ipſis fuerit quid quod magnitudine olivam æquet, & homines & vaſa contactu polluit ; atque hoc aggravandi [cauſâ ſtatuitur] de ipſis quæ cultui ipſius deſtinantur. Expreſſè enim dicit Miſhna de εἰδωλείῳ, Lapides, ligna, & pulvis ipſius polluunt inſtàr reptilis, ſicut dictum eſt, [a] Deteſtando deteſtaberis illud, & abominando abominaberis illud. Et in additamento ad Tr. Zabim, Si quis in εἰδωλεῖον Caput & maximam corporis partem immiſerit, immundus fit, vas teſtaceum, cujus aër collocatus fuerit intra εἰδωλεῖον, immundum eſt ; ſedilia & cathedræ quorum maxima pars ingreſſa fuerit εἰδωλεῖον immunda ſunt. Quo dicto vult hominem iſtum aut vas, cùm εἰδωλεῖον ingreſſum fuerit, fieri inſtàr tangentis reptile. Pater tertius eſt Idolo oblatum. Oſtenſum enim eſt initio Gemaræ, Tract. Cholin, Oblationem Idoli, illud ſcil. quod ipſi offertur nomine cultûs, polluere & contactu, &

[z] Gen. xxxv. 2. [a] Deut. vii. 26.

& geſtatu, inſtàr cadaveris, uti Cap. 3. Tract. Abodah Zarah docuimus. Eodémque modo oſtenſum eſt in eodem Tract. vinum libaminis polluere inſtàr oblationis Idololatricæ: éſtque ipſum Pater quartus, quod probârunt dicto iſto Domini, [b] Qui adipem victimarum ipſorum comedunt, vinum libaminis ipſorum bibunt. Quin & dixerunt, Tria ſunt vina, vinum quod libatum fuerit Idolo, polluit pollutione gravi, ſi quantum oliva fuerit. Senſus autem [verborum] pollutione gravi, eſt quòd & homines polluat & vaſa; atque hoc eſt quod ubique appellant Immunditiem gravem; quod autem eſculenta & liquores tantùm polluit, vocant Immunditiem levem. Cùm autem hîc dicam, Vinum libaminis Patrem eſſe immunditiei, intelligo vinum quod certò nobis conſtat Idolo libatum fuiſſe: Hoc enim eſt quod polluit inſtàr cadaveris; Vinum autem ſimpliciter non polluit niſi immunditie levi, uti ibi oſtendimus, ipſum nempe ita ſe habere ut liquores immundi. Immundities autem cadaveris duos continet Patres ex ſententia Scribarum, quorum unus eſt [Animal] ab alienigenâ mactatum, quod pro cadavere [habetur] ac polluit geſtatu, etiamſi haud oblatum fuerit Idolo; nec tamen vetitum eſt ex ipſo utilitatem capere perinde ac ex Oblatione Idololatrica; quoniam ipſi adjunctum eſt, at non ipſi ſimile, uti in Gemara, Tractatu Cholim, docebimus. Dixerunt, Gentes quæ extra terram [Iſr.] ſunt non ſunt cultores Idolorum, ſed opera patrum ipſorum ſunt in manibus ipſorum, ideoque licet utilitatem capere ex re ab alienigenâ jugulata. Pater ſecundus eſt cadaver avis, ac ſpeciatim mundæ; quoniam cadaveri avis ſive immundæ ſive mundæ non ineſt immundities ex lege manifeſta, ideóque illud inter patres à Magiſtris conſtitutos numerabimus: Mihi tamen interim conſtat illud Patrem eſſe ex legis ſententia, licèt non ſit expreſſa ejus in lege mentio, cujus indicium eſt quòd ob ipſum excidii [pœnâ] teneatur qui Sanctuarium ingreditur; ac confirmatur hoc dicto illo Domini, [c] Cadaver & raptum non comedet, ut polluat ſe in eo: quemadmodum oſtenſuri ſumus Tr. Taharoth. Homines autem & vaſa polluit eo quo deſcripturus ſum modo, ſc. quòd tactu omnino non polluat, ne quidem ex Scribarum ſententia, ſed polluat quantitate olivæ in œſophagum demiſſum, adeo ut ſi quis de ipſo quantum fuerit oliva deglutierit, ſtatim inter deglutiendum immundus fiat, ac veſtes polluat inſtàr ejus qui patrem immunditiei tetigerit, eodémque modo & cætera vaſa ipſo deglutitionis momento, contactu polluat; at nec homines, nec vaſa teſtacea, ne ipſo quidem deglutitionis momento, inſtàr cujuſvis tangentis Patrem aliquem immunditiei qui non polluit aut homines aut vaſa teſtacea vel ipſo contactûs tempore; uti ſub finem Tr. Zabim explicabitur. Verba autem libri Sifræ de eo qui deglutierit cadaver volucris mundi hæc ſunt, Dicunt, Polluit cætera vaſa ſicut veſtes, Annon [ergò] polluit hominem & vaſa teſtacea? dicere vult, Veſtem, veſtem polluit, at nec hominem polluit nec vas teſtaceum, quaſi ergò dixeris, ſi dum comederit cadaver volucris mundi, manum alteram furno compoſitam [habeat] alteram ſocio ſuo, utrique mundi ſunt; hæc eſt ratio deglutientis, atque hoc modo pro Patre immunditiei habetur: at reſpectu contactûs non aliter ſe habet ac cibi polluti, ídque eâ conditione ut ipſum edere apud ſe ſtatuat, uti ini-tio Tr. Taharoth declarabitur, neque aliter contactu polluit quam pollutione cibi immundi, quorum pollutionem in ſequentibus explicaturus ſum, adeo ut cùm admotum fuerit ex ipſo aliis cibis quantum ovum æquet, fiant cibi iſti ſecundarii quod ad pollutionem, non primi. Declaratum autem eſt in Gemara, Tr. Zebachin, Rab. Meirum dixiſſe, Etiámſi non deglutierit illud, ex quo in manus ſumpſerit, ſi in animo habuerit deglutire, perinde eſſe ac ſi deglutiiſſet, quoniam qui deficit in admotione non eſt ut qui deficit facto; nihilominus non eſt juxta ipſum Pater, adeo ut ſit cibus qui cum ipſo conjungitur primarius [reſpectu pollutionis] cùm non omnino polluat contactus, ut Pater; ſed deglutitus; atque ibi dictum eſt, In cadavere volucris mundæ juxta Rab. Meir. numerant primum & ſecundum [reſpectu pollutionis] annon? éſtque reſponſum, Ex ſententia omnium, etiam Rab. Meiri, ubicunque polluit hominem contactu, numerant in ipſo primum & ſecundum: ubicunque vero non polluit hominem contactu, non numerant in ipſo primum & ſecundum, i. e. Res quæ polluit hominem contactu, ea eſt quæ ubi tetigerit rem [aliam,] eam reddit primam, cúmque prima illa aliam tetigerit, illam ſecundam efficit; atque hoc etiam fundamentum obſerves. Jam ergò conſtat omnes Patres immunditiei à Magiſtris conſtitutos eo quo recenſuimus modo viginti novem eſſe, ſc. Os grani hordeacei magnitudine, Sanguinem commixtum, Terram Ethnicorum, Sepulchrum exaratum, Tabernaculum quod ſuperimminuerit ſanguini commixto, Hominem qui iſtis pollutus fuerit, Vaſa quæ ipſum contigerint, Vaſa quæ iſtis polluta fuerint, Hominem qui vaſa [iſta] tetigerit, Vaſa quæ hominem [iſtum] tetigerint, Vaſa quæ vaſa tetigerint, Ethnicum, Menſtruatum retrò numerando, Videntem maculam retrò numerando, Eam quæ ſe non exploraverit tempore conſuetudinis retrò numerando, Eam quæ membrum peperit, Stratum horum, Sedile ipſorum, Sputum ipſorum, Urinam ipſorum, Sanguinem ejus quæ immunda eſt ex ſententia Magiſtrorum, Eum qui rem habuerit cum immundâ, Fluxum Ethnici, Idolum, Ea quæ Idoli cultui inſerviunt, Munus Idolo oblatum, Vinum quod libatum fuerit Idolo, Mactatum ab alienigena, Cadaver volucris mundæ. Atque ita Patres pollutionum numero [certo] complexi ſumus, atque oſtendimus quot immunditiei ſpeciebus nomen hoc competat, & quænam ipſarum à verbis Legis dependeant, quænam à verbis Scribarum. Porrò, ſcias quodcunque pollutum fuerit Patre aliquo immunditiei, ſive hominem, ſive vaſa, ſive edulia, ſive liquores, appellari primum [reſpectu] pollutionis; quódque primo iſti conjunctum fuerit, ſecundum; quod ſecundo, tertium; quod tertio, quartùm: atque iſte poſtremus eſt in immunditie gradus. Cap. autem ſecundo Tr. Taharoth dixerunt, Primum in profanis immundum eſt, & polluit: Secundum illegitimum eſt, at non polluit. Primum & ſecundum in Terumah immunda ſunt, & polluunt. Tertium illegitimum eſt, at non polluit. Primum, ſecundum & tertium in ſacris immunda ſunt, & polluunt. Quartum illegitimum eſt, at non polluit. Conſtat ergò tibi quartum ultimum eſſe immunditiei gradum, & de quocunque dixerint Illegitimum eſt, ſenſum eſſe, illud alia non polluere:

luere: Ad quodcunque enim pertigerit immundities ita ut immundum fiat, nec tamen aliud polluat, dicitur ipsum Pasul [Illegitimum;] ideóque dicunt de illo qui comederit edulia immunda, aut biberit liquores immundos, Impurum esse corpus ipsius, quoniam alia non polluit; vocant etiam primum, Valed, prolem immunditiei; secundum prolem prolis immunditiei: nominat autem Mishna quicquid est præter Patrem, Valed, prolem immunditiei, primum fuerit, an secundum. Quin & manifestum est quòd sicut dicas, Hoc est Pater ex Lege, hoc ex verbis Scribarum; ita dicere possis, Hoc est proles ex Lege; hoc autem à Magistris. Est etiam è fundamentis quæ tenere debes quod dicunt in Tosephet Tr. Taharoth, Sicut primum efficit secundum, secundum autem tertium; ita dubium primi efficit dubium secundi, & dubium secundi dubium tertii. Sunt præterea [alia] multa à Magistris constituta, verùm quæ non sunt Patres, sed quæ in fundamentali Magistrorum constitutione haberi voluerunt prolem immunditiei, ut cùm dicant, Decreverunt discipuli Sammæi & Hillelelis manus immundas fore, at statuerunt eas perpetuò secundas esse, quemadmodum declaraturi sumus in Tract. Jadaim: Paritérque statuerunt hominem qui comederit cibum [qui] primus est vel secundus, aut biberit liquores immundos, aut reliqua quæ in fine Tract. Zabbim recensentur, fore secundum ad polluendum, prout ibi ostensuri sumus. Quin & à Magistris est quòd cibi polluant cibos; quoniam juxta Legem cibus non polluat cibum. Dixit Deus, [a] Et cùm ceciderit de cadavere ipsorum super omne semen, &c. immundum est. Dixerunt, Ipsum immundum est, at non aliud ita se habere facit. De immunditie autem liquorum discrepatur, cùm è sapientibus sint qui dicant ipsam eorum immunditiem, & quòd immunditiei obnoxii sint, à Lege esse; at quòd liquores edulia polluant, à Magistris; alii autem asserant etiam hoc quòd polluant cibos, esse à Lege; at quòd liquores immundi polluant vasa, adeo ut in secundo sint [immunditiei] ordine, hoc est à Magistris, communi omnium sententiâ. Cujus discrepantiæ causas explicaturi sumus quarto Cap. Tract. Taharoth, & ultimo Zabim. Verba etiam Gemaræ Niddah sunt, Ex Lege nec cibus, nec liquor polluit vas; at à Magistris decretum est de liquore Gonorrhaici & fluxu affectæ. De liquoribus qui dispositi sunt ad recipiendam immunditiem decreverunt Magistri: de cibis qui non sunt dispositi ad recipiendam immunditiem nihil statuerunt. Sensus autem ejus (quod dicunt) dispositi sunt, est, comparatas esse ipsis causas ad recipiendam immunditiem, atque hoc est quod dicunt quòd non quæsiverint [ea] disponere. Constat ergò tibi, multa esse quæ proles immunditiei sunt ex authoritate Magistrorum, etiamsi Pater ipse ad quem referuntur proles sit ex Lege. Atque hoc est de quo te his verbis monitum voluimus. Hoc in genere est, quòd si conjunctum fuerit reptile pani, panis iste primus ex Lege evadat, uti ostensum est; at cùm propè accesserit panis iste ad carnem, e. g. futura sit caro ista secunda ex [instituto] Magistrorum; quoniam juxta Legem cibus non polluat cibum; eodémque modo ubi comederit quis panem istum immundum, ipse secundus ex [sententia] Magistrorum evadit; atque atque ex hoc conjecturam ſumas, ad reliqua quæ commemoravimus intelligenda. Lex autem omnibus immunditiei Patribus communis eſt, quòd homines & vaſa polluant, cùm nulla proles vel homines vel vaſa, ſed cibos tantùm & liquores polluat. Sic expreſſè dicitur in Gemara, initio Cap. Kama, Patrem polluere hominem & vaſa; prolem cibos & liquores polluere, at non hominem & vaſa: Quantò magis ergò Pater polluet cibos & liquores? Verum liquores immundi privatim polluunt vaſa, at non homines, etiámſi proles immunditiei fuerint, ut in Tr. Parah hujus ordinis explicabitur, ubi dictum eſt, Nulla immunditiei proles polluit vaſa, excepto liquore. Sciendumque eſt eſſe propoſitionem iſtam convertibilem, ſc. Omnis Pater immunditiei polluit hominem & veſtes, & Omne quod polluit homines & veſtes eſt Pater immunditiei. Hoc autem fac memoriâ teneas, cùm ſit magni momenti fundamentum, quod elicitum eſt demum poſt inquiſitionem in omnes immunditiei ſpecies factam. Cùm autem jam palàm & manifeſtum fuerit nullam immunditiei prolem polluere vaſa, excepto liquore, qui [ſolus] polluit vaſa, ídque ex inſtituto Magiſtrorum, uti oſtendimus; paritérque ex Lege cibum non polluere cibum, neque unquam tertium eſſe niſi ex præſcripto Magiſtrorum, prout neceſſariò [ſequitur] cùm ubi Pater pollueret vaſa, aut hominem, evadat vas illud aut homo iſte primum, hoc autem primum cibos tantùm & liquores (uti præmiſſum eſt) polluat, ſítque cibus iſte ſecundus ex Lege etiam, neque aliud polluat quò illud tertium efficiat niſi ex inſtituto Magiſtrorum, (uti diximus,) idque eâ conditione ut ſit Terumah, non autem profanum quid, cùm non ſit in profanis ultra ſecundum [ad polluendum,] uti jam dictum, juxta illud quod explicavimus, C. 5. Tr. Sotah; manifeſtum eſt etiam primum & ſecundum aliàs eſſe ex Lege, aliàs à Magiſtris, eo quo oſtenſum eſt modo; tertium autem & quartum ſemper eſſe à Magiſtris, etiámſi Pater à quo originem ducunt ſit ex [præſcripto] Legis, uti oſtendimus: ideóque dixerunt, Futurum eſt ſæculum quod mundam carnem pronunciabit placentam tertiam cui non eſt ex Lege fundamentum. Ex eorum etiam numero quæ prolem immunditiei ſtatuerunt, in ipſo decreti fundamento eſt Caro deſiderii. Siquidem in Toſephet Niddah declaratum eſt ſtatuiſſe ipſos Carnem deſiderii perpetuò tertium fore ad polluendum, licèt non omnino polluta fuerit. Ibidem dictum eſt, ſtatuiſſe ipſos ut manus polluat, deinde ſtatuiſſe etiam ut polluat contactu, deinde ut inſtàr cadaveris ipſius polluat geſtatu, deinde dixerunt, ſummam dicendorum eſſe, quòd ſit munda reſpectu Terumæ, i. quòd ipſam non polluat, cùm polluat quod ſanctum eſt, quæ tertii in polluendo eſt ratio, uti diximus. Eſt autem in immunditie liquorum magni momenti fundamentum, cujus oportet hoc loco mentionem facere, ubi præmiſerim, liquores qui recipiant immunditiem atque in ſe polluantur, ſeptem tantum eſſe, eos nempe qui cibos ad immunditiem diſponant, nempe Aquam, Rorem, Oleum, Vinum, Mel (apum privatim,) Lac, Sanguinem; quoſlibet autem alios liquores, veluti Muſtum malogranatorum, & pyrorum, Aquam limoniorum, & cucurbitarum, bitarum, mel è calamis expreſſum, oleum amygdalorum, & ſeſaminum cum aquis, mellibus, oleíſque aliis, immunditiem omnino non recipere, nec quidem ex inſtituto Scribarum, uti expreſſe Miſhnah C. 11. Tr. Teramoth, quemadmodum ibi explicavimus. Cúmque pollutum fuerit horum aliquod vel à Patre vel prole immunditiei, fit liquor iſte primum ad polluendum, at non ſecundum, etiamſi à prole immunditiei pollutum fuerit; ſimiliter ſi appropinquaverit liquor iſte alii liquori, alter etiam ille primus evadet. Exempli loco, ubi tetigerit homo reptile, erit ipſe ſine dubio primum quid ad polluendum; quòd ſi tetigerit homo iſte, e. g. oleum, illud polluet; & ſi tetigerit oleum iſtud mel apum, illud polluet etſi non fuerit ei commiſtum; & ſi deinde tetigerit mel iſtud aquam, eam polluet; erúntque oleum, mel, aqua, ſingula primum ad polluendum; atque ita ſi ordine procedatur uſque ad mille liquores, omnes erunt primi ordinis, ut ſi, e. g. admoveatur oleum melli, & mel oleo alteri, & oleum iſtud ſecundum lacti, & lac rurſus melli, eodémque modo in infinitum, omnia hæc prima cenſentur. Ita in Toſepheth Tebul Yom dixerunt, Eodem modo ſe habent liquor pollutus à Patre immunditiei, & liquor pollutus à prole immunditiei: Semper enim principium eſt quod ſibi adjunctum polluit, ut & illud aliud ſibi adjunctum polluat, ſi vel centum fuerint, exceptis liquoribus, eodem die loti, cùm ipſi illegitimi ſint, at non polluant. Jam autem à nobis dictum eſt, illud quod non immundum reddit aliud, appellari Paſul [illegitimum,] atque oſtendetur in Tract. Tebul Yom, τὸν Tebul Yom (quo nomine indicatur ille qui cùm pollutus fuerit abluerit ſe ante occaſum ſolis) eo die quo ſolis occaſum manet eſſe inſtàr ſecundi; & ſi conjunctus fuerit cibo de Terumah [ſumpto] eum illegitimum reddere, cùm evadat tertius; tertium autem in Terumah ſit illegitimum, ut jam dictum. Eodémque modo quando conjunctus fuerit eo die ablutus liquori Terumæ, ipſum illegitimum efficit, ita ut fiat tertius, ut patet è C. 1. Tract. Peſachim, ubi dicunt Oleum quod illegitimum factum eſt ab eo die abluto. Quòd ſi liquor communis fuerit, haudquaquam polluit ipſum eo die ablutus, quoniam tertium in profanis planè mundum eſt. Porrò occurret in Tr. Tebul Yom hujus claſſis, dictum his verbis conceptum, Olla liquore plena quam tetigerit eo die ablutus, ſi liquor ejus Trumah fuerit, liquor illegitimus fit; at olla munda eſt: Quòd ſi liquor communis fuerit, munda erunt omnia. Et in Toſephet Tebul Yom dixerunt, Eo die lotus non polluit liquorem communem, at illegitima reddit edulia Terumæ. Ibidem etiam dictum eſt, In mactra quæ eo die lota eſt depſunt maſſam atque inde placentam abſcindunt, quoniam tertii gradûs eſt; tertium autem in profanis mundum eſt. Hæc autem Lex propria eſt eo die loti, atque inde eſt quòd liquorem Terumæ tertium efficiat, quod revera ipſe ſecundus non ſit utpote jam mundus, ideóque illegitimum reddit liquorem Terumæ. Et in Toſephet Taharoth dixerunt de Tebul Yom, ipſum, ſicut illegitimos reddit liquores Terumæ & cibos Terumæ, ita illegitimos reddere rerum ſanctarum & cibos & liquores. Ibi etiam dicitur, Perinde eſt ſit eo die lotus ab immunditie gravia an ab immunditie levi: etiam Tebul Yom, vel ob Gonorrhaicum vel fluxu fluxu affectam, aliáſque pollutiones Lege conſtitutas, eodem modo ſe habet ac Tebul Yom ob reptile. Atque hæc ratio eſt רש Tebul Yom: at quod reverà ſecundum eſt quoſcunque tetigerit liquores, ipſos primarios ad polluendum efficit. Atque hoc eſt quod volunt cùm dicunt in Tract. Parah, Quodcunque illegitimam reddit Terumam, polluit liquores, adeo ut ſint principium, excepto eo die loto, quod etiamſi Terumam illegitimam reddat, non tamen efficit ipſam principium, ſicut oſtendimus; & in Gemara Tract. Peſachim dixerunt, Quid docet de liquoribus pollutis? In pollutis à Patre immunditiei etiam primum & ſecundum principium ſunt: Etiamſi fuerit ſecundum illud ſecundum in profanis, & liquor fuerit liquor communis, erit tamen principium, quemadmodum oſtenſum eſt, c. 2. Tr. Taharoth, ubi dicunt, Secundum in communibus polluit liquores communes, tertium in Terumah polluit liquores rerum ſacrarum; ídq; quod tertium non reperiatur niſi in Terumah, uti oſtendimus. Cùm igitur jam manifeſtum ſit tertium in Terumah illegitimum eſſe, at non polluere, ideo non polluit liquorem Terumæ. At tertium in [rebus] ſanctis immundum eſt & polluit; ideoque ſi conjunctus fuerit cibus iſte qui tertii eſt ordinis reſpectu Terumæ, cum liquore ſacro, polluit ipſum; nec tamen erit liquor iſte quartus, ſed illegitimus tantum. Erit tamen principium, uti ibi declarabitur. Quod ergò ex his elicitur quoad immunditiem liquorum, eſt, quòd & Pater immunditiei, & primum & ſecundum liquores principium reddant, etiámſi fuerit liquor iſte communis, & tertium Terumæ vel rerum ſanctarum, cùm tetigerit liquores rerum ſanctarum, eos polluere, adeò ut fiant etiam principium reſpectu rerum ſanctarum, atq; iſtum cibum qui tertius eſt, non illegitimum reddere liquorem Terumæ, quanto minùs liquorem communem? Et cibum qui quartus eſt in ſanctis non polluere liquorem ſanctum, quanto minùs alium? ſolúmque eo die ablutum efficere ut ſit liquor Terumæ tertius ad polluendum, paritérque ut ſit liquor ſanctus illegitimus inſtar quarti ad polluendum; neque unquam reperies liquorem ſe ut ordine tertium & quartum, niſi hac tantùm ratione, habere. Mihi autem valde perſuaſum eſt eum qui nondum ſacrificium expiatorium obtulerit, idem etiam facere, cùm & ipſe res ſacras contactu illegitimas reddat, eodem modo quo eo die ablutus, uti oſtendimus Cap. 12. Zebachim. Conſtat autem tibi cibum pollutum, cibum alterum polluere ex ſententia Magiſtrorum, uti diximus, paritérque cibos immundos polluere liquores, & efficere ut ſint principium pollutionis, ſicut oſtenſum eſt. Idem eſt autem cùm dicunt Principium & Primum. Principium autem appellant quod iiſdem legibus teneatur, ac primum, cùm non ſit revera Primum, (Quod autem primum vocant, illud primum eſt reſpectu habito ad Patrem inter numerandum,) quaſi dicerent, Liquores iſti polluunt pollutione primariâ, etiámſi non ſint primi ſi initium numerandi à Patre ſumatur. Atque ita liquores immundi polluunt cibos. Ac etiámſi liquores iſti polluti fuerint à ſecundo, deinde conjuncti fuerint cibo profano, fit cibus iſte ſecundus ad polluendum, quoniam liquores ſunt principium. Porrò in Toſephet Tr. Tebul Yom dixerunt, Cibi polluunt liquores ut faciant ipſos principium, & liquores polluunt cibos ut faciant ipſos ſecundum. Et in Toſephet Tract. Parah, Secundum polluere liquores, ut faciat eos prin- principium; & liquores polluere cibos, ut faciant ipſos ſecundos. Atque ita liquores immundi polluunt vaſa omnimoda, hâc tamen conditione ut ſint liquores iſti immundi ob reptile, i. e. ut immunditiem ſuam acceptum ferant Patri immunditiei, ut, e. g. polluerit eos Pater aut primum aut ſecundum, uti jam dictum; non ut polluti fuerint à manibus immundis, quoniam etiam manus immundæ polluunt liquores, ut diverſis locis Tract. Zabim & Tebul Yom, & Yadaim conſtabit. Atq; hoc eſt quod volunt cùm dicunt in Talmude, Immunda eſſe ob repetile: ubicunque tandem occurrerit hæc formula, i. e. iſtos liquores immundos non fuiſſe pollutos à manibus immundis, quæ ſemper ſunt ſecundæ, ut loco ſuo declarabitur. Et in Gemara Chagigæ Hieroſolymitana, dixerunt, Perſpicuum eſt liquorem non fieri immundum à manu ad polluendum poculum. At liquores qui polluti ſunt à manibus pollunt cibos Terumæ tantùm, qui cibi fiunt ſecundarii, uti oſtendemus ſub finem Tr. Zabbim. Quin & declaratum eſt in Toſephet Parah, liquores quos polluerint cibi immundi, nec non liquores quos polluerint vaſa, etiámſi polluta fuerint à parte exteriori vaſorum, fieri principium, & polluere vaſa alia. Sit ergò hoc tibi notum. Cibi verò immundi vaſa nullatenus polluunt, uti in ſuperioribus à nobis dictum eſt. Eſtque diſertus Gemaræ Peſachim textus, Cibus non polluit vas, nec vas polluit vas. Et in Toſephet Tract. Tebul Yom, Gravitatis gradus in vaſis eſt, quòd liquores polluant vaſa teſtacea ex parte concavi ipſius, quod in cibis non fit. At nec cibi polluti, nec liquores polluunt hominem qui ipſos tetigerit, ultra quod ſi manibus tantùm ipſius adjuncti fuerint, manus ipſius immundæ fiant. Si autem ambabus ſimul manibus contrectaverit cibos aut liquores, utræque polluuntur; quòd ſi iis unam admoverit ſolam, una tantùm illa polluitur, uti declaratum eſt in Tr. Chagiga, & ut declaraturi ſumus loco ſuo Tract. Parah, & Yadaim. Quòd ſi comederet quis è cibis immundis quantum eſt [c] dimidium Peres, aut biberit ex liquoribus immundis quartam partem Log, eo facto corpus ipſius impurum evadit, fítque inſtar ſecundi ad polluendum, adeo ut ſi conjunctus fuerit Terumæ, ipſam etiam impuram reddat. Notum autem eſt ex eo quod jam ſuprà dictum eſt, fluxum, ſalivam, concubitum ſeminis, & urinam Gonorrhaici omnia Patres immunditiei cenſeri; ſúntque omnia liquores immundi, quibus appellatio ea communis eſt, cùm ſint ſpecies quædam aquarum, uti ſub finem Tr. Macſhirin docebitur. Atque hæc ſunt quæ vocat Talmud liquorem fluxu affecti; quodque his in quovis immundo reſpondet appellatur liquor immundi iſtius. Si enim in polluto à mortuo fuerit, vocatur liquor polluti à mortuo; ſi in leproſo, liquor leprâ affecti, & ſic in eodem die abluto, appellant ipſum liquorem eo die abluti: eodem modo & ſanguis menſtruatæ & ſanguis mortui Patres ſunt immunditiei, ſúntque & illi liquores. Eſt enim ſanguis è numero ſeptem liquorum. At Gonorrhaicus & fluxu affecta cæteríque Patres immunditiei quicunque, ſi tetigerint liquores, fiunt iſti liquores primi ad polluendum, non Patres, appellantúrque principium, diſertè aſſerente Baraithâ, ubi dicunt, Eodem modo ſe habent liquor qui pollutus eſt à Patre immun-

Vaſa enim quæ fiunt Patres, ea ſunt quæ immunditiem à mortuo, ſtrato, ſedili, vehiculo, aut lepra contrahunt. Vaſa autem teſtacea non ſunt idonea ſtrato aut vehiculo, uti declarabitur Tract. Zabim, nec iiſdem legibus pollutionis à mortuo [contrahendæ] obnoxia ſunt, quibus reliqua vaſa, uti jam explicatum eſt. Inter ea autem quorum hîc facienda mentio, eſt quod dicunt in Toſophet Celim, Non polluitur vas teſtaceum niſi à patre immunditiei & liquoribus, éſtque ſemper proles immunditiei. Dixerunt etiam, Quodcunque polluit hominem, polluit vaſa teſtacea; & quicquid non polluit hominem, neque vaſa teſtacea polluit, exceptis liquoribus. Liquores enim immundi polluunt vaſa teſtacea, uti dictum, etiámſi hominem contactu non polluant, niſi quòd iiſdem epotis polluatur ex præſcripto Magiſtrorum, ut dictum. Dixerunt etiam, Non contingit pollutio vaſi teſtaceo, niſi ex [parte] concavi ipſius, & cùm ferat Gonorrhaicum, neque alia præter cibos, liquores, & manus polluit, quoniam perpetuò proles immunditiei eſt: pro-

his autem omnibus quæ jam explicata ſunt conſtat, liquores immundos aliàs eſſe Patrem pollutionis, aliàs Primum ad polluendum, atque eſſe ex ipſis quæ ſint gradu tertii & quarti, viz. eum ſolum liquorem qui tetigerit eo die ablutum, uti in ſuperioribus oſtenſum; at nunquam eſſe in liquoribus ſecundum. Quoniam nempe Pater & primum, & ſecundum, eos principium conſtituunt, tertium verò non omnino polluit liquores, niſi ſit liquor aliquis ſanctus, qui etiam liquor ſit principium reſpectu rei ſacræ. Expreſsè autem dicitur in Toſephet Tract. Taharoth, Non eſt liquor, qui tegigerit tertium, immundus, excepto ſacro. Cùm autem pollutus fuerit liquor ſacer ſit principium reſpectu [rei] ſacræ, ideóque expreſsè dicit Toſiphta, Liquores polluunt duo, & illegitimum reddunt unum in ſacris. Quoniam ſcil. principium eſt quod cùm appropinquaverit cibo ſit ipſe ſecundus. Secundum autem polluit tertium, & tertium illegitimum reddit quartum; uti jam pro fundamento poſitum, viz. primum, ſecundum, & tertium in ſanctis immunda eſſe & polluere; quartum illegitimum eſſe, at non polluere. Omnis autem liquor immundus aut Pater eſt aut primus, nam liquor eo die loti non appellatur immundus, ſed illegitimus. Atque ita eum ubique appellat Miſhna: viz. liquorem qui illegitimus redditur ab eo die loto, non autem dicit, qui pollutus eſt. Jam autem manifeſtò conſtat non eſſe liquores qui ſint ullatenus ſecundi. Nam etſi ſecundi fuerint à Patre numerando, principium tamen ſunt quoad leges in ipſis obſervandas. Hac autem in re prolixior fui, quoniam occurrit in Gemara Peſachim, ad dictum Miſhnæ, E verbis ipſorum diſcimus, &c. dixiſſe ipſos, Ita in carne quæ polluta eſt à liquoribus qui immundi ſunt ob reptile. At in quibuſdam exemplaribus legitur, Qui polluti ſunt à liquoribus ſecundis, in aliis autem adſcribitur dicto Gemaræ, ob reptile, [vice] expoſitionis, liquores ſecundos; quòd totum erratum eſt, uti explicabimus. Qui autem hoc dixit, opinatus eſt numerari in liquoribus ſecundum & tertium eo modo quo in cibis, cùm non ſe ita res habeat, verùm liquores qui immundi ſint ob reptile, ſemper ſint principium. Ideo autem neceſſe habuit dicere, liquores qui immundi ſunt ob reptile, non autem [ſimpliciter] liquores immundi, quoniam illa verba comprehendant Patrem immunditiei & liquores manuum gratia immundos, uti jam dictum. Si quis autem Talmudem inſpexerit, [videbit] neceſſe ibi eſſe ut nec ſint liquores iſti Pater, nec à manibus polluti, ſed ut ſint neceſſariò ſecundi; at non cogit loci iſtius inſpectio ita [ſtatuere] niſi eum qui nullum horum magni momenti fundamentorum, quæ jam explicata ſunt, tenuerit. Conſtat ergò liquores non fieri ſecundos; in cibis verò pollutis reperitur primum, ſecundum, tertium, & quartum, nequaquam verò Pater, uti jam dictum. Vas autem teſtaceum primum erit & ſecundum, idque quòd pollutum fuerit à liquoribus immundis qui ſunt principium, uti dictum eſt. Quod ad reliqua vaſa, viz. Veſtes, & vaſa immerſionis, ſunt ipſa patres pollutionis, & prima ad polluendum, & ſecundum; ſcil. cùm liquoribus immundis tantùm polluantur, cùm nulla proles immunditiei polluat vaſa, excepto liquore, uti jam dictum; nec quivis liquor polluat, ſed is tantùm qui Patri acceptam fert [immunditiem,] ut etiam dictum. Sed nec reperitur vas aliquod è vaſorum numero quod ſit tertium, aut quartum. Porrò ex iis quæ ſcire debes, eſt, vaſa immunda etſi polluta fuerint liquoribus immundis, polluere cibos ita ut tertii fiant, ſintque illegitimi ad Terumam tantùm, uti ſub finem Tract. Zabim explicaturi ſumus. Homo autem fit & Pater immunditiei, & primus; at nunquam ſecundus, vel ex Legis, vel ex Magiſtrorum ſententia, pollutione contactu propagatâ. Nulla enim proles immunditiei polluit hominem, ne ipſi quidem liquores immundi; neque enim hominem qui ipſos tetigerit, uti jam antea explicatum eſt, immundum reddunt: at fit ille ſecundus ubi comederit cibos immundos, aut liquores immundos biberit, cum reliquis quæ fine Tr. Zabbim recenſentur. Atq; hæc omnia decreta ſunt à Magiſtris, uti oſtenſum eſt in Gemara Sabbati, útque oſtenſuri ſumus fine Tract. Zabbim. Hoc autem, quod hominem aliquem pro ſecundo habeamus, ita intelligendum, quòd illegitimam reddat Terumam (uti explicabitur) donec [aquâ] conceptaculi ſe purgaverit; quòd ſi mundatus fuerit, non opus habet [ut] occaſum ſolis [maneat,] cùm ſit illa immundities levis quæ ex inſtituto Magiſtrorum eſt. Verba autem Sifræ diſerta ſunt, Neque is qui ederit cibos immundos, neque qui biberit liquores immundos, pollutus eſt pollutione, quæ [ad] veſperam perdurat. Atque ita vaſa quæ polluta ſunt à liquoribus qui ſunt principium, cùm mundata fuerint aquâ conceptaculi, munda ſunt, neque opus habent occaſu ſolis; ita in Sifra dixerunt, Vaſa quæ polluta fuerint à liquoribus, è pollutione ſua egrediuntur eo ipſo die, cùm ſit pollutio iſta à Magiſtris [decreta,] uti jam dictum. Atque hæc fundamentorum, quæ ideo viſum eſt præmittere, ut iis quæ explicaturi ſumus ſubſternantur, ſumma eſt. Hîc autem viſum eſt quiddam tibi indicare quod forſan negligere poſſis; ſcil. quicunque tandem ſis qui deſiderio tenearis cognoſcendi ea quæ ad immunditiem & munditiem ſpectant, & intelligendi ea quæ in hâc Claſſe continentur, oportere ut primò omnia præcognoſcenda quæ in hac præfatione præmiſi, una cum textu Capitis iſtius primi Tr. Celim ejúſque explicatione noſtrâ perfectiſſimè teneas, adeò ut expeditè tibi hæc omnia in lingua fluant, ſine ulla moleſtia ea in memoriam revocandi; neque enim ullatenùs ſufficit tibi ea perlegiſſe & repetiiſſe, vel millies, niſi & memoriâ tenueris; neque vel hoc ſufficit, niſi & in promptu ſit linguæ tuæ inſtar lectionis Shemaa: ita facilè ope memoriæ fidæ & intellectûs perſpicacis fiet, ut intelligas in hac claſſe contenta; ſunt enim res in ſe valdè difficiles, perplexæ, & profundæ, quas cùm Sapientum Miſhnæ præcipui pro difficilibus habuerint, quanto magis nos? Annon vides R. Eleazarum f. Azariæ dixiſſe viro qualis erat R. Akiba, Akiba, *quid eſt quod inter enarrandum totus ſis in loquendo de iis quæ ſpectent ad Tract.  eſt eſt ut oblivioni tradatur Lex in Iſraele, ſicut dictum eſt, [f] Ecce dies veniunt, inquit Dominus, quibus immittam famem in terram, &c. Et movebunt ſe à mari uſque ad mare, & ab aquilone, & uſque ad orientem diſcurrent, ad quærendum verbum Domini, & non invenient. Quid eſt [quod dicit] Diſcurrent ad quærendum verbum Domini, & non invenient? Futurum eſt ut mulier, quæ abſtulerit placentam Terumæ, circumeat Synagogas & Scholas, ut cognoſcat num prima ſit, an ſecunda [ad polluendum.] Quin & ibi locum dubii quod occurrit ipſis, oſtenderunt. viz. Si reperiatur reptile in aëre furni, quod tamen nec panem tetigerit, nec ipſius furni corpus, jam dubium non eſt quin polluatur furnus unà cum omnibus quæ in ipſo ſint, juxta dictum Domini, Quodcunque fuerit in ipſo polluetur; at dubium apud ipſos oritur ſítne panis, primus [reſpectu pollutionis,] cùm polluerit ipſum reptile ingrediendo concavum furni, factúſque ſit furnus inſtar pleni immunditiei; an reptile polluerit furnum tantùm, furnus autem panem contactu ſuo, atque ita ſit panis ſecundus? De quo cùm dubitaverint [dictum eſt,] Oblivioni tradita eſt lex ab Iſraele. Nôſti autem quòd nunc temporis ob iniquitates noſtras quæ multiplicatæ ſunt, ſi circumiveris præcipuas Academias Iſraelis, nedum Synagogas, reperturus ſis ambiguos hærere illos in hujus generis [rebus,] de quibus multa occurrunt, & in Lege, & in Miſhna, teſtimonia, immò & in iis quæ his clariora & magis perſpicua. Minimè autem mirum videri debet ſi ita ſe habeat hoc exilii noſtri tempore, quo & in deſuetudinem abiit hoc [quæſitorum] genus, quòd pauci ſint qui in ea inquirunt, cùm invenerimus ſtante adhuc Templo & viventibus Prophetis dubium moviſſe quæſtiones de pollutione & munditie, déque tertii & quarti ad polluendum legibus, vel ipſis Sacerdotibus qui in Templo miniſtrarent, quos maximè omnium oportuit ritus ad immunditiem & munditiem ſpectantes callere, cùm maxima pars eorum quibus in hoc genere opus eſt, ejuſmodi ſint quæ ad Templum & res ejus ſanctas ſpectent. Dixit, [g] Sic dicit Dominus exercituum, Interroga modò ſacerdotes legem dicendo, Si tulerit quiſpiam carnem ſanctificatam in ora veſtimenti ſui, & tetigerit orâ ſuâ panem, aut pulmentum, vel vinum, aut oleum, ſive quemlibet cibum, numquid ſanctificabitur? Et reſponderunt ſacerdotes dixeruntque, Non. Et dixit Haggai, Si tetigerit immundus ob cadaver aliquod illorum, eritne immundum? Et reſponderunt ſacerdotes dixeruntque, Immundum erit. In cujus quæſtionis interpretatione diſcrepatur inter Sapientes Talmudicos, dicentibus aliis, perplexi ſunt ſacerdotes in quarto in rebus ſanctis, de quo cùm interrogaverit ipſos, reſponderunt, mundum eſſe; errantes, cùm illegitimum ſit, uti in ſuperioribus diximus. At reſponſum eorum de eo qui à mortuo pollutus fuerit, immundum nempe fore, verum fuit; quoniam quartum ab illo quod pollutum eſt à mortuo in ſanctis immundum eſt, i. e. pollutum eſt ipſum, at non polluit alia: & affirmantibus peritos fuiſſe eos immunditiei à mortuo contractæ, at non ejus quæ à reptili eſt, dum putarent quartum ex reptili, mundum fuiſſe in rebus ſacris. Aliis verò dicentibus, nequaquam perplexos fuiſſe ſacerdotes; cum in quæſt. prima interrogaverit ipſos de quinto in rebus ſanctis, quod dixerunt illi mundum fore; at in quæſt. ſecunda de quarto, quod dixerunt immundum fore, adeo ut in utraque quæſtione rectè reſponſum sum fit. Porrò hæc verba & ipse tibi explicaturus sum, cùm ideo eorum hic mentionem fecerim, quòd valde difficilia sint loco suo, & quàm maximè obscura, conferátque eorum explicatio ad ea quæ volumus [assequenda,] eáque quæ præmisimus confirment. Dico ergò, verba, [carnem sanctificatam] Euphemismum esse, ac intelligi carnem reptilis; eodémque modo cùm dicit, Nunquid sanctificabitur; Velle, Numquid polluetur? Sicut appellare amat lingua Hebraica amotionem à re & aversationem ipsius Kedusha [sanctitatem.] Ita dixit, Ne tangas me Ci [h] Kedashtica. Et Ne fortè sanctificetur plenitudo seminis, &c. Cùm ergò reptile in ora vestis suæ gestaverit, fit vestis prima; quòd si oram vestis hujus carne tetigerit, fit caro ista secunda; deinde, si carnem pulmento tetigerit, fit pulmentum tertium: de hoc ergò pulmento quod tertium est interrogavit ipsos, Si tetigerit vinum, aut oleum, aut cibum, quænam sit cibi, vini aut olei istius lex? sint hæc omnia immunda nécne? neque enim dubium est quin vinum, oleum, & cibus, singula in quarto sint gradu; vinum autem & oleum principium, uti ostensum est, evadunt, cibus verò illegitimus tantùm, nec alia polluit, cùm immunda sint omnia; ad hoc ergo respondentes dixerunt, Non; errantes. Atque hæc sententia est Rab qui dixit Perplexi sunt in hac quæstione sacerdotes. Deinde interrogavit ipsos dicens, Sin immundus ob contactum cadaveris fuerit qui orâ suâ tetigerit panem, qui tetigerit pulmentum, quod tetigerit vinum, & oleum, & cibos, quænam erit ratio hujus vini, olei & ciborum? Dixerunt, Immunda erunt. Quod verum est. Samuel autem dixit, non perplexos fuisse sacerdotes, sc. quòd dicat dictum Haggæi in quæst. prima [& tetigerit orâ suâ] non velle quod tetigerit ora ipsius panem; verùm velle quod tetigerit cibus oram ipsius, deinde tetigerit cibus iste panem, panis autem pulmentum; quod est quod dicunt in Gemara, Quid? scriptum est, Et tetigerit ora ipsius? & tetigit ora ipsius cùm scriptum est, de eo qui tetigerit orâ suâ, Vult, illud quod dicit, & tetigerit cum ora sua, non [intelligendum] de quovis qui gestaverit orâ suâ reptile, sed de re quæ conjuncta fuerit oræ isti; ita ut interrogaverit ipsos Haggæus de quinto in rebus sanctis quod mundum est; cùm sc. sit ora [ordine] primum; cibus qui ipsam tetigerit, secundum; panis qui cibum istum tetigerit, tertium; pulmentum, quartum, quod quidem illegitimum est, at non polluit, uti jam dictum. Cùm ergò pulmentum istud tetigerit vinum, oleum, cibum, erunt omnia munda, neque liquor, viz. vinum & oleum, neque cibus polluetur; cùm unumquodque ipsorum quintum sit, quintum autem in rebus sanctis mundum sit. Atque ita responderunt ipsi dicentes, quintum istud non pollui. Deinde cùm interrogaret ipsos, Sin pollutus à cadavere fuerit qui orâ suâ [ista] tetigerit, quænam hoc pacto futura est lex vini, olei & cibi? dixerunt ipsi, Immundum erit; quod etiam verum est, quia tum quartum erit, erúntque vinum & oleum principium, cùm sit liquor sanctus qui tetigerit tertium; cibus autem sit illegitimus, quòd sit quartus, uti jam dictum est. Quod ita explicandum est, viz. quòd immundi ob contactum mortui ora non sit primum, sed Pater immunditiei, sicut ostendimus hominem mortuo pol-pollutum, ſi veſtes aut vaſa immerſionis tetigerit, ea Patres pollutionis reddere; Erit ergò ora veſtis polluti à cadavere Pater; res autem quam tetigerit, primum, juxta dictum Samuelis; panis, ſecundum; pulmentum, tertium. Erit ergò illud quod tetigit liquorem ſanctum & cibos ſanctos, tertium, atque omnia [ſimul] immunda. Atque hoc eſt quod in Talmude ibi Samueli attribuitur: Neque hic, neque illîc, perplexi fuerunt Sacerdotes. Cùm ab illis de quarto in rebus ſanctis quæreret, dixerunt, Immundum eſſe; non ſunt hic perplexi Sacerdotes: cùm de quinto in rebus ſanctis interrogaret ipſos, dixerunt ipſis, Mundum eſſe, neque hîc perplexi ſunt. Attulit autem Rabbina explicationem tertiam, dixítque illos errâſſe in utroque reſponſo. In primo autem ita ſe res habet ut dixit Rab, ſc. quòd ora fuerit quæ tetigit panem. At quod ad reſponſum ipſorum ſecundum dixit, Certè in immunditie ob mortuum non erant experti, hîc quartum, illic tertium fuit. Cujus explicatio eſt, quòd dixerit Rabina illud quod dixerunt [Immundum erit] etiamſi vinum fuerit aut oleum & cibus, immunda [quidem] eſſe, uti dixerunt; verùm errâſſe eos in gradu quem obtinet in immunditie, dum putarent hoc quod tetigit pulmentum, quartum eſſe in polluto ſive à mortuo, ſive reptili, cùm [tamen] quartum ob reptile mundum ſit in ſanctis; at quartum ob mortuum, immundum. Errârunt ergò in utròque reſponſo; quoniam quartum reptilis illegitimum eſt, in rebus ſanctis inſtar quarti immundi ob mortuum; eodémque modo quartum cujuſcúnque tandem Patris fuerit, hoc autem quod putarunt quartum immundi à mortuo fuiſſe, [revera] tertium fuit, cùm ora fuerit Pater immunditiei, uti oſtenſum eſt; panis, primum; pulmentum, ſecundum; ac vinum, oleum & cibus ſingula cum ſecundum tetigerint, erunt ſimul immunda, ſicut dixerunt; at cibi immundi, tertium fuerunt, non quartum, uti imaginati ſunt; ſc. cum ora polluti à mortuo fuerit proles immunditiei, ut & ora reptili [polluta.] Atque hæc eſt diſcrepantia quæ contigit inter Sapientes Talmudicos de hoc reſponſo, dicente Rab, peccâſſe eos in reſponſo primo, verum pronuntiâſſe in ſecundo: Samuele autem, verum ipſos in utroque reſponſo dixiſſe: & explicante Rabinâ quid verè reſponderint ad utramque quæſtionem. Hinc autem conſtat tibi rem in ſe difficilem fuiſſe etiam priſcis temporibus, & intellectum fuiſſe quod dicunt, Futurum eſt ut oblivioni tradatur Lex ab Iſraele, de oblivione legum pollutionis & munditiei. Atque ita cùm juberet Dominus prophetam de iſtis interrogare, dixit ipſi, Interroga nunc Sacerdotes Legem, quaſi Lex abſolutè ſumpta eſſet deciſio [quæſtionum] ad pollutionem & munditiem [ſpectantium] & cognitio legum in ipſis obſervandarum. Atque ita etiam dixerunt de pollutionibus & purificationibus, Hæc, hæc ſunt ſubſtantialia Legis. Et qui aliter fieri poſſit, cùm ſint illa ſcala ad Spiritum Sanctum? Sicut dixerunt, Mundities perducit ad ſanctitatem, &c. Hæc autem omnia tibi dixi, ne putares fermonem de his rebus [inſtitutum] ſimilem eſſe ſermoni de Tabernaculis, aut Ramis palmarum, aut juramento cuſtodum, aut judicum, quem apprehendere poſſes levi aliquâ attentione, téque rem aſſecutum, quinetiam ne levi pendas ea quæ ipſo intellecto commoda præcepturus es, aut idem ſtatuas de iis ac de cæteris quæ præceſſerunt in explicatione Claſſium

CAP. I.

JER. XXXI. 32.

אשר המה הפרו את בריתי ואנכי בעלת בם נאום יהוה :

Chald. דאנון אשניו ית קימי ואנא אתרעיתי בהון אמר יי :

Quia ipſi irritum fecerunt pactum meum, & ego complacui mihi in eis, dicit Dominus.

Syr. ܕܗܢܘܢ ܗܘ ܕܦܪܝܩܘ ܠܩܝܡܝ ܘܐܢܐ ܐܬܪܥܝܬ ܒܗܘܢ ܐܡܪ ܡܪܝ ܟܠ ܡܢ ܕܐ ܐܝܬ ܠܗ ܚܫܫ ܒܗ ܐܡܪ ܡܪܝ :

Quoniam ipſi irritum fecerunt fœdus meum, ego pariter aſpernatus ſum eos, dicit Dominus.

Arab. in Bibl. Jaianis. لانهم لم يثبتوا في عهدي وانا تهاونت بهم قال الرب ❁

Nam quia non perſtiterunt in fœdere meo, ego viciſſim neglexi eos, dixit Dominus.

Sept. Ὅτι αὐτοὶ οὐκ ἐνέμειναν ἐν τῇ διαθήκῃ μου, κἀγὼ ἠμέλησα αὐτῶν, φησὶ Κύριος.

Verſ. Vulg. Pactum quod irritum fecerunt, & ego dominatus ſum eorum, dicit Dominus.

Pagnin. Qui ipſi irritum fecerunt pactum meum, & ego dominatus ſum eis, dixit Jehovah. [Not. Vatab.] Alii, Et fui maritus eis: aut, Egi maritum erga illos.

Angl. Which my covenant they brake, although I was an Husband unto them, ſaith the Lord.

Epiſt. ad HEB. VIII. 9.

Ὅτι αὐτοὶ οὐκ ἐνέμειναν ἐν τῇ διαθήκῃ μου κἀγὼ ἠμέλησα αὐτῶν, λέγει Κύριος.

Arab. Jai. توانيت انا عنهم Ego neglexi eos.

Vulg. Quoniam non permanſerunt in Teſtimonio meo, & ego neglexi eos, dicit Dominus.

Bez. Nam ipſi non perſtiterunt in illo meo fœdere, & ego deſpexi eos, dicit Dominus.

Angl. Becauſe they continued not in my Covenant, and I regarded them not, ſaith the Lord.

ISA. XXVIII. 16.

המאמין לא יחיש :

Chald. לא יזדעזען, Non commovebuntur.

Syr. ܕܡܗܝܡܢ ܠܐ ܢܒܗܬ, Qui crediderit, non timebit.

Arab. ومن يومن به لايخزي Et qui crediderit in eum, non erubeſcet.

Sept. Ὁ πιστεύων ἐν αὐτῷ, οὐ μὴ καταισχυνθῇ.

Vulg. Qui crediderit, non feſtinet.

Angl. He that believeth, ſhall not make haſte.

ROM. IX. 33. & X. 11.

Πᾶς ὁ πιστεύων ἐπ' αὐτῷ οὐ καταισχυνθήσεται.

ſerere, non argumenta ſed exempla, eáque in capita, non aliâ ferè methodo quàm prout in mentem venerint, diſtributa. Primum (quòd primò ſe cogitanti obtulerint) facient ea quæ ante aliquot annos in Auditorio Hebraico, Comitiorum Academicorum Veſperiis, ad unum aut alterum Scripturæ locum, eum in finem, diſſeruimus, quæ, omiſsâ tantùm, quæ tempori ac loco accommodata fuerat, præfatione, ſic ſe habent, Jer. xxxi. 32. Quia ipſi irritum fecerunt pactum meum, ואנכי בעלתי בם & ego Baalti bam. Celebris eſt locus, qui aliter in Novo Teſt. (ſcil. à θεοπνεύστῳ divinæ ad Hebræos Epiſtolæ, lxx Interpretum verſionem ſecuto, authore) recitatus, quàm ſonare interpretum pleriſque viſa ſunt verba Prophetæ, prout nunc in Hebraicis, quæ tam Chriſtianorum quàm Judæorum manibus teruntur, exemplaribus habentur, in eorum numero eſt qui eam de hujuſmodi diſcrepantiæ cauſa atque origine dubitandi anſam præbuerint, quæ nullo modo tolli poſſe videatur, quam ſi ad variantes lectiones confugiamus; ſc. aliter olim in iis quibus uſi ſunt lxx (qui vocantur) Interpretes & priſci temporis homines, quàm in iis qui ad recentiorum manus pervenerunt, codicibus ſcriptum fuiſſe. Quod avidis arripiunt auribus qui corruptelarum nimis frequentium obtentu, fontium Hebraicorum αὐθεντίαν labefactare conantur. Quibus ne plus quam rei ipſius veritas poſtulat, gratìs concedatur, ſollicitè cavendum eſt illis, qui limpidiſſimos vitæ fontes è media [a] Jeruſalem, imò ipſo Dei atque Agni throno profluentes, ſanctóque ipſius ſpiritu fotos, & conſpicuam divinæ circa ipſos providentiæ, per tot ſeculorum decurſum, curam, eâ quâ par eſt reverentiâ proſequuntur. Ac magni certè hoc in genere momenti eſt locus de quo in præſentiarum agitur; cùm lectionem in Bibliis Hebraicis hodie obtinentem, in dubium vocantibus occini non poſſit, quod in aliis nonnullis & ſolet & meritò poteſt, hallucinatos fuiſſe vel Interpretes vel Scribas, cùm Novi Teſtamenti authoritate comprobetur iſtorum verſio, horum lectio; cujus textum qui nobis dederunt non minùs acti ſunt à Sp. Sancto, quàm illi, quibus olim allata eſt Prophetia, Sancti Dei homines, adeò ut ab Epiſtolæ ad Hebræos authore, non minùs quàm ab ipſo Jeremia, quid dixerit Dominus acceperimus. Cùm igitur de lectione quæ in Epiſtolæ iſtius cap. viii. 9. ſcil. ὅτι αὐτοὶ οὐκ ἐνέμειναν ἐν τῇ διαθήκῃ μου, κἀγὼ ἠμέλησα αὐτῶν, λέγει Κύριος, minimè ambigatur, hoc in cauſa fuit Viris & doctis & piis, ut potiùs Scribarum incuriæ in Prophetæ verbis Hebraicè deſcribendis, vel ſaltem variæ lectioni quæ caſu aliquo jam olim contigit, diſcrepantiam hanc imputarent, & pro בעלתי Baalti, quod in hodiernis exemplaribus legitur, ac verti ſolet Dominatus ſum, vel Maritus fui, ſubſtituendum, vel ſaltem olim non malè, & comprobante jam Sp. Sancto legiſſe τὸν ἠβδομήκοντα, געלתי Gaalti, vel בחלתי Bachalti, quæ ſonant, Faſtidivi, Aſpernatus ſum. Latiùs patere, quam ut leviori manu ſarciri poſſit, rupturam. Ita certè adhuc doctis viſum, at quia non aliam tentârunt, potiùs quàm quòd non reperiri poſſit, hæc ἐναλλιοφανῆ conciliandi viam; quæ tamen inquirentibus adeo facilis eſt inventu, ut ſi alia, quæ minus fortaſſis primo intuitu præ ſe ferunt difficultatis, pari facilitate componi poſſent, nullus relinqueretur textum Hebraicum corruptelæ arguendi prætextus. Ea eſt, non ut pro voce בעלתי (in qua totius difficultatis cardo vertitur) novam aliquam lectionem ſubſtituamus, ſed ut in varios ejus ſignificatus inquiramus, quod ſi fecerimus, illud non minùs commodè per Græcorum ἠμέλησα reddi poſſe, quàm aut געלתי Gaalti quod eſt Faſtidivit, aut quicquid ejus loco adhibent doctorum conjecturæ, reperiemus. Quod ne gratìs dictum à nobis videatur, conabimur rationibus nonnullis, quæ & aliis forſan in quibus in diverſum abeunt interpretes conciliandis inſervire poſſint, ſententiam noſtram confirmare. Quem in finem, neceſſe erit in varios, quibus dictionis alicujus Hebraicæ, de qua controvertitur, ſenſus erui poſſit, modos inquirere. Ii verò (ut mihi videtur) quinque ſtatui poſſunt. Quorum primus eſt, ut diverſa, in quibus eadem vox occurrit, loca inter ſe conferantur. Ad hunc ſæpiſſime confugiunt Interpretes tum Judæi tum Chriſtiani, quo loci unius obſcuritas aliorum perſpicuitate illuſtretur.

Secundus, ut locus de quo agitur diligenter & accuratè perpendatur, ut ita quænam vocis πολυσήμου ſignificatio ei quadret, dignoſcatur, imò annon aliam adhuc quàm quæ in reliquis Scripturæ locis occurrit, requirat. Hanc innuit R. Tanchum [b] his verbis قد علمت ان الالفاظ يعلم شرحها من معني الموضع الذي قبلت فيه لا من جهة المشاركة في اللفظ حسب i. e. Notum eſt, verborum ſignificationem dignoſci ex loci, in Tertius, ut verſiones antiquæ, eæque jam olim probatæ, conſulantur; cùm earum authores iis vixerint temporibus quibus Judæorum & res & lingua magis florerent & faciliùs perdiſcerentur, quæque à ſcriptorum ſeculo propiùs abeſſent. Tales præcipuè Græca quæ vulgo Septuaginta Senum audit, Paraphraſes Chaldaicæ, & Syriaca quæ פשיטתא, ſive Simplex, dicitur, è fonte nempe Hebraico tradu&ta.

Quartus, ut in Rabbinorum tam antiquiorum quàm recentiorum, qui multa hoc in genere παλεοπαεάδοα habent, explicationes inquiratur. Quamvis enim lingua Hebraica jam olim in eam abierit deſuetudinem, ut non ſit ipſis vernacula, parum tamen abeſt quin ita haberi poſſit, utpote quam, licet non cum matris la&te imbibant, à teneris tamen unguiculis ſtatim addiſcunt, ínque ea præ aliis exercitatiſſimi ſunt, adeo ut, quod ad verba attinet, non parum iis tribuant Chriſtianorum cordatiores.

Quintus demum, (qui non minimi inter cæteros momenti) vicinarum linguarum collatio, Syriacæ puta, ſive Chaldaicæ, & Arabicæ, cùm ſint tres iſtæ, Hebr. Syr. & Arabica לשונות משותפות מתדמות בשמותיהם ובהליכותיהם ובשמושיהם (ut loquitur [d] R. Aben Ezra dicamus eſſe ea שפה אחת ודברים אחרים labium unum & verba diverſa, ſive unius linguæ dialectos varias, quarum Hæbraica mater, reliquæ autem filiæ matri non abſimiles. Hujus uſus & neceſſitas hinc patet, quòd cùm lingua Hebraica pura, antiqua, in anguſtos admodum limites redacta ſit (utpote cujus nihil, præter illud quod in Bibliis conſervatur, ad nos pervenerit; inque iis voces multæ vel ſemel tantùm, vel diverſis ſignificationibus occurrant, [f] quas ex aliorum in eadem lingua, ſcriptorum uſu dignoſcere non licet, neceſſe ſit illarum, quæ ממשפחה אחת היו (ut iterum cum doctiſſimo R. Aben Ezra loquamur) ex eadem familia ortum ducunt, eaſdem radices & propagines agnoſcunt, ſcrinia excutere, & quem uſum, quos ſenſus voces iſtæ apud illas habeant, inquirere. Hoc modo, cum aliàs non poſſint, frequenter ſe expediunt Rabbinorum doctiſſimi R. Saadias, Aben Ezra, Ebn. Jannahius, Maimonides, R. Tanchum, Kimchii, pater & filius, cum antiquiorum & recentiorum aliis. Horum quinque modorum, vel alicujus ipſorum beneficio, ſi genuinus verbi cujuſvis, in textu Hebraico occurentis, ſenſus erui non poſſit, nihil ſupereſſe videtur opis humanæ, quo dignoſci queat. Horum ergò pleroſque, ſi non omnes, à noſtris partibus, contrà verò nullum ſtare ſi oſtenderimus, dum בעלתי Baalti in Prophetæ verbis non neceſſariò per Dominatus ſum, vel Maritus fui, ſed commodè per ἠμέλησα, Neglexi, Deſpexi, verti poſſe affirmamus, adeo ut variam lectionem confingere opus non ſit, illud quod probandum ſuſcepimus, ſatis firmâſſe videbimur. Quod ut pateat, ad ſingulorum, ordine ſuo, examen illud revocemus. Primus ergò, quem propoſuimus, modus eſt, ut de vocis in loco de quo ambigitur intellectu, aliorum, in quo occurrit, collatione ſtatuatur. Atque hic primâ fronte nobis maximè adverſari videtur, dum ſc. objicitur בעל Baal ubicunque aliàs occurrit, ſignificare Dominari vel Dominum ſeu Maritum eſſe, vel in uxorem ducere, ideóque eodem hic ſenſu neceſſariò ſumendum. Cujus tamen argumenti vim infirmare haud erit difficile, ſi obſervemus, quod obſervandum eſt, alio hic modo quam in pleriſque locorum illorum verbum hoc conſtrui; ſcil. cum præpoſitione ב Be, cùm aliàs vel cum accuſativo conſtruatur, ut ubi maritandi ſignificatum habet כי יבעל בחור בתולה יבעלוך בניך Sicut maritatur juvenis cum virgine, maritabuntur tibi filii tui. Iſ. lxxii. 5. vel cum ל ubi dominandi, ut אשר בעלו למואב Qui dominati ſunt Lemoab, Moabo, 1 Chron. iv. 22. Ea autem pro diverſitate conſtructionis ſolet eſſe ſignificationum varietas, ac penè contrarietas, ut ex illis de hujus loci ſenſu qui alîus præpoſitionis influxu regitur, certi aliquid concludi non poſſit. Unicus (ni fallor) eſt præter hunc locus in quo eodem, quo hîc, modo cum ב Be conſtruitur. Jer. ſc. iii. ver. 14. אנכי בעלתי בכם Anoci Baalti bacem; ubi ut, בעלתי Baalti Dominatus ſum vel Maritus fui reddatur, adeò non eſt neceſſarium, ut minimè dubitaverit Kimchii pater, referente filio ipſius Davide, hanc ſine exceptione regulam

His ergò rationibus moti, cùm & loci circumſtantia, & verſionum antiquarum præcipuæ, & Rabbinorum doctiſſimi, & linguæ Arabicæ uſus perpetuus calculum adjiciant, nulli dubitamus pronuntiare, eandem olim hoc loco, quæ & hodie, receptam fuiſſe lectionem; & verò ſi hodie interpretibus viſum eſſet, ut olim LXX Senibus & Syro, verba Prophetæ reddere [Quapropter eos faſtidivi, nolui, deſpexi, ἠμέλησα, &c.] nihil eos facturos quod à vocis בעלתי Baalti ſignificatione alienum ſit, imò forſan quod ei, cum præpoſitione ב Be conſtructæ, non optimè omnium atque unicè quadret. Nec minùs forſan contra lectionem געלתי Gaalti, quàm pro בעלתי Baalti, hinc argumentari liceat, quòd געלתי Gaalti cum ב Be nullibi conſtructum reperiatur, neque dicatur געלתי Gaalti bam, ſed געלתים Gealtim, Abominatus ſum eos, ut Lev. xxvi. 44. Nec dubitamus, ſi ad eaſdem regulas exigantur alia etiam Scripturæ loca non pauca, in quibus aliter olim legiſſe antiquarum verſionum authores, quàm hodierna præ ſe ferunt exemplaria Hebraica, perhibentur, aliter meliùs conciliari poſſe quæ inter eos & recentiores reperiuntur diſcrepantias, quam varias ubique lectiones ſtatuendo. Altero ſaltem exemplo, ut ita duorum teſtium fide res comprobetur, illud confirmare liceat. Illius nempe loci qui ab Apoſtolo Paulo LXX Interpretes ſecuto, Epiſtolæ ad Rom. cap. ix. ver. 33. ex Iſaiæ xxvi. 11, 16. citatur: ſcil. ὁ πιστεύων ἐπ' αὐτῷ, οὐ καταισχυνθήσεται, Et quiſquis credit in eum, non pudefiet. Verba prout Hebraicè apud Iſaiam vulgò leguntur ſunt, המאמין לא יחיש Hammaamin lo yachiſh, quæ ſonare volunt Interpretes, Credens non feſtinabit. Aliter ergò legiſſe olim Græcæ verſionis authores, quos ſecutus eſt Apoſtolus, aſſerunt docti, ſcil. יבוש Yeboſh vel יביש Yabiſh, quod ſonat, Erubeſcet. Rectiùs (inquit Illuſtriſſ. Grotius) quàm quod Maſorethæ prætulere. Vir doctus apud Capellum in quæſt. de locis parallelis Vet. & Nov. Teſt. hæc habet, " Eſ. xxviii. 16. Quare autem hæc à viris doctis affirmantur? quia nempe loci naturæ magis quadrare videatur pudoris (quem adhibuerunt LXX Senes) quàm feſtinationis ſignificatus, quem unum voci יחיש Yachiſh competere autumârunt. Quòd ſi hanc ob rationem varia erit cudenda lectio, quid ni Paraphraſtæ etiam Chaldæi & Interpretis Syriaci gratiâ, quorum ille vertit לא יזדעזעון lo Yizdaazaun, Non commovebuntur, vel trepidabunt, hic لا يخجل lo nedchal, non timebit? Num eos forſ. יחיל Yachil à חול Chul, Timere, Trepidare, in codicibus ſuis ſcriptum reperiſſe putabimus, voce non minus ad יחיש Yachiſh quàm יבוש Yaboſh accedente? Quid ni potiùs & hos & illos יחיש Yachiſh olim, prout nunc habetur legiſſe? alios tantùm ejuſdem ſignificatus quàm recentiores prætuliſſe, quos ambitu ſuo continere verbum illud ſuadent & loci circumſtantiæ & interpretum authoritati additus linguæ affinis Arabicæ uſus, in qua themata حوش Hauſh & حيش Hiſh quæ Hebr. חוש reſpondent, tres nobis iſtos (cum aliis) ſignificatus exhibent (inter ſe non rarò in rei natura conjunctos, dum qui timet conſternatus huc illuc rapitur, atque ita tandem pudore confunditur) ſcil. اسرع Aſraa, Feſtinare; فزع Phazea, Timere; استحيا Eſtahya, Pudore ſuffundi; quorum tertium præferunt LXX, ſecundum Chaldæus & Syrus, primum recentiores. Siquidem quod falsò Alcorano ſuo tribuit Mohammedes, verè SS. Meritò interim vobis commendatum reddat linguæ Arabicæ ſtudium vel unus hic ejus uſus quo Hebraicæ tam feliciter ancillatur. Quàm latè pateat per totam humanioris literaturæ ἐγκυκλοπαιδείαν ejus uſus, fatebuntur multi, qui quid ulla ex parte Theologiæ ſtudioſo conferat planè dubitant. Ego verò, ſi quid ſentiam, Theologo adeo utilem exiſtimo, ut ſi textum Hebraicum aliquando penitiùs excutere neceſſarium ducat, eâ ſine manifeſto veritatis

Interim Arabum ibi innui dialectum haud dubitaverim, in qua vocis iſtius ſignificatio ſit, ut vult R. David Kimchius, Amovere, auferre. Ita Ebn Jannahius interpretationem ejus eſſe ait Arabicè واطاطيها اي وانفضها Waatatiha, i. e. & excutiam eam. Eſt certè طاطا apud Kamuſii Authorem, movere, ut cùm equum quis femorum agitatione ad curſum incitat, & manu frœnum eum in finem concutit; nec non celeriter opes expendere, profundere, quod idem ferè eſt ac excutere; quæ omnia motûs notionem includunt: aut referri (inquit idem Ebn Jannahi) poteſt ad طحطح Tahtah, mutato א in ح ejuſdem organi literam (ut frequenter fieri in utraque lingua ſolet) ut ſonet واطحطحها quod inter cætera eſt, Diſpergere, diſſipare, dejicere. Id quod, ſi dederit Deus, pollicetur ſe Cl. vir quandoque palàm facturum, (quod opus avidè expectamus.) Deinde paulo pòſt, " Ad Hebrææ linguæ perfectam cognitionem multo plus confert quàm creditum eſt hactenùs, quod Hebræorum in Scripturam Commentaria docent, qui quoties hæret calculus, ad hanc linguam confugiunt, tanquam ad ſacram Anchoram. Quamvis longè plura obſervâſſent ex Arabiſmo ad ſacri textûs illuſtrationem, ſi illius linguæ fuiſſent periores." Hæc ille. Ex his quæ à nobis prolata ſunt, conſtat, nec contra doctiorum tam apud Hebræos quàm Chriſtianos morem, nec contra rationem facere nos, ſi thema בגא Baga, licèt alicubi in Textu Sacro non occurrat, olim in uſu apud Hebræos fuiſſe ex linguæ Arabicæ uſu notiſſimo, conjecturam ſumamus, atque inde בגוים Bagoim deductum eſſe, quod Inſolentes, Superbos, καλαφρονήσας, ſignificet.

Hâc ſublatâ, alia occurrere videtur in his verbis difficultas; alia inter eam quam ſecuti ſunt olim LXX & Apoſtolus, & quam hodie ſequuntur Judæi & recentiores, diſcrepantia. Dum enim apud illos legitur καὶ θαυμάσατε καὶ ἀφανίσθητε, ſuſpicionem movet habuiſſe quæ ſecuti ſunt exemplaria, תמהו והתמו, mutato primum ordine, deinde & verborum altero, eodémque à themate תמה Tamah ad thema תמם Tamam è geminantibus ſecundam radicalem tranſlato. At quæ hoc ſtatuendi neceſſitas, cùm nihil in Græcis ampliùs contineri videatur, quàm in Hebraicis, eo quo jam & modo, & ordine leguntur? Nam התמהו benè per θαυμάσατε reddi non eſt qui dubitet; quid ni & תמהו per ἀφανίσθητε? neque enim illud poſtulare videtur, ut quis prorſus conſummetur aut conſumatur, ſed præ admiratione & ſtupore ab eo quo fuerat ſtatu mutetur, & quaſi corrumpatur: quam eſſe thematis תמה Tamah vim oſtendit ejus in lingua Arabica uſus, in qua تمه Tameha eſt corrumpi & in pejus mutari, inde de cibo dictum valet تغير ريحه وطعمه mutatos eſſe ejuſdem odorem & ſaporem, item de ove dicitur cujus lac ſtatim mutatur ac corrumpitur. Ac talis hîc ſufficere videtur mutatio ex mente Ill. Grotii, qui ad hunc locum ita commentatur, καὶ ἀφανίσθητε, nempe τὰ πρόσωπα, ut Mat. vi. 16. Expalleſcite. Syrus V. Heb. הנה עפלה לא ישרה נפשו בו

Chald. הא רשיעיא אמרין בלבהון לית כל אלין:

Et Impii dicunt in cordibus suis, Illa omnia non futura sunt.

Syr. ܗܘ ܕܠܐ ܫܦܝܪ ܢܦܫܗ ܒܗ

Arab. وان ضجر لم تسر نفسي به

Si tædeat illum, non delectabitur eo anima mea.

LXX Ἐὰν ὑποστείληται, οὐκ εὐδοκεῖ ἡ ψυχή μου ἐν αὐτῷ.

Vulg. Ecce qui incredulus est, non erit recta anima ejus in semetipso.

APud eundem Prophetam, cap. ii. 4. occurrunt & alia quæ ab Apostolo, Heb. x. 38. (versionem LXX, ut creditur, secuto,) aliter recitata quàm in textu Hebraico, qui hodiè manibus teritur, sonare censentur, aliter ipsum (vel eos, quos secutus est, Interpretes) legisse, argumento esse doctis videntur. הנה עפלה לא ישרה נפשו בו Hinneh uppelah, &c. hæc vulgò in hunc sensum sumi solent, Ecce extollitur, non recta est anima ejus in eo. Græca ἐὰν ὑποστείληται, οὐκ εὐδοκεῖ ἡ ψυχή μου ἐν αὐτῷ in diversum abeunt sensum. Suspicatur ergò Illustr. Grotius legisse ipsos pro עפלה Uppela עלפה Alepha, & pro נפשו Naphsho נפשי Naphshi. At quid tandem hîc est, quod תָּפְלָה עלפה Alesa magis coveniat quam תָּפְלָה עפלה Uppelah? præsertim cùm ex sententia R. Tanchum עפל idem valeat ac עלף in illo Jonæ iv. 8. ויתעלף Et defecit, aut Isa. li. 20. בניך עלפו שכבו בראש כל חוצות Filii tui defecerunt, jacuerunt in capite omnium platearum; qui etiam præter vulgo receptam verbi notionem, quâ Elatum esse, & extolli significat, tertiam quandam recenset à Græco ὑποστέλλεσθαι minimè alienam. viz. بعد تاخر longè remotum esse, Tardari, Retrahere se, petitam ab עופל Ophel, clivo sc. الصعب الوصول اليه لعلوة ووعره qui non sine difficultate præ alitudine & asperitate suâ ascenditur, quæ licèt eidem loco isti minùs quadrare videatur, cæteris tamen præfertur ab Ebn Jannahio, quamvis sequiùs prophetiæ tardanti ac quasi se subducenti attributa. Sensus, inquit, est لما بعدت ونات وتاخرت هذه postquam longè remotum sit, ac recesserit, & dilatum fuerit hoc, quod denuntiatum est, non recta est anima ejus in ipso, quæ nihil eorum quæ minatus est Propheta, timet. Ideo autem quod de persona, seu anima impii affirmari quod hîc dicitur, non de prophetia, putat R. Tanchum, utramvis priorum significatuum huic præfert. R. Moses Kimchius aliam adhuc interpretationem affert, etiam à fratre ipsius Davide laudatam, in qua non minùs subducendi notionem habemus, scil. ut sensus sit, Anima impii, quæ non est recta in ipso, nec in Deo fiduciam collocat, עפלה Uppelah, i. e. inquit, שמה עצמה בעפל ובמבצר, se ponit in clivo, seu, se in rupem & arcem subducit, ἐκλείπουσα, puta, & ὀλιγοψυχοῦσα: verùm justus, qui confidit in Domino, non opus habet ut se in arcem recipiat, sed fide suâ vivit. Glossarium Hebræo-Arab. aliter adhuc, עפלה Uppelah (inquit) est تحير Obstupuit, perplexus, confusus, conturbatus est. Has omnes juxta sententias, eâ tantùm exceptâ, quæ extollendi, vel se efferendi intellectum præfert, non longè à scopo aberraverit qui עפלה Uppelah ὑποστείληται verterit. Quod ad ea quæ ſequuntur, לא ישרה נפשו בו, autumat Doctiſſ. Capellus, LXX qui vertunt οὐκ εὐδοκεῖ ἡ ψυχή μου ἐν αὐτῷ, vocem illam (ſcil ישרה Yaſherah) accepiſſe quaſi eſſet à radice Arabibus uſitata שרר nempe س Sarra: at ſi res ſe ita haberet, litera ה ad radicem nequaquam pertineret, ſed futuri formativa eſſet, quod formâ regulari eſſet יִשַׂר Yaſerro, adeóque ה paragogicum, & vocales prorſus mutandæ. Eò autem confugere minimè neceſſarium videtur, cùm ישר alibi frequenter per ἀρέσκειν vertatur, quod eodem ferè recidit ac εὐδοκεῖν, illúdque dicatur rectum eſſe in oculis Domini, quo ipſe ſibi complaceat. Verba igitur prout in textu Hebr. ſe habent ita ſonant, Ecce ſubducitur, aut negligitur, vel ſubductio fit, aut neglectus, ſeu deſertio eſt (agentem ſubticendo & verbis imperſonaliter poſitis) non recta eſt anima ejus cum eo, i. e. Non delectatur anima ejus [vel, ſibi complacet] eo; ut ita ad Deum referantur poſteriora. Nec quicquam ſupereſt difficultatis, niſi quòd pro נפשו Naphſho, anima ejus, in Græca verſione perſonâ primâ efferatur Anima mea, quaſi נפשי Naphſhi, legeretur. At non infrequens eſt in textu Biblico à perſona ad perſonam tranſitus. Exempla (ni fallor) ſatis ad rem appoſita habemus, Pſal. xxiv. 6. זה דור דורשו מבקשי פניך יעקב Hæc eſt generatio quærentium eum, quærentium faciem tuam, Jacob. Ubi LXX perſonarum Enallagen ſtatuentes, reddunt Αὕτη ἡ γενεὰ ζητούντων τὸν κύριον, ζητούντων τὸ πρόσωπον τοῦ Θεοῦ Ἰακώβ. Sic & Vulg. Hæc eſt generatio quærentium eum, quærentium faciem Dei Jacob. Et Pſal. lix. 10. עזו אליך אשמרה Fortitudo ejus, ad te reſpiciam, ubi dum LXX vertunt, τὸ κράτος μου, πρός σὲ φυλάξω, & Syrus, mutato verborum ordine, אלהא לך אשבח מטל דאנת בית גוסי Deus, te glorificabo, quia tu es refugium meum, affixum tertiæ perſonæ in primæ proprium tranſtulerunt, ut ita de Deo intelligendum monerent, non de alio aliquo, quod Hebræorum plerique de Saulis robore dictum intelligunt. Quam ipſam licentiam Interpretes Græci, ut ſenſum commodiùs redderent, hîc etiam ſibi ſumendam duxerunt, ut ita verba ad Deum referenda, atque ipſius perſonâ efferri docerent. Nec interim abſurdum forſan erit, ut, ſi ei in quem cadit reprehenſio tribuatur affixum, Non eſt recta anima ipſius in ipſo, paraphraſticè exponatur, & ad ſenſum optimè, Non oblectatur anima mea ipſo; ideo enim non placet impius Dei animæ (i. e. Deo) quod ipſe ſe in anima ſua, vel apud ſe, non rectè habeat. Neque ita ſe ad literam interpretes hoſce adſtrinxiſſe videtur, quin ut ſenſui commodè exprimendo, à verborum ſono aliquoties diſcedant: exemplo ſit illud quod occurrit cap. xv. libri ejuſdem, Act. ſcil. v. 17. ὅπως ἂν ἐκζητήσωσιν οἱ καταλοιποι τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὸν κύριον, καὶ πάντα τὰ ἔθνη ἐφ' οὓς ἐπικέκληται τὸ ὄνομά μου ἐπ' αὐτούς. Neque enim inſolens puto eſſe ut unius gentis nomine plures intelligantur, ut Iſraelis omnes quotquot ubique Chriſto nomen dederint, etiam vel Idumæi; quidni & Edom nomine alii quotquot ante converſionem ipſi inimici erant?

Eadem eſt Cl. V. Ludovici de Dieu ſententia, qui etiam ut rem faciliorem reddat, verti Prophetæ verba mallet, Ut poſſideant (nempe reſtauratum Davidis tabernaculum) reliquiæ Edom, & omnes gentes, &c. & per verbum ירשו Poſſideant, non tam poſſeſſionem, quàm poſſidendi ſtudium à LXX intellectum autumat, idémque requirendi verbo ſatis feliciter expreſſum. Videſis Cl. V. animadverſiones in Act. xv. 17. Hæc certè omnia faciliùs concedi poſſunt, quàm tot in uno commate errores commiſſos atque admiſſos fuiſſe, (præſertim ubi non ſine ſummâ curâ & reverentiâ ferè ad ſuperſtitionem nimiâ, exarati ſint libri,) niſi exemplar unicè ſuperſtes à blattis ac tineis eroſum fingas. CAP. V.

Conferuntur inter ſe, Mat. xxiii. 27. & Luc. xi. 44. idem valere τάφους κεκονιαμένους, ἔξωθεν ὡραίους, ac μνημεῖα ἄδηλα, probatur è more apud Judæos ſepulchra nelaterent ſignandi.

IN ſuperioribus loca aliquot Veteris & Novi Teſtamenti inter ſe contulimus. Hoc caput duorum, quæ in Novo occurrunt, collationi, & diſcrepantiæ, quæ inter ea eſſe videtur, tollendæ, vel ſaltem alteri alterius ope illuſtrando dabitur. Illis inter ſe conciliandis linguæ Arabicæ uſus nobis commendatus eſt, his, diſciplinæ etiam Rabbinicæ ad difficultates in S. Scriptura occurrentes tollendas utilitas aliquatenùs demonſtrabitur: quem in finem & hunc diſſertationi huic locum tribuimus, cùm aliter ad ea ſpectet quæ ad præfationem in Seder Taharoth dicenda eſſent. Loca quæ innuimus ſunt Mat. xxiii. 27. & Luc. xi. 44. quorum ille ita ſe habet, Οὐαὶ ὑμῖν γραμματεῖς καὶ φαρισαῖοι ὑποκριταὶ, ὅτε παρομοιάζετε τάφοις κεκονιαμένοις, οἵτινες ἔξωθεν μὲν φαίνονται ὡραῖοι, ἔσωθεν δὲ γέμουσιν ὀστέων νεκρῶν καὶ πάσης ἀκαθαρσίας. Væ vobis, Scribæ & Phariſæi Hypocritæ, quoniam aſſimiles eſtis ſepulchris dealbatis, quæ extrà quidem apparent ſpecioſa, intus verò plena ſunt oſſibus mortuorum omnique immunditiâ; Hic verò ſic, Οὐαὶ ὑμῖν γραμματεῖς καὶ φαρισαῖοι ὑποκριταὶ, ὅτι ἐστε ὡς τὰ μνημεῖα τὰ ἄδηλα, καὶ οἱ ἄνθρωποι οἱ περιπατοῦντες ἐπάνω οὐκ οἴδασιν. Væ vobis, Scribæ & Phariſæi Hypocritæ, quia eſtis ut monumenta quæ non apparent, & homines ambulantes ſupra neſciunt. Aliud ſonare videntur ſepulchra κεκονιαμένα, dealbata, adeóque omnibus conſpicua atque apparentia, quibus apud Matthæum aſſimilantur Hypocritæ, aliud μνημεῖα ἄδηλα, monumenta quæ non apparent, quibus apud Lucam. Ideóque diverſis ad eundem finem, ſcil. inſignem Scribarum & Phariſæorum hypocriſin denotandam, comparationibus uſus viris doctis videtur Chriſtus.

tus. Inde Illuſtriſſimus Grotius ad Luc. xi.44. hæc habet, Apud Mat. eſt alia comparatio à monumentis ſumpta idem ſignificans. Fieri poteſt ut modo hanc, modo illam Chriſtus uſurpaverit. Quod tamen an hîc fecerit quærere liceat, & annon potiùs una eadémque prorſus verbis iſtis, κεκονιαμένοις & ὡραῖοι, apud alterum Evangeliſtarum quod voce ἄδηλα, apud alterum, quamvis inter ſe primâ fronte diverſiſſimis, indigitetur: quod ut manifeſtum fiat, ad ea quæ in Judæorum libris de munditie & immunditie traduntur recurrendum eſt; atque ille imprimis mos obſervandus, quo ſepulchrorum immunditiei, quæ בוקעת ועולה בוקעת ויורדת perrumpens & aſcendens, perrumpens & deſcendens, i. ſurſum atque deorſum ſe diffundens, obambulantes pollueret, aliiſque quæ inde ſequerentur incommodis obviam ibant. Sepulchra enim polluendi vim ex ipſius legis Moſaicæ inſtituto habebant, Num. xix. 16. וכל אשר יגע על פני השדה בחלל חרב או במת או בעצם אדם או בקבר יטמא שבעת ימים, Quicunque tetigerit in ſuperficie agri occiſum gladio, aut mortuum, aut os hominis, aut ſepulchrum, immundus erit ſeptem diebus. [a] Quæ explicans traditio ſic habet, הקבר כל זמן שהטומאה בתוכו מטמא במגע ובאהל כמת דין תורה שנאמר או במת או בעצם אדם או בקבר ואחד הנוגע בגגו של קבר או בכותלו, Sepulchrum, quamdiu in ipſo incluſa fuerit immundities, polluit tactu & ratione tabernaculi [ſeu obumbratione] ſicut mortuus, ſecundum ſententiam legis [ſeu de cujus immunditie ſtatuit lex,] ſicut dictum eſt, Num. xix. 16. Ita colligimus ex iis quæ paſſim in Rabbinorum ſcriptis occurrunt. Maimonides in ſuis ad Miſnaioth commentariis, Oholoth, c. vii. §. 1. hæc habet, נפש הו אלבניאן אלדי יבני עלי אלקבר מרתפעא עלי סטח אלארץ ואסמה אלמשהור ענדנא שוכה אלקבר, Nefeſh ſtructura eſt quæ ſepulchro ſuperſtruitur, elata ſuper terræ ſuperficiem, quæ apud nos vulgò [b] Shaucato'lkabri appellatur. In ipſo Miſhnaioth, textu Shekalim, cap. 2. 5. ר' נתן אומר מותר המת בונין לו נפש על גבי קברו, R. Nathan dicit, Eo quòd reliquum eſt mortuo (ſcil. è nummis ad ipſum ſepeliendum collectis) extruunt illi Neſeſh ſuper ſepulchrum ipſius. Ad quem etiam locum Maimonides, Neſeſh eodem, quo vidimus, modo explicans addit (vel ſaltem qui ipſum in linguam Hebraicam tranſtulit) והוא נקרא ציון בלשון הקדש Idemque in lingua Sancta vocatur Tſiun, in teſtimonium adducens Ezek. xxxix. 15. locum ad illud de quo agimus ſatis appoſitum, imò præcipuum traditionum, quæ à nobis laudandæ, fundamentum, ועברו העוברים בארץ וראה עצם אדם ובנה אצלו ציון עד קברו אותו המקברים, Et circuibunt peragrantes terram, cúmque viderint os hominis, ſtatuent juxta illud [Tſiun] titulum, donec ſepeliant illud pollinctores. LXX σημεῖον: Syr. ܢܨܒ ܠܗ ܠܥܡܐ ܕܡܐ ܒܛܘܪ ܐܝܣܘܝܐ, ſtatuet juxta illud Iſvoyo, quod eſt, explicante Bar Ali, ſignum è lapidibus. Unde confirmatur Ebn Jannahii ſententia, qui nominis ציון thema ſtatuit ציה, non ut alii צין, authoritate linguæ Arabicæ motus, quòd in illa idem vocetur צוה Sawah, à themate صوا, accedente linguæ etiam Syriacæ teſtimonio, quamvis alias ציון affinitatem habere poſſet cum Arabum صون Sana, quod eſt cuſtodire, vel صوان Sawan, quod lapidis durioris genus, qui forſan ad hunc uſum frequenter adhiberi ſolitus. quàm נפש Rabbinorum; cùm ſcil. ציון quodlibet ſignum ſepulchro appoſitum denotet, נפש propriè cippum eidem impoſitum. Hanc differentiam innure videtur alibi Tanchumius, dum נפש explicans, illud, ait, eſſe البناية التي تبني علي قبر من فوق كي يعلم انه قبر ويبعد عنه Ædificium extructum ſuper ſepulchrum, quo dignoſcatur ſepulchrum eſſe, atque ab eo longiùs recedatur, ציון autem حاجز كالسور يبنا حول المقابر لئلا تدوسها عبار الطريق, Septum inſtar muri circum ſepulchreta extructum, ne ea conculcent qui per viam tranſeunt. Quæ tamen haud ita puto intelligenda, ut vel ציון hujuſmodi tantùm ſeptum denotaret, (cùm ex ipſius verbis jam antea laudatis, tum ex iis quæ Kimchius ad Ezek. xxxix. annotat, ſcil. ציון eſſe מאבן אחת או מאבנים מקובצים, vel è lapide uno, vel è pluribus congeſtis, quodlibet ſignum ita appellari pateat) vel non ſub ambitu ſuo etiam נפש comprehendat, ſed ut hanc in communi Rabbinorum uſu inter hæc verba differentiam indicet, quâ ציון generaliùs ſigna illa quæ ſepulchris apponuntur, ac communiter pluribus ſimul circumdantur, denotat, נפש autem propriè (ut diximus) cippum, ab amicis mortui ipſius privatim ſepulchro impoſitum, quod nec ſolum in immunditiei cautelam aliis, ſed mortui etiam memoriæ teſtandæ fieri ſolitum videtur. Quod teſtatur celebre illud è Talmude Hieroſolymitano Shekal. cap. 2. אין עושין נפשות לצדיקים דברידם הם זכרונם, Non faciunt Nefaſhoth [monumenta] juſtis, verba ipſorum ipſis memoriam conſervant. Ac tale viſum eſt R. Davidi, fuiſſe ציון iſtud, 2 Reg. xxiii. 17. ſcil. illuſtre aliquod monumentum ac inter cætera conſpicuum, Prophetæ Dei alterius iſtius à quo ſeductus fuerat juſſu ac ſibi una erectum, eo conſilio ne idem oſſibus ipſius contingeret, quod aliis minatus fuerat ille, futurum, ſc. ut cremarentur, cum haud dubium ipſi eſſet, quin nuntii à Deo miſſi oſſibus parceret Rex pius, ſigno hoc ubi quieſcerent monitus. Alterum enim quod è Midraſh citat, (quodque pro vero amplexus videtur R. Salomo) illud quod Regi mirabundo hoc quærendi anſam præberet fuiſſe, quod ad hunc tumulum, ſecus ac juxta alios, ab altera parte urticas & carduos creſcere videret, ab altera myrtum ac herbas odoriferas, quòd in eo, ſcil. ſimul conditi eſſent Propheta verax, & mendax, joculare eſt. Obiter hîc notare liceat hunc etiam vocis נפש (quam non ſolùm πολύσημον ſed & ἐναντιόσημον eſſe alibi notavimus) intellectum apud Rabbinos uſitatum; atque inde forſan monumento tributum, quod illud mortuo novæ inſtar animæ ætatem prolonget, ac vivum in hominum memoriis conſervet, niſi à contrario potiùs ſignificatu cadaveris quod tegit, cujuſque indicium eſt, nomen ſortitum putemus. Jam ne fruſtra hæc, ac ſine ullo operæ pretio, ad dictionum iſtarum ſignificatus eruendos congeſſiſſe videamur, conſtare ſimul arbitror nullum apud Judæos ſepulchrum abſque ſigno aliquo, ſive ציון ſive נפש ultro relictum. Hoc enim tum perpetuum ferè immunditiei contrahendæ religioſioribus metum, tum damnum inſuper illis manifeſtum intuliſſet. In eundem enim redacta fuiſſet ſtatum illa, quam Sanctam vocitarunt, cum profanis gentium terris, quæ ex præſcripto [d] Magiſtrorum pro immundis habentur, juxta illud, כל ארצות העמים עפרם מטמא במגע ובמשא, Omnis gentium terræ pulvis contactu & geſtatu polluit. Adeo ut qui eam calcet, imò vel in aerem ipſius caput & majorem partem corporis ſui immittat, immundus evadat, ut videre eſt. Oholoth, c. ult. §. 6. & Maimonidis ad locum iſtum commentariis: cauſa eſt, quòd cum illi minùs de rebus iſtis ſolliciti ſint, officula quædam vel mortuorum particulæ pulvere ipſius miſceantur. Eandémque ob cauſam etiam in terra Iſraelitica ager quilibet in quo aratro effoſſum fuerit ſepulchrum, ac officula mortui diſperſa & deperdita, pulvere ſuo vel contacto vel geſtato polluit, ſcil. ne forſan illo commiſtus fuerit [e] עצם כשעורה, os aliquod quod magnitudine granum hordei æquet: [f] eodemque ſe modo habet ager in quo deperditum fuerit ſepulchrum, etiamſi non effoſſum, iiſdémque vel gravioribus legibus obnoxium eſt. Pag. 66. Fundamentum decimum tertium eſt, Reſurrectio mortuorum, quam jam explicavimus.

HIS verbis quid ſenſerit de reſurrectione mortuorum, vel ſaltem quantum de ſententia ſua proferre viſum ipſi fuit, declarat Maimonides, in quibus tamen tantum abeſt ut ſuorum nonnullis ſatisfecerit, ut quod nemini ſub omnimodæ ab Iſraelis ſorte excluſionis pœna negare permiſſum aſſerit, ipſe penitùs negâſſe ab illis incuſetur; reſuſcitatum, ſcil. iri mortuos. Teſtatur ipſe hoc in Epiſtola quadam Apologetica, hac de re conſcripta, in qua quid ab adverſariis ſibi objectum fuerit, & quid ipſe ſtatuat, fuſiùs enarrare profitetur; in eadem tamen vix aliis quam hîc & in l. Yad. Tract. Teſhubah, ſeu de pœnitentia, c. 8. Aliis tertiò, diu victuros, annos puta quadringentos aut quingentos, dein morituros, ac [b] rursus sub finem הישועה Salutis recuperatæ ad vitam æternam experrecturos: ad quam sententiam propendet R. Saadias, eam confirmans dictis illis, Instar dierum arboris dies populi mei, &c. &, Puer centum annorum morietur, &c. Has sententias in eo fundari putat Abarbenel, quod isti existimaverint eos qui resurrexerint nunquam morituros, sed in sæculum futurum intromittendos, ubi splendore Majestatis divinæ fruituri, & præmium factorum suorum corpore simul & animo laturi sint; ideo enim disputari ab illis, quid futurum sit iis, qui tunc temporis in vivis erunt, quomodo non ad æternitatem pari jure admittendi sint cum iis, qui revicturi sunt & mercedem accepturi; hos autem difficultatibus non paucis urgeri, à quibus ipse nullatenùs metuit, cùm præmium & pœnam spiritualia tantum afferat in mundo animarum, ubi splendore præsentiæ divinæ fruentur animæ, non tempore resurrectionis, quo qui resurgent, eodem modo se habituri, sunt, ac cæteri homines, atque omnes pariter in judicium vocandi: neque necesse esse ergò ut moriantur qui in vivis erunt, quo iterum resurgant, cùm sit intentio Dei mortuos ut vivos, non vivos ut mortuos facere: cui enim fini id esset? Quod ergò dicunt, Omni Israelitæ sors, &c. intelligendum de mundo animarum præmióque animæ proprio, promissiones longævitatis omnibus communes esse, tam iis qui resurrexerint, quam ejus sæculi aliis.

בפועל התחייה, De Efficiente reſurrectionis. Ineptas hîc quaſdam antiquorum Philoſophorum Aſtrologiæ deditorum ſententias recenſet, qui legis divinæ lumine non illuſtrati, cauſam efficientem reſurrectionis ſtatuerunt exercitum cœleſtem, dum certis temporibus certas accidere voluerint planetarum & ſignorum cœleſtium Syzygias, quarum vi univerſus rerum ſtatus neceſſariò corrumperetur, deinde ad priſtinum ſtatum rediret; mira de his ſenſiſſe Indorum ſapientes, quorum alii mundi durationem ſtatuerunt quater millies mille, & trecentorum & viginti mille annorum, quorum ſpatio in actum prodire poſſint omnia quæ ab initio creationis in potentia fuerunt: ac tum reverſura ſidera omnia, ad idem punctum in quo creata ſunt. Alii eam annorum tricies ſexies mille ſpatio definiunt, quo ſtellæ fixæ, toto orbe cœleſti peragrato, ad eam unde primo exierint partem reverſæ fuerint. Alii eidem annorum trecenta & ſexaginta millia tribuunt, juxta uniuſcujuſque ſphæræ partes, quarum partium ſingulæ mille annis inſerviunt: alii mundo annorum millia duodena juxta ſignorum Zodiaci numerum tribuunt: alii quadraginta novem millia, habitâ ratione ſeptem Planetarum, quorum ſingulos ſeptem mille annis mundo dominari putant: alii ſeptem tantum millia, ſecundum numerum etiam ſeptentarium planetarum, quorum unuſquiſque mundo mille annis imperet; millenario verò ſeptimo, qui penes Saturnum eſt, omnia corruptum ac deſtructum iri, donec ipſius dominii ſors exitum habeat, redeunte ad Jovem imperio millenario octavo, quo tempore renovabitur mundus & ad ſtatum priſtinum redibit. Hæc retuliſſe ait, R. Abrahamum, Bar Chaia, in l. Megalleh Hammegillah, ubi & ſententias antiquorum recenſet, quæ vel ſignis Zodiaci omnia tribuunt (nixæ על קן תהו ואבני בהו) vel planetis nihilo magis ſolidè. Quas omnes ſententias inde in mentem hominibus iſtis veniſſe autumat, quod à priſcis ſæculis aliquid per traditionem de reſurrectione aliquando futurâ accepiſſent. Quorum ſententiam hinc refutat, quod non aliam ſtatuant reſurrectionem, quam quâ proceſſu temporis redeant res ad eum quo ab initio hoc uſque tempus fuerunt ſtatum, vi cauſarum cœleſtium, ac motuum ipſarum; cum Moſis doctrina doceat mundo ſtatum ſuum retinente, reſurrecturos mortuos, eoſdémque individuos corpore & anima vitæ iſti ſimul reſtituendos, iiſque qui in vivis tunc erunt conſociandos; quod miraculum, dum ſimul reſuſcitabuntur mortui, ſimile (inquit) erit, ſine dubio, primæ Adami creationi, quia ſicut ipſe è pulvere creatus eſt, inſpirante in nares ipſius Domino halitum vitæ, ſtatúque perfecto productus, eúmque in finem creatus ut ſerviret Deo, ita futura eſt reſurrectio mortuorum, quam ideo nemo præter Deum, qui mundum de novo creavit, efficere poteſt; quo digitum intendit in Moſe dicens, Ego Ego ille, Ego morti trado, & vitæ reſtituo, i. Ego qui creavi, & ego qui reſuſcito. Quin & tradidiſſe ſapientes reſurrectionem (a) ex iis eſſe quæ non ſunt in legati alicujus manum tradita. Eliam & Eliſham non ſuâ ipſorum potentiâ mortuos reſuſcitâſſe, ſed hoc à Deo precibus impetrâſſe ut ipſe faceret, uti ex hiſtoria patet; cùm in aliis miraculis patrandis non legatur Eliſha ad preces confugiſſe, quia licet alia in mundo mira præſtandi poteſtas data ſit Prophetis, at non in animam & vitam hominis poteſtatem habet præter ſolum Deum qui illam creavit. Inde & in (b) benedictionibus ipſorum hoc Deo proprium adſcribitur: Tu potens in ſæculum Domine, qui vitæ mortuos reſtituis, &c. quia hoc in ipſius ſolum poteſtate eſt, atque ex iis in quibus potentia ipſius immediatè elucet.

posterius est resurrectione mortuorum, qui est perfectè justorum tantum, qui resurrectionis participes erunt, cùm in eo majora quam antea mandata præstando mereantur, cùm gradus prævius & inferior iste Omni Israelitæ contingat, & unusquisque ipsorum in Olam Haneshamoth, mundo animarum, gradum aliquem & sortem consecuturus sit, ut & חסידי אומות העולם aliarum gentium pii. Gradum istum inferiorem intra duodecim menses à morte vocari, ait, Gan Eden, quo nomine denotatur, מדרגה חסרה מתוך יב׳ חדשים ולאחר יב׳ חדשים יעלה למדרגה ממדרגות העולם הבא והיא מדרגת שלמות וכבוד, gradus imperfectior intra duodecim menses, post quos evehitur quis ad gradum quendam è gradibus seculi futuri, perfectionis, nempe & gloriæ, tum dici animas גנוזות תחת כסא הכבוד sub solio gloriæ reconditas esse. C. xxxiv. dicit animas justorum ex veterum sententia prioribus duodecem mensibus ascendere & descendere, nondum loco fixas, אבל לאחר יב׳ חדשים נשמה עולה ואינה יורדת, at isto spatio exacto ascendere spiritum ita ut non amplius descendat. Quo innui vult etiam justorum animas haud facilè statim à rerum terrenarum, quibus assuetæ sunt, studio avelli: tempus purgationis & defæcationis duodecim menses statui, כלומר זמן מקיף בר׳ תקופות שהם כוללים כל התלופות שיקרו בזמן q. d. tempus quo revolvuntur quatuor anni tempestates, quæ omnia temporis eventa continent. Ideoque intra duodecim menses potuisse Pythonissam Samuelem evocare. Solus Elias adhuc ascendere & descendere traditur. De istius sententiæ explicatione, scil. duodecim mensibus animas ascendere & descendere, consuli potest Ramban, c. Gamul, f. 103. Ejus quod dicunt, עד יב׳ חדש גופו קיים ונשמתו עולה ויורדת לאחר שנים עשר חדש גופו בטל ונשמתי עולה ולא יורדת, duodecim mensibus permanet corpus ipsius, animaque ascendit & descendit, postea corrumpitur corpus, animaque ascendens non amplius descendit, sensus est (inquit) tamdiu כח הגוף קיים vis corporis remanet, & anima inclinat, לדעתה ולמעשיה כאשר היתה, &c. ad opiniones & facta sua quibus assueta erat, quam [propensionem] post duodecim menses exuit, & לבשה מלאכות Angelicam naturam induit, & coronatur coronâ seculi futuri Shel Olam habba. Animas ergò istis duodecem mensibus quasi in Paradiso terrestri collocari à veteribus sensu vero, nec tamen absurdo; tempore autem resurrectionis revera Paradisum propriè dictum משמש עוד בגמול נשמי ממש, &c. inservire præmio corporeo simpliciter; ut ad Artic. 14. visuri sumus.

Juda Zabar. cap. 1. Manifeſtò declaratur (inquit) in Bereſhit Rabba reſurrectionem Iſraelitarum propriam eſſe, non aliis gentibus communem. Quod, inquit, & ratio ſuadet, quia non eſt creatus totus mundus niſi ob Iſraelem, ſicut dixerunt in Bereſh Rab: Manifeſto notum fuit illi qui dixit, & fuit mundus, peccaturum Adamum, quare ergò ipſum creavit? ideo quoniam egreſſura erat ex ipſo gens, ſc. Iſraelitæ, in quibus invenit נחת רוח refocillationem: ibi etiam, aiunt, Iſraelitas vocari ראשית principium, ſicut dictum eſt, Sanctitas Iſrael Domino, initium proventus ejus. Totus autem mundus non creatus eſt niſi ob principium, ſicut dictum eſt, Principio creavit Deus, &c. q. d. principii gratiâ totum creavit. Dixerunt etiam ibidem, Quo tempore venit Serpens ad Evam, inquinamentum ſuum in ipſam injecit, per quod intelligitur concupiſcentia mala, ideoque pœnæ mortis adjudicatum eſt ſemen ejus. Iſraelitis, qui in monte Sinai ſteterunt, i. e. Judah Zabara*, qui in plerisque Nachmanidem sequitur, rem planè dubiam relinquit, iis quæ jam antea laudavimus, verbis, quibus asserit, quod staturi sint improbi in judicio, haud in bonum hoc illis cessurum, sed in malum ut graviora, quam hactenus, patiantur הן בנפש הן בנוף ונפש יחד sive in anima, sive in corpore & anima simul: & quæ ex libro מגלה המגלה Megalleh Hammegillah, citat, scil. non posse fieri ut sit dies judicii simul cum resurrectione mortuorum, quòd resurrectio Israelitarum tantùm sit, non aliarum gentium, quod nisi aliorum etiam corpora resuscitarentur (quamvis hoc resurrectionis nomine haud appellandum censent) quid impedit quo minus eodem tempore quo vitæ restituerentur Israelitarum corpora, de animabus simul aliorum sententia ferretur? Quamvis autem ex istis, quæ vidimus, Nachmanidis verbis haud adeò perspicuè evincatur duplex, cujus meminimus, resurrectio, (nisi alibi eam adstruat) à Saadia tamen creditam liquet: utpote qui hæc haud alias facilia inter se conciliatu asserat, 1. pertinere resurrectionem mortuorum ad Israelitas solos; eósque justos, vel qui pœnitentiam egerint. 2. quod à quibusdam affirmatur, eos qui tempore resurrectionis in vivis erunt, postquam diu vixerint (annos puta quadringentos vel quingentos) morituros ולא יחיו עד העולם הבא nec rursum victuros usque ad seculum futurum, sibi valde probabile videri. 3. Illis Danielis verbis, Multi dormientium in terra expergiscentur, illi ad vitam æternam, illi ad contemptum sempiternum, non ita distribui eos qui vitæ restituentur, ut sint illorum alii in Gan Eden, alii in Gehenna, sed eos qui in sepulchris fuerint, ita ut multi illi qui expergiscentur, vitâ æternâ donentur, reliqui verò qui non expergiscentur, sint in contemptum perpetuum. 4. tam pœnam quam præmium mundi futuri, quæ utraque æterna, לגוף ולנפש יחד corpori & animæ simul contingere in loco, quem ei fini, postquam cœlos hos & terram hanc ad nihilum redegerit, creaturus est Deus, quæ licet his prorsus dissimilia, iisdem tamen nominibus cœli & terræ novorum indigitantur. Ubi & obiter sententiam ipsius de Cereth, sive animæ excidio, observare licet, quæ ut magis pateat, apponemus & ipsius responsum ad quæstionem, Quinam sint qui pœnis æternis (aliis alii, pro meritorum ratione) adjudicandi sint, viz. הכופרים והמשתפים ובעלי העבורות החמורות אשר לא עשו תשובה, Athei, Idololatræ, & transgressionum gravium rei qui pœnitentiam non egerint. De atheis, sive hæreticis, & Idololatris dici Isai. ult. Egredientur & videbunt cadavera prævaricantium in me, &c. peccatorum gravium reos haberi eos quibus decretum est in lege Cereth, [Excidium] aut mors à confessu judicum infligenda. כי כאשר יכרתו מעולם הזה יוציאו אלהכרת בעולם הבא מכין הצדיקים גם כן, Cùm enim excidio ex hoc mundo tolluntur, abeunt ut excidio tollantur in altero mundo etiam, è cœtu justorum, eo quod non egerint pœnitentiam. Idem & de duplici resurrectione affirmare videtur Aben Ezra, ad Daniel, c. xii. ubi justos, qui tempore Messiæ vitæ restituentur, iterum morituros, ac in judicio demum extremo alia vice resuscitandos asserit. Scien-

Sciendum (inquit) esse hâc etiam de re (a) varias sententias. Autumare enim Haggaonem, eos qui resurgent esuros, bibituros, uxores ducturos, uti fecerunt Sarephtanæ & Shunamitidis filii, quos resuscitavit Eliah, præceptísque implendis præmium mereri; dein ad gaudia mundi futuri translatum iri, ut ibi corpore simul & animâ delicientur, haudquaquam ex esu, cæterísve corporis deliciis voluptatem captantes, quo modo Moses in monte permansit: neque ibi amplius morituros, juxta illud Magistrorum, Mortui, quos resuscitaturus est Deus, non sunt amplius ad pulverem reversuri. Eodem modo scribere Ramban, illos qui denuo vivent, eodem modo se habituros, quo hujus mundi incolæ, sc. esuros, bibituros, Venerem exercituros, filios genituros, &c. qui in hoc tamen ab Haggaone discrepat, quod asserat, eos haud perpetuo victuros, sed multis diebus exactis rursum morituros, juxta illud Prophetæ, Instar dierum arboris dies populi mei. Longævitatem inde esse, quod tunc omnia ad corporis sustentationem spectantia justâ mensurâ & modo peragent, quo æquale materiæ & humoris radicalis temperamentum pro temporis, loci, aerisque ambientis ratione conservetur, quodque tranquillitate sine molestia & tristitia fruituri sint, unáque Domino in omnibus obsecuturi, cujus timor prolongat dies. Diu igitur tunc temporis victuros, necessariò tamen demum morituros, quoniam miraculi ratio in hoc consistit, quod animabus in corpora redeuntibus, ea, ut prius, denuo vivant, non quod naturâ ipsorum mutatâ immortalia reddantur quæ antea corruptioni obnoxia erant, aut membra nulli usui inservientia habeant, ut ita Deus quid frustraneum aut superfluum fecerit. Neque resurrectionem finem hominis ultimum, aut præmium ipsius verum esse, sed bonum illud justis reconditum, viz. præmium ipsorum spirituale animæque proprium in mundo animarum, quo demum revertentur animæ, materia ejusque accidentibus nudatæ, & ab iisdem separatæ. Neque enim putare Doctorem istum præceptorum mercedem corporis atque animæ simul esse, sed animæ, tantum; de hac voluptate [animæ] prolatum esse à R. illud, (b) In mundo futuro nec editur nec bibitur. At Ramban (inquit) non ita sentit, verùm post dies Messiæ revicturos mortuos, animabus particularibus in corpora particularia redeuntibus eodem modo quo in hoc mundo fuerunt: resuscitatos autem nec esuros, nec bibituros, neque voluptatibus corporeis ullatenus fruituros, sed è splendore majestatis divinæ corpore simul & anima voluptatem capturos, ut (c) Mosi, cùm in monte quadraginta diebus & noctibus substitit, nihil interim edens vel bibens, contigit, nec non Eliæ Prophetæ; & ad tempus resurrectionis spectare dictum Rabbæ, in mundo futuro nec editur nec bibitur, quia cùm ibi reperiantur corpora, necesse fuit ut indicaret, non tamen desideriis corporeis ferri. Et hunc in sensum dictum esse, Absorpta est mors in victoriam. Hanc esse Nachmanidis sententiam, quam amplectuntur etiam רבני צרפת Doctores Galliæ, nec non è חכמי ספרד Sapientibus Hispaniæ multi, eandémque Christianorum sententiam esse, viz. tempore resurrectionis resuscitatos, neque esuros neque bibituros, neque uxores ducturos, aut liberos genituros, neque denuo morituros, sed immortales permansuros, corpore & anima unitis, instar corporum cœlestium, eósque ab ipsis Glorificatos appellari; asserere etiam Nachmanidem ipsiúsque sequaces, non esse quod objiciatur, membra nutritioni & generationi inservientia, &c. tempore resurrectionis frustra futura, cùm Deus tunc temporis ea restituturus sit eo quo antea fuerant modo, ne ullatenus mutetur natura creationis: Præterea quod in forma humana magna lateant mysteria, ob quæ primo efformata est, & ob quæ continuari eam vult Deus ut perpetua sint, uti & in initio statuerat, cùm primò (d) Adamum formaret, etsi è materia compositus fuerit, si non peccâsset, ut immortalis esset.

Inter has duas sententias rectè dijudicare arduum & multi studii negotium putat: se tamen (e) ad Maimonidis partes inclinare, cujus sententiam multis se alibi argumentis confirmâsse scribit, quorum & nonnulla hîc adducit. 1. Quia si resuscitati membris suis & sensibus nihil agent, erúntque in se immortales, non iidem erunt qui mortui sunt, cum corpora & membra ipsorum non sint eadem quæ ante, cùm antea naturâ passibilia erant, פועלים כמזגיהם actiones secundùm temperamenti sui rationem edentia, corruptibilia, &c. jam naturæ planè diversæ, incorruptibilis & impassibilis, rationalis, nec tamen facultatibus suis aut sensibus utentis: non minus ergò à præsentibus discrepantia, quam cœlestia à corruptibilibus hisce. Erit ergò nova creatio non resurrectio mortuorum dicenda, magis quam figura in pariete Rubenem referens ipse Ruben dicenda, &c.

&c. alias eadem ejuſdèmque temperamenti corpora idem agerent & paterentur, quæ ante.

2. Quoniam ſi voluptas, quâ ibi fruentur, erit à ſplendore Majeſtatis divinæ ſpiritualis, non poſſunt eâ delectari corpora, cum unuſquiſque ſenſus ſenſibili proprio oblectetur, non aliquo quod cum eo non ſpecie, imò nec genere conveniat, uti odoratus è ſonis muſicis voluptatem non percipit, nec guſtus è formis pulchris; ſi ergò tum voluptatibus ſenſitivis non afficietur homo, quibus tandem fruetur corpus ipſius, cùm Majeſtas divina ſenſuum ejus objectum non ſit?

3. Quòd tum (ut objicit Maimonides) fruſtra eſſent ſenſus & facultates [corporeæ.] Cui objectioni non ſatisfacere ait Nachmanidis reſponſum, ſcil. Deum naturam creationis tunc mutaturum, & ſenſuum uſum & corruptibilitatem ablaturum; ſi enim in hoc quod præcipuum eſt mutabitur natura, quare non etiam reſpectu inſtrumentorum & membrorum? Quòd ſi in figurâ humanâ lateant myſteria aliqua, erunt illa in unoquoque membro & facultate ad finem aliquem directa; at ſublato fine futura ſunt inſtrumenta iſta neceſſariò fruſtranea. Quod etiam adducit de Adamo, nihili eſſe. Nam licèt dictum ſit, Quo die comederis ex illo, morieris, non hoc indicari, (fatente ipſo Nachmanide) tum futurum eum corruptibilem, quòd ſi non peccaſſet, non fuiſſe unquam moriturum, cùm enim è contrariis compoſitus fuerit, neceſſario & moriturus erat. Nihil aliud innui igitur verbis iſtis, quam morti ipſum ante diem ſuum obnoxium fieri peccato ſuo. Hoc ex maledicti forma patere, donec redieris, &c. nulla mutationis naturæ mentione factâ. Sapientes igitur, cùm dicant Adamum, ſi non peccâſſet, haudquaquam moriturum fuiſſe, mortem animæ intelligere. Ita divinum [illum] R. Simeonem Ben Jochai ſcripſiſſe, ſi non peccâſſet Adam, futuram fuiſſe vitam ipſius longiorem, demum tamen moriturum fuiſſe ratione temperamenti ſui & materiæ ſuæ, quia ſpiritus ſupernè deveniens non dat corpori permanentiam & immortalitatem, cùm ipſum naturâ ſuâ corruptibile & è contrariis compoſitum fuerit, bonitatem tamen diſpoſitionis intellectualis dies prolongare. Suppoſito tamen Adamum immortalem futurum fuiſſe ſi non peccâſſet, neceſſe eſt, ut dicamus Deum ipſum creâſſe temperamento ad æquale proximè accedente, adeò ut eo quod præcepit Deus regimine uſus poſſibile eſſet ut perduraret: at poſtquam rebellâſſet affectibus corporeis indulgens, rebúſque materialibus implicatus fuiſſet, exiiſſe è temperamenti æqualitate, & morti facile obnoxium factum. Nihilominus tam ipſum, quam ejus ſeculi homines, diu vixiſſe, quod à temperamento iſto parentis primi propius abeſſent, à quo ſucceſſu temporis longius receſſerunt poſteri, donec ad terminum infra quem deſcendi non poſſit quod ad humidum radicale pervenerint, eum, ſcil. quo nos jam ſumus, quibus vitæ terminus ſeptuaginta anni, neque enim ob diluvium (ut putant Nachmanides aliíque) abbreviatam fuiſſe hominum vitam, &c. Corpora ergò ſi eadem reſurgent, eodem futura temperamento, ideoque non ejuſdem cum corpore Adami rationis, ſed corruptioni magis obnoxia. Quod de Elia dicitur, ipſum in cœlum ſublatum fuiſſe; illud figurate dictum, ipſum enim ad ſupremam aëris regionem evectum, ubi igne abſumptis corpore & veſtibus ligata eſt anima ipſius in faſciculo vitæ apud Dominum, uti ſcribit R. David Kimchius: Quòd ſi concedatur miraculum illud in Elia ob ipſius ſanctimoniam, & quod קנא לאלהיו magno zelo Dei gloriam proſecutus eſt, non tamen convenit ut idem toti hominum multitudini futurum in reſurrectione credamus, ut nec idem quod Moſi contigit quo ad legem recipiendam idoneus eſſet, ad quadraginta dies, itane omnibus eventurum dicemus non quadraginta diebus tantum, ſed in omnem æternitatem? Quin & textus qui mortem ſublatum iri affirmare videntur, ſi penitius introſpiciantur, nihil tale indicare, e. g. Abſorpta eſt mors לנצח in æternum; illud enim vel de tempore captivitatis intelligendum, non amplius morituros Iſraelitas manu inimicorum, vel morte innui afflictionem, exponente Davide Kimchio; quod ſi de reſurrectione exponatur, dicendum tunc quando reſurgent mortui ſublatum iri falſam illam [quorundam] ſententiam, quâ mortem perpetuam fore credunt, i. e. mortuos perpetuo detenturam ne ampliùs ad vitam revertantur; ut valeat Abſorpta eſt mors in perpetuum, &c. ſublata eſt hæc ex animis hominum ſententia, mortem eſſe perpetuam, &c. & Deum omnem lachrymam abſterſurum, &c. quod tum non amplius lugebunt mortuos, vel Iſraelitarum opprobrium ablaturum, manifeſtatione veritatis, &c. nequaquam autem dici dici eos qui reſurgent non amplius morituros. Quod ad dictum Angeli [Illi ad vitam æternam,] non indicari eo immortalitatem, ſed tempus diuturnum, ut cum dicitur, Serviet ei in ſeculum, atque ubi dicitur, Ut ſtellæ in ſeculum & æternum; ſeculum & æternum ibi dici de ſtellis, non de illis qui multos ad juſtitiam convertent, neque enim illis promiſiſſe ipſum aliud, quam fulſuros ipſos in gradu ſuo, cùm ſint corruptioni obnoxii, inſtar ſtellarum, quæ naturâ immortales ſunt & perpetuo duraturæ.

Quod ad teſtimonium, quod adducunt è Perek Chelek: Mortui quos vivificaturus eſt Deus, non iterum in pulverem reverſuri ſunt, illud דעת יחיד Unius eſſe magiſtri ſententiam, quæ in Midraſh Eliæ cujuſdam occurrit, ſtatimque in Gemara eidem contradici, dum aiunt, Diſcimus à mortuis quos reſuſcitavit Ezekiel, ſcil. illos ad pulverem reddiiſſe, ac ſic in reſurrectione futurum; de quibus quidam dicunt משל היה parabolam fuiſſe: alii, eos in terra denuò vixiſſe, liberos genuiſſe, &c. affirmante coràm, R. Juda, ſe ex eorum poſteris fuiſſe, &c. illos ergò, qui parabolam fuiſſe autumant, nihil hic probari dicere, ac in pulverem redituros negare; ſecus qui veram hiſtoriam, idem enim reſurrecturis, quod contigit illis, futurum: Atque hanc ſententiam, tum majoris authoritatis in Talmude doctorum eſſe, tum plurium, cum altera illa ſententia ſingularis ſit; at הלכה כרבים juxta plures ſtatuendum eſt. Deinde verba illa, Non ſunt in pulverem reverſuri, aliter etiam exponi poſſe, ſcil. Non voluiſſe ipſum illos non morituros, ſed cùm è materia compoſiti ſint, ac libero arbitrio prædiți, non illos rebus materialibus inhiaturos, nec iterum peccaturos, uti in vita priori; quia malum, privatio, & peccatum à materia ſunt; atque hoc indicari verbis iſtis, Non reverſuri ſunt in pulverem, quod è teſtimonio Scripturæ ibi allato patere dicit; quod eſt, Et qui relinquetur in Sione & Jeruſalem, Sanctus dicetur. Sanctitatem enim eſſe ſeparationem à peccato, permanſuros ergo eos in ſanctitate, nec amplius peccaturos; quam expoſitionem ſequi licet, quamvis non eo ſenſu ſumatur in Perek Chelek.

Quod ad teſtimonium autem illud, quod adducit Ramban, è dicto Rabba, In ſeculo futuro nec editur nec bibitur, expoſuit Rab. ut dictum de mundo animarum, non de reſurrectione: Quod & neceſſariò ſequitur è teſtimonio quod adducit [ſcil. ubi dicitur] Et viderunt Deum, ac ederunt & biberunt: Quia manifeſtum eſt, non locutam ibi Scripturam de reſurrectione, ſed de primoribus Iſraelitarum, qui apprehenſione & viſione ſuâ eodem modo gaudio & lætitiâ affecti ſunt, ac ſi ediſſent & bibiſſent, uti & Onkelos verba expoſuit. Hinc patet magni Doctoris [ſcil. Rambam] ſententiam veram eſſe, uti & aliis rationibus probâſſe ſe ait in l. Zedek Olamim; alia etiam ſe Antiquorum dicta inveniſſe quibus idem probetur, viz. cùm in cap. Chelek dicit R. Juchanan, Unde in lege probatur reſurrectio mortuorum? Inde quod dictum eſt, Et dabitis ex ipſo Terumah Ahroni Sacerdoti: At Aaron tum mortuus erat; docet ergò, futurum ut illi detur tempore reſurrectionis, unde liquet, tunc reſuſcitatos dona accepturos, eſuros, bibituros: Idem probari ex eo quod dicit R. Simai, Unde probatur ex lege reſurrectio mortuorum? Ex eo quod dicitur, Et confirmabo fœdus meum cum Illis, cum Illis dicitur, non Vobiſcum, unde liquet ipſos reſurrecturos, terram poſſeſſuros, eámque inter ſe partituros, eo quem deſcripſit Ezekiel modo. Miratur ergò quid virôs iſtos perfectos adduxerit, ut reſuſcitatos corporibus integris gaudere crederent, nec tamen corporis functiones præſtare, è materia compoſitos eſſe, nec tamen morti & corruptioni obnoxios, cùm nec illius meminerit Scriptura, nec traditione à Sapientibus acceptum ſit, nec aliis illud argumentis, quam quæ hîc recenſuit, confirmare poſſint, & præterea res ſit ab intellectu planè aliena; quin & ſi hoc ita foret, majus eſſet ipſâ reſurrectione miraculum, ſcil. ut fieret quod materiale eſt ſpirituale, manens interim materiale; & corruptibile, incorruptibile & immortale, & quomodo Prophetæ & Pſalmiſtæ Spiritu Sancto afflati, qui de reſurrectione locuti ſunt, nullam omnino hujus rei mentionem facerent? aut quomodo Sapientes qui Cap. Chelek de reſurrectione diſputarunt, num è lege probari poſſet, hujus fundamenti magis miri non meminere, nec dixere: Ei qui illud negaverit, nullam eſſe ſortem in ſeculo futuro, ut de articulo reſurrectionis dixerunt. In ſumma, quod ad res, quæ in miraculorum magnorum numero ſunt, non teneri nos aliis ex ipſis fidem adhibere, quam quibus vel teſtimonium perhibet lex, & quæ promiſerunt Prophetæ aut quæ Doctores ſancti traditione acceperunt: Si cui autem ſomnium fuerit aut opinio pertinax, tinax, non pro vero per traditionem accepto amplexandum eſt. Quod ad Chriſtianos, ipſorum fidem farraginem quandam eſſe rerum impoſſibilium, ideoque libenter alia etiam impoſſibilia ipſos amplecti; dicere enim ipſos Patres ſanctos poſt mortem in Paradiſum non admiſſos fuiſſe, ſed in gradu medio in quo nec præmio nec pœnæ locus eſt, qui ipſorum lingua limbus dicitur, manſiſſe, donec adveniens ſalvator ipſorum, quem Meſſiam vocant, ipſos inde eductos in Paradiſum introduxerit; aſſerere eoſdem Jeſum Deum ſuum incorporatum fuiſſe, & poſt mortem revixiſſe, dein in cœlum evectum ibi corpore & animâ ſedere neque edentem neque bibentem neque morti obnoxium. Idem etiam affirmare illos de Maria matre ipſius; ſedere, ſc. ipſam corpore & anima ad dextram ipſius cum ſpiritualibus quos glorificatos appellant. Hæc cum in fidei ſuæ fundamentis credant, idem etiam in iis quæ ad reſurrectionem futuram ſpectant credere. Non ita Jacob, nec cogitationes noſtræ ut cogitationes eorum, nec viæ noſtræ ut viæ eorum. Quare ergo deciperemus nos ipſos omnibus abominationibus gentium iſtarum, ut dicamus animas in mundo animarum gradu imperfecto manere, nec operum ſuorum mercedem accipere, donec adveniente Meſſia noſtro & viventibus mortuis prodeant animæ è loco iſto imperfecto ad percipiendam voluptatem divinam, ut affirmant gentes de animabus ſanctorum ſuorum, necnon ut credamus, tempore reſurrectionis victura corpora ſine cibo & potu, neque filios genitura, neque amplius moritura: eademque prorſus impoſſibilia quæ credunt Chriſtiani de Deo ſuo ipſiúſque matre, credent gentis noſtræ ſapientes de millies millenis millibus myriadum qui tempore reſurrectionis revicturi ſint? Quid paleæ cum tritico, & quare errares, fili mi, cum extraneâ? & quid nobis cum ſententiis eorum infirmis uredine tactis? an non de hoc dictum eſt ובילדי נכרים ישפיקו nec non commiſti ſunt cum gentibus & opera ipſorum didicerunt. Fides perfecta nec addi ſibi quid, nec detrahi patitur. Illud ergò quod credere oportet, eſt, Reſurrecturos mortuos cum corporibus, facultatibus, & ſenſibus ſuis, & cum revixerint, ad eadem præſtanda corpora ſua adhibere, quæ alii homines, niſi quod juſti futuri ſint, peccati timentes, eodémque gradu quo Adam protoplaſtus primo creabatur antequam peccâſſet. Dixerunt in Eica Rabba, Renova dies noſtros, ut olim, inſtar dierum Adami primi, de quo dictum eſt quod habitaverit מקדם ab antiquo; atque hoc de reſurrectione futura dixerunt, ſcil. futuros illos, qui reſurrexerint, eodem gradu quo fuit Adam, ac demum morituros atque in mundum animarum tranſmigraturos, ut operum ſuorum mercedem reportent, juxta normam judicii; quo ſpectavit Doctor Miſnicus dicendo, Neque perſuadeat tibi affectus tuus eſſe in inferno refugium tibi: quo vult, Ne ſeducat te concupiſcentia tua mala, dicendo, Ede & bibe, cras enim morituri ſumus, neque ſunt opera & ſcientia & rationis redditio in inferno quo vadis, quia ibi refugium tibi erit contra judicium divinum. Scias aliter ſe habere, quoniam vel te invito, formatus es (quo innuit reſurrectionem, cujus reſpectu dicitur Deus hominem eodem modo quo ſe habuit è pulvere formare,) & te invito naſceris (vult, te invito hoc credes, quia tunc tempore reſurrectionis mortuorum eris homo perfectus ut Adam cum primo in lucem produceretur) ac vives (ea, ſcil. exercens opera corporea quæ ſolent vivi, edendo, bibendo, &c.) & poſtea morieris, (quia, ſcil. poſt reſurrectionem denuo morientur qui reſurrexerint) ac in mundo animarum rationem redditurus es, viz. ut præmium in Gan Eden accipias, vel pœnam in Gehenna ſubeas, ſecundum opera, &c. Hæc Abarbinel. Quibus omnia ad reſurrectionem ſpectantia, & quæ de eâ ab aliis dici ſolent, ſe complexum eſſe aſſerit; rectéque ſolviſſe Rambam loca Scripturæ, quæ reſurrectionem negare videantur, dicendo, הם מספרים טבע המציות הנהוג והנודע, Ordinariam rerum naturam & vulgò notam declarare illa, non autem negare reſurrectionem, quæ fit על דרך הפלא ratione miraculi, &c. alibi tamen fuſius ſe de iiſdem rebus ſcripſiſſe, adeò ut ſint hæc מעט מהרבה è multis pauca.

(a) In hac præcipuè radice totius de hoc articulo, viz. reſurrectione mortuorum, controverſiæ cardo vertitur. Ac certè, qui ipſius Nachmanidis verba conſuluerit, merito dubitaverit num ab Abarbinele, eſuros & bibituros qui revicturi ſunt, penitùs negâſſe, rectè aſſeratur. Aliud enim innuere videntur illa, quibus objicienti cui uſui futura ſint in ſeculo futuro corporis membra, cùm ibi nec edatur nec bibatur, &c. reſpondet, reſumpta fuiſſe membra iſta, לזמן תחית המתים לצורך השמושים הנזכרים, In tempus reſurrectionis mortuorum ad functiones memoratas præſtandas, dein ea haud denuo abolere voluiſſe Deum. Eodem ſpectat & quod ex ipſo laudavimus, Inſerviturum etiam Gan Eden, ſeu Paradiſum propriè ſic dictum, præmio quod tempore reſurrectionis etiam corpore percipietur: quod confirmat dicto veterum, quo dixerunt, עתיד הקב"ה לעשות סעודה לצדיקים בגן עדן, Futurum ut Deus convivium juſtis inſtruat in Paradiſo, ipſum in medio ipſorum ſeſſurum, ſingulis ipſum digito monſtrantibus, ſicut dictum eſt, Ecce iſte eſt Deus noſter. Atque hoc eſſe עונג ושכר עתיד בזמן התחייה voluptatem & præmium, quæ futura ſunt tempore reſurrectionis: & illam Majeſtatis divinæ quaſi digito demonſtrationem eſſe apprehenſionem gradus & voluptatis unionis cùm ipſa inter gaudia corporea, quaſi dicat, iſtius ſeculi homines pertingere ad gradum Moſis, cujus anima in tantum ſuperior corpore evaſit, ut facultates corporales in ipſo extinguerentur, & continuè Spiritu Sancto indueretur, acſi viſus & auditus ipſius oculo animæ tantum perageretur, nequaquam mediante oculo corporeo, &c. Ex his conſtat, aliud ipſi eſſe tempus, ſeu dies reſurrectionis, aliud ſeculum futurum, atque illo edi, bibi, aliáſque percipi voluptates corporeas, quæ hoc demum prorſus abolitæ ceſſabunt. Nec tamen ipſum prorſus idem ſentire cum Haggaone arbitror, quia Haggaon diuturnius his rebus ſpatium concedat, annorum forſan quadringentorum vel quingentorum plus minus; at Nachmanides breviuſculum, utpote qui Judicium illud magnum, quod tempus reſurrectionis & ſeculum futurum diſcriminat, ſtatim reſurrectionem conſecuturum (ut ex ſuperioribus vidimus) autumet: utpote quod futurum ſit יום מתחלת ימות התחייה die aliquo ſub initium reſurrectionis, ipſam momento haud perficiendam, ut videtur ratus, & tam תחיית המתים reſurrectionem mortuorum quam ימות המשיח dies Meſſiæ, in quibus & illa futura ſit, hujus mundi bonis accenſens. Sed nec hoc modo plenariam ſententiarum diſcrepantium enumerationem nobis exhibuiſſe videtur Abarbinel: quartam enim nobis præbere videntur Aben Ezræ ad Daniel c. xii. verba, ubi à Daniele affirmari ſibi videri ait, שהצדיקים שמתו בגלות יחיו בבוא הגואל כי עליהם כתוב כימי עץ ימי עמי ואז יתענגו בלויתן ובזיז ובבהמות וימותו פעם שנית וחיו בתחית המתים בהיותם בעולם הבא שאינם אוכלים ושותים רק נהנים מזיו שכינה, juſtos qui mortui ſunt in captivitate revicturos, cùm advenerit Redemptor, cum de illis ſcriptum ſit, Sicut dies arboris dies populi mei; ac tunc ex Leviathane, & [ave] Ziz, & Behemoth delicias capturos, dein iterum

Quadrimembrem ergò opinionum varietatem habemus, 1 Haggaonis, reſuſcitandos eſuros, bibituros, uxores ducturos, &c. dein poſtquam diu in terris vixerint, in mundum futurum, ubi nihil tale amplius præſtabunt, transferendos, nullâ mortis lineâ interpoſitâ. 2. Rabbi Abrahami Ben Ezræ, eos è rebus quidem terrenis cibo, ſc. potu, &c. voluptatem capturos, morituros tamen rurſus, ac denuo ad æterna ſeculi futuri gaudia reſuſcitandos, ubi nullus erit iſtiuſmodi deliciis locus. 3. Maimonidis, eadem illos, quæ hujus ſeculi homines, ídque diu inſtrumentorum corporeorum ope, præſtituros, quæ tamen poſt annos aliquammultos nunquam reſumenda, iterum deponent. 4. Nachmanidis, qui non aliter ab Haggaone diſcrepare videtur, quam quod breviori forſan ſpatio voluptates iſtas corporeas, poſt reſurrectionem captandas, circumſcribat, ac his (vel Haggaeni ſeorſim) R. Ahron Levita & R. Juda Zabara accenſendi; cum R. Ahron (referente Juda iſto) ſtatuat nullam reſurrectioni mortem ſucceſſuram, verum reſuſcitatos diu, ut qui ſeculis olim mundi prioribus, quantum patietur de millenario ſexto, quod tunc temporis ſupererit, in terra Iſraelitide victuros, patente ipſis libero in Paradiſum, quotieſcunque ipſum viſere libuerit, ingreſſu, cujus fructibus, aëre puriore, ac divinæ majeſtatis præſentiâ magis conſpicuâ deliciabuntur, donec demum puriſſima fiant ipſorum corpora à craſſioribus materiæ fæcibus purgata, adeo ut glorioſa admodum evadant, cibi & potus haud amplius indiga. Ipſe verò R. Juda, ut ipſis eas quæ è cibo & potu percipiuntur voluptates tribuit, nec eas quæ è toro conjugali denegat; ita num liberos procrearuri ſint ideo dubitare videtur, quod cum illis in hoc mundo iis tantum annis qui de millenario ſexto ſuperſunt degendum ſit, quid gravidis & infantibus qui innumeri neceſſario erunt, fiet millenario ſeptimo, quo Deus מחדש עולמו renovaturus ſit mundum ſuum, non adeo facile ſtatuatur. Neſcio demum an non & ab aliâ adhuc ſententiâ procedat gloſſa iſta *R. Hoc uterque tam Maimonides quam Nachmanides ad ſententiam ſuam confirmandam adducit; ille, quia nihil ibi eorum quæ membrorum corporis miniſterio præſtantur exercetur, nec ipſa corporis membra reperiri concludit. Abſurdiſſimum enim Maimonidi videtur aſſerere fruſtra retineri hæc membra ac eſſe homini os, ſtomachum, jecur, & membra, procreationi idonea, nec tamen eum edere, bibere, aut liberos gignere, & quod riſu excipit, quærens cujus tandem formæ corpora ſibi fingant qui hæc aſſerant, num, כדוריים מקשיים או עמודים או מעוקבים, Sphærica, ſolida, cylindrica, vel quadrata, vel conica. In hac precationis formula, dum ea, quibus probari reſurrectionem mortuorum putant, Scripturæ loca ſummatim recenſet, obſervari poteſt, & inter cætera enumerari Mic. v. 5. Et erit iſte pax, Aſſur cum venerit in terram noſtram, & calcaverit in ædibus noſtris, והקמנו עליו שבעה רעים ושמנה נסיכי אדם, Et ſtatuemus adverſus eum ſeptem paſtores, & octo principes hominum. Adducitur idem & à *R. At Nachmanides legit, והוא עתיד להקים אתכם לחיי העולם הבא בדין, Et qui reſuſcitaturus eſt vos ad vitam mundi futuri in judicio. Ideo enim formulam hanc citat, ut inde Olam Habba, ſeu mundi futuri ſtatum, qui propriè ſic dicitur, alium eſſe ab eo, quo ſtatim poſt mortem fruuntur, probet. Mutata eſt forſan ab eâ, quæ olim fuit, formâ, controverſiæ iſtius, inter Rambam & Ramban, gratiâ. Digreſſionis hujus anſam nobis præbuit Manaſſis Ben Iſrael cenſura, quâ ſententiam iſtam, denuo, ſcil. morituros, qui reſurrectionis mortuorum participes facti fuerint, ſingularitatis arguit; antequam autem revertamur, non poſſumus quin & ab ipſo quæramus, quoſnam ipſe ſibi aſſentientes habeat, dum quos immortalitatem induiſſe fatetur, novi, ſcil. mundi (ut ſeculum futurum vocat) incolas, iiſdem tamen animalibus ac naturalibus actionibus vacaturos, & operam daturos ſtatuit, quibus in hac vita homines, cibo, ſcil. & potu uſuros, generationíque prolis vacaturos, &c. ut ipſius verbis (l. 3. c. 9. de Reſurrectione mortuorum) utar. In diverſum certe abit tam ab iis qui Maimonidis, quam qui Nachmanidis partes ſequuntur. Illi enim, quod abſurdum dictu putant, eos qui immortales, atque incorruptibiles facti ſint, ea, quæ mortalitati ſuſtentandæ inſerviant, amplius exercere, ipſa tollunt corpora; hi vero, dum nullâ ratione denegari corporibus æternitatis præmium exiſtimant, ne tamen corruptionis atque incorruptionis leges miſcere ac confundere videantur, eam ſubire mutationem volunt, quæ ipſa haud amplius rebus iſtis, quibus vel individua vel ſpecies, quamdiu mortalitati ſubjacent, conſerventur, indigere, vel eas exercere patiatur. Manaſſe verò, & immortalia eſſe, & ſimul ea præſtare, quibus mortalitatis defectibus ſubvenitur, credi vult; quod neſcio an præter ipſum è doctioribus quiſpiam. Nam quod ipſe hanc opinionem fuiſſe ait R. Saadiæ Gaon, R. Moſis Ægyptii, R. Simbonis Bar Semah, & Iſaaci Abarbenelis, ex iis, quæ jam à nobis allata ſunt, minimè aſſerendum videtur; cum illi reſuſcitatos quidem in reſurrectionis (quod volunt) ſeculo edere, bibere, aliáque id genus exercere affirmant, at in Olam Habba, ſeu mundo quem futurum vocant, ea locum habere prorſus negant. Hæc enim, ex ipſorum ſententia, duo ſecula ſunt immane quantum inter ſe diſcrepantia. Laudat ipſe, l. 3. c. 1. R. Abraham Bilbag, qui in lib. Derec Emunah " probat horam reſurrectionis mortuorum " & continuam & perpetuam vitam, " quæ poſtea ſequetur, dici etiam mun- " dum futurum." Ita certe author iſte, qui idem Filius Shem Tob (ut non ſit (puto) neceſſe duos libros eodem titulo inſignitos, alterum authore R. Abraham, alterum R. Shem Tob. ut in Cl. Viri bibliotheca Rabbinica fit, ſtatuere) inter cæteras nominis ejus acceptiones, & hanc, quæ omnium maxime propria, recenſet, l. 3. c. 4. at nec ille, nec alius, puto, quiſpiam melioris notæ doctorum, in mundum iſtum ejuſque gaudia admiſſos, vel iis, quibus hæc vita ſuſtentatur, opus habere, vel ex iis voluptatem captare autumat. Fatebitur Maimonides delicias vitæ futuræ convivio quidem à veteribus aſſimilari, at ibi reverâ edi ac bibi afferentem quanto cum ſtomacho ac riſu exciperet? multo magis, ubi nemo jam amplius moriturus eſt, eum exerceri actum, qui niſi ſpeciei conſervandæ neceſſarius eſſet, unicum ferè hujus vitæ opprobrium duceret? Illi cum cæteris ubique in ore eſt illud antiquorum, In mundo futuro nec editur, nec bibitur, nec procreantur liberi, cujus mirum nullam à Manaſſe mentionem factam vel rationem habitam eſſe. Non alia ergò videtur, quam ipſe amplexus eſt, ſententia, quam illa quam ההמון ſeu Vulgi appellat Juda Zabara, & quam אין צירך לפנים conſideratione accuratiori indignam putat, utpote nec Scripturæ, nec traditioni, nec intellectui conſentaneam, ſcil. eſſe, תחית המתים לצדיקים עולמית כגוף ונפש באכילה ושתיה ואולי יהיה זה בגן עדן, &c. [ſtatum] reſurrectionis mortuorum juſtis æternùm corpore ſimul & animâ [fruendum] dum edent ac bibent, idque forſan in Paradiſo [terreſtri] cujus fructibus jucundiſſimis ad ſatietatem veſcentes, aereque ſaluberrimo recreati, omnique labore vacui, perpetuis fruentur deliciis. Imo addit Manaſſe de liberorum procreatione, quod adhuc ſententiam iſtam ab intellectu remotiorem facit, atque hæc dum asserit, uti sibi necessarias ita & solutu difficiles reddit, quas adducit, quæstiones, primò illam, l. 2. c. 10. Quomodo, scil. eos omnes, qui resurgent, capere possit orbis terrarum, nedum angustiores terræ (quam vocant) Sanctæ, limites. Si enim omnes quotquot unquam in terris vixerint, resurrecturos affirmaret, eosque in terrâ habitaturos, sufficeret forsan illud quod affert responsum, omnes terræ plagas jam ignotas retegendas atque habitabiles futuras; at si vel pauciores resuscitandos autumet, eos tamen & ipsos perpetuo victuros, filiosque & filias, qui & alios gignant, in omnia seculorum secula genituros, non video quomodo spatium hoc molis terrestris terminis non adeò immensis circumscriptum, tantæ hominum multitudini, quantam ab istis, æternitatis duratione continuâ, orituram facilè concipiamus, capiendis olim sufficiat. Secundo & alteram, quam, l. 3. c. 10. movet, utrum, scil. ibi peccato locus sit? Cui & obnoxios illos, qui istiusmodi rebus implicantur, non mirum est si statuat, quamvis maxima ex parte proclives futuros dicat ad virtutem. Ac R. Saadiam in partes vocat, quem in eadem opinione fuisse ait, Deum, scil. non ablaturum hominibus liberum arbitrium. At loquitur interim Haggaon iste de seculo resurrectionis, seu statu quem mundo futuro prævium statuit, ad quem neminem à Deo admitti vult, nisi quem certo præsciverit, durante ipso, non peccaturum, aut commissurum aliquid, quo עולם הגמול seculo retributionis excidat, eóve indignus fiat: ei verò nihil esse cum hujus vitæ rebus commune ubique asserit, cum de illo ipso seculo, & de præmium jam consecutis loquatur Manasseh. Sed hæc obiter. Ad Abarbenelem redeo. Observandum restat illud, cujus præcipuè causâ fusiorem hanc inter ipsius & aliorum sententias collationem instituimus, scil. hoc ab ipso imprimis Nachmanidi vitio verti, quod sententiam Christianorum doctrinæ affiniorem, & quam ab ipsis partim hausisse videatur, amplexus sit; aliter enim haud facile fuisse, ab ipso an à Maimonide veritas staret, dijudicare. Minimè verò prætereundum, quam iniquè agat, dum quo Christianorum de resurrectione mortuorum dogma absurdi multum in se continere suis suadeat, una cum ipso, alia nihil ad eum articulum spectantia, nec è Scripturis hausta, nec ab omnibus credita proponit, eáque omnia è fundamentis fidei ab ipsis haberi asserit; qualia sunt quæ de Limbo patrum, & de Maria Christi matre in cœlum jam corpore evectâ, ibique ad filii sui dextram sedente, ab ipsis asserta refert. Ob hæc Christianorum religionem suis non aliter quam ut rerum planè impossibilium & creditu absurdissimarum meram farraginem visum iri minimè dubitans, facile ab ipsis consecuturum se sperat, ut quicquid a Christianis credatur, vel ob id ipsum sine ulteriori examine respuant, atque ut à vero alienum rejiciant. Quid paleæ (enim) cum tritico, & quare errares cum extranea, mi fili? Quid nobis cum eorum sententiis (inquit,) &c. Hoc enim nisi ab ipsis obtinuerit, ut quicquid Christiani pro vero habent, illi ideò falsum reputent, satis inpræsentiarum erit ad ipsius arrogantiam retundendam, fidémque apud ipsos minuendam, dixisse, ea quæ, præter ipsorum de resuscitandorum statu doctrinam, recenset, nec universalem apud Christianos fidem obtinere, nec ullum inter fidei articulos locum habere. Quam autem ut proximam ad veritatem viam, quam longissimè à Christianorum doctrina recedere, laudat, quam minimè tuta sit, ipse hâc ratione paleam pro tritico, errorem pro vero, amplexus ostendit. Nollem ego cum ipsis talionis lege agi, aut hanc certam nobis veri indagandi regulam statui, ut quicquid à Judæis (quamvis ad errores fœdissimos prolapsis) asseritur, aut ad eorum placita accedit, pro falso habeatur. Hoc tamen monitu haud intempestivum duco, ne paleam ab ipsis pro tritico obtrudi nobis patiamur, aut errores & opiniones minus sanas ab eorum traditionibus magis quam à sincero Dei verbo pendentes facile imbibamus. Quod vereor ne illi fecerint qui de Christi, Sanctorúmque cum ipso in terris regno, quo durante rebus iterum terrenis (ad meliores dudum recepti) se immisturi, atque ex iis voluptatem captaturi sint, multa nullo Scripturæ fundamento nixa, & credunt & aliis obtrudunt, quæ (ni fallor) omnia à Judæis, primum, quo olim comparuit, Christi adventum, negantibus atque eludere satagentibus, originem traxisse reperientur. Ab iis enim, quæ Judæi de seculo resurrectionis, quod futurum ante millenarii sexti finem statuunt, & diebus Messiæ qualis ipsis fingitur, vix latum unguem discedunt. Rectè in hoc Abarbenel, Fides perfecta nec addi sibi nec detrahi patitur. Regulam fidei perfectam à Christo accepimus, nihil nisi quod ipsi consonum sit amplecti, à quibuscunque tandem tandem authoribus commendatum, decebit. Quid paleæ cum tritico? Qui ſomnium habet, narret ut ſomnium.

Ut verò tandem capiti huic, quod vel ipſum in juſti tractatus molem excrevit, finem imponamus: [u] His quatuordecim radicibus omnia ſe complexum ait Abarbenel, quæ de reſurrectione quæri, & differi ſolent; quibus addidimus nos ex aliis non pauca, quæ lectori forſan faſtidium pariant, nec tamen quid Judæi de hoc articulo ſtatuant ſcire cupienti ſatisfaciant. Neque enim id polliceri poſſum, pro ea quæ apud ipſos eſt opinionum varietate, miráque inconſtantia. Inter eos quibus ad ipſorum doctrinam eruendam ducibus uſi ſumus, ſi Joſephi non meminerimus, haud mirum; cum ille, dum ſectarum, quas commemorat, de altero ſeculo ſententiam referens, verbis uſus videtur magis ad Græcorum, Romanorúmque mores & aures accommodatis, quam quæ legis Judaicæ alumnus intelligeret, vel ſenſibus ſuis exprimendis commoda judicaret. Nobis cum iis res eſt qui traditionum Talmudicarum ſequaciores ſunt, nec ad חכמה יונית [x], ſeu aliarum gentium diſciplinam diverterint: In quorum placitis referendis ſatis pro inſtituti noſtri ratione eſt, nos bonâ fide egiſſe, nec ſponte quicquam celaſſe, ſecius retuliſſe, eive addidiſſe vel detraxiſſe, quo cujuſpiam ſententia aliter ac ab ipſo tradita eſt ſonare videretur, vel cuipiam fraudem feciſſe. Autoritates quibus ſententias ſuas confirmant, atque inter ſe certant, omnes referre ut longum nimis fuiſſet, [y] ita (ipſo monente Maimonide) ad rem parum. Si interim pro tritico paleam, pro theſauro carbones, eruiſſe videamur; ipſis id qui talibus (neglectui, imo odio habitis melioribus) decipi volunt, imputetur. Nobis tamen vel nihil melius apud ipſos inveniſſe in lucrum cedet non minimum, dum hâc ratione grati agnoſcere cogemur non ſolum reſurrectionem mortuorum fiduciam eſſe Chriſtianorum, ſed & ejus myſteriorum ſcientiam unicum ipſorum privilegium, haud aliis cum ipſis commune. Quod & amplius patebit, ubi proximo capite Mohammedanorum etiam deliria, quibus articuli hujus veritatem adulterant, ſummatim perſtrinxerimus. Lucis, quâ (immenſâ Dei bonitate) fruimur, beneficium magis commendatum reddet, ad tenebras in quibus miſerè ceſpitant alii animum advertiſſe.

Cætera ut omittamus plus quam mira, quæ de eo fabulantur, à Jeſu tandem, qui ipſi لد بباب in porta Luddi occurret, interficiendum ſtatuunt. Plures interim Antichriſtos à Mohammede prædictos aiunt, triginta circiter, licet unum (ut videtur) præcipuum.

V. نزول عيسي الي الارض Deſcenſus Jeſu in terram. Deſcenſurum eum fabulantur عند المنارة البيضا شرقي دمشق apud turrim albam ad partem Damaſci orientalem, &c. cùm ab expugnatione Conſtantinopolitana reverſi fuerint homines, nuntiato Antichriſtum adveniſſe, Mohammedis fidem amplexurum, uxorem ducturum, liberos geniturum, Antichriſtum interfecturum. Magnam ſub ipſo in terra ſecuritatem, rerúmque affluentiam futuram, odio & invidiâ depoſitis, conveni-entibus leonibus & camelis, urſis & ovibus, colludentéque cum ſerpentibus puero, nec ullo alteri damnun inferente: ipſum, poſtquam quadraginta annis in terra permanſerit, fato functurum.

VI. قتال ليهود Bellum cum Judæis, in quo magnam eorum ſtragem edituri ſunt Mohammedani, dum & arbores & lapides ipſos latentes prodent occidendos; excepto rubi genere quod غرقد Garkad appellatur, utpote quod ſit شجر اليهود Arbor Judæorum.

VII. خروج ياجوج وماجوج Eruptio Yagugi & Magugi, de quibus multa tum in Alcorano, tum in traditione à Mohammede accepta habentur, ipſos lacum Tiberiadis (quem vel primi ipſorum penitùs ebibent, adeo ut poſteriores nihil ibi reperientes dicturi ſint, certè fuit hîc aliquando aqua) tranſeuntes uſque ad montem Hieroſolymitanum perventuros, ibique Jeſum & ſocios ipſius in anguſtias redacturos, donec ipſius rogatu perdat illos Deus, implentibus cadaveribus ipſorum terram, donec rurſum Jeſu & comitum ipſius rogatu, mittat Deus aves, quæ illa auferant: eorum arcus, ſagittas, & pharetras ſeptem annis ſuccenſuros Muſlemannos, [k] dein miſſurum etiam Deum pluviam, quæ terram mundet, quo frugibus producendis idonea ſit.

VIII. الدخان Fumus, qui totum terrarum orbem repleturus eſt: cujus mentio in Alcorano, c. 44. quod à fumo titulum habet.

IX. الخسف Eclipſis [Lunæ.] Dixiſſe ferunt Mohammedem futuras ante horam ultimam ثلاث خسوف tres eclipſes, primam in Oriente, ſecundam in Occidente, tertiam in Arabum peninſula.

X. عبادة ذي الخلصة واللات والعزا Cultus [Idolorum] Dhil Chalaſah & Allat, & Al Uzza; revertentibus, ſcil. Arabum tribubus ad Ididolatriam veterem, poſtquam placidè mortui fuerint كل مومن في قلبه مثقال حبة من خردل من ايمان Omnes quibus in corde fuerit fidei vel quantum pondere granum ſinapis æquet, iiſque ſolum quibus nihil ineſt boni ſuperſtitibus. Hoc enim aliàs affirmant ان الساعة لا تقوم الا علي شرار الناس non ſuperventuram horam illam aliis quam hominum peſſimis, poſtquam Deus miſſo vento frigido ſuave ſpirante à parte Syræ Damæſcenæ omnium, quorum cordibus vel minimum fidei inſit, animas exceperit, vel ut fuſiùs rem explicat Al Jannabius, يبعث الله تعالي ريحا طيبة اطيب من المسك وابرد من الثلج فياخذ بها ارواح المومنين ثم يرفع القران فتبقي الناس في الجاهلية مابة عام فلا يكون علي وجه الارض من يقولا لا اله الا الله ثم يقوم الساعه علي اشرار الناس Miſſurus eſt Deus ventum odoriferum Moſcho ſuaviorem, nive frigidiorem, quo fidelium ſpiritus excipiet, dein & Alcoranum ſublaturus, adeo ut maneant homines ignorantia [obruti] centum annos, nemine in tota terra dicente, Non eſt Deus præter Dominum, ac tum ſuperveniet hora illa peſſimis hominum, qui omnibus immerſi erunt vitiis, nullâ boni malique ratione habitâ. Ita & à Mohammede dictum fertur, شرار الخلق من تدركهم الساعة وهم احيا Peſſimi hominum ſunt quos aſſequetur hora ultima, dum adhuc in vivis ſint.

XI. حسر الفرات عن الذهب والفضة Cumuli auri & argenti ab Euphrate retecti. Dictum à Mohammede fertur, لا تقوم الساعة حتي يحسر الفرات عن جبل من ذهب Non inſtabit hora illa donec retexerit Euphrates montem aureum (vel, referentibus aliis عن كنز الذهب theſaurum auri) qui multis exitii cauſa futurus ſit.

XII. خراب الكعبة Deſtructio Caabæ, ſeu Templi Mecchani, ab Æthiopibus diruendi. V. Specimen Hiſtoriæ Arab. p. 117.

XIII. كلام السباع Ferarum loquela, imo & rerum inanimatarum.

XIV. خروج النار من ارض الحجاز Eruptio ignis in regione Hejaz.

XV. خروج القحطاني Manifeſtatio Kahtanenſis, ſcil. رجل من قحطان يسوق الناس بعصاه Cujuſdam è Kahtan, qui homines baculo ſuo aget.

XVI. المهدي Adventus Al Mohdi [q. d. directoris] de quo vaticinatum aiunt Mohammedem, cum dixerit, لا تذهب الدنيا حتي يملك

[k] Confer Ezek. xxx. 9. unde hæc deſumpta. v. Joel. ii. 30. & Apoc. ix. 2.

الله تعالي يجمع الاولين والاخرين من الانس والجن واصناف الحيوانات في المحشر للفصل بينهم Scias (inquit) Deum omnipotentem congregaturum tum qui priùs, tum qui posteriùs vixerunt, tam Homines quam Genios & [cætera] animantium genera in locum quo sistendi sunt resuscitati, ut discrimen inter ipsos ponat. Nobis de hominibus præcipuè agendum. De quibus proximo loco quærendum, quâ formâ, & quomodo se habentes resurgent. Huc spectant multa ipsis à Mohammede tradita, ac imprimis illud ان اهل السعادة من المخلوقات يقومون في الامن والكرامة الي المحشر واهل الشقا بضد ذلك Eas creaturas, quæ felicitatis participes erunt, resurrecturas, ut ad locum conventus accedant cum securitate & honore, quæ verò miseriæ, secus. Sed hæc forsan de aliis etiam affirmantur creaturarum generibus. Quæ hominibus propria ita distribuunt ut perpendantur, primò quæ ad corpus ejusque statum pertinent, secundò quæ ad mentem & fidem. Quod ad primum, asserunt ان العبد يبعث علي الحالة التي خرج عليها من بطن امه في الدنيا Homines eodem statu resurrecturos, quo primum ex utero materno in hunc mundum prodierunt, scil. ut ipsius Mohammedis verbis rem explicant, حفاة عراة غرلا pedibus, reliquóque corpore nudis, præputiatos, quæ ipsi docenti verita ne modestiæ leges nimium violarentur, cum objecisset Ayesha, يا رسول الله الرجال والنسا جميعا ينظر بعضهم الي بعض Heus, Apostole Dei, ergone simul viri & fæminæ se invicem conspecturi? hoc tulit responsum يا عايشة الامر اشد من ان ينظر بعضهم الي بعض O Ayesha, negotium gravius est quam ut alii aliis intuendis [vacent.] Ex eo autem quod præputiatos resurrecturos affirmet, quos ipse circumcidi jusserat, constat ab ipsis credi quod disertis verbis de unoquoque asserit Al Gazalius ان ترد اليه سايرا جزايه في الاخرة restitutum ipsi iri reliquas omnes ipsius partes in mundo futuro; adeò ut corpore undequaque integro resuscitetur. Illi autem quod de nuditate his verbis asseritur, contrarium videtur quod alibi ab ipso dictum perhibetur ان الميت يبعث في ثيابه التي يموت فيها Resuscitatum iri mortuum iisdem, quibus mortuus est, vestibus [indutus,] nisi illud cum aliis ita interpretemur, ut amictu isto non tam corporis habitus externus, quam animi internus, innuatur, intelligaturque الحالة التي يموت عليها من الخير والشر وعله الذي يختم Status quo moritur quis respectu operum bonorum vel malorum, eorum nempe quibus obsignatur, vel quæ ipsi ultimo imputantur, ita (inquit Ebnol Athir) dicunt فلان طاهر الثياب Est ὁ δεῖνα mundis vestibus, cum ipsum بطهارة النفس والبراة من العيب ut animo mundum & vitiorum immunem describere volunt, & quod in Alcorano dicitur وثيابك فطهر Et vestes tuas munda, explicant وصلح عملك opera tua rectè disponas, & è contra فلان دنس الثياب ὁ δεῖνα vestibus squalidis esse dicitur, cum fuerit خبيث الفعل والمذهب factis & vitæ instituto nequam. Hos si sequamur interpretes, effatum hoc non tam ad prius quæsiti præcedentis membrum, quod corpus respicit, responsum nobis suggeret, quam ad posterius quod mentem, ejusque habitus, cùm idem sensu sit, (teste Ebnol Athir) cum eo quo de his quærenti respondent Mohammedis verbis, scil. ان العبد يبعث علي ما مات عليه Resurrecturum hominem eodem, quo se habuit cum occubuit, modo, viz. quod ad الاعتقاد والعلم والعمل fidem, scientiam & opera, vel, ut idem aliàs efferunt Alcorani interpretes, يبعث المومن مومنا والكافر كافرا Resuscitabitur fidelis cum fide, infideles cum infidelitate sua. Atque ab hoc pendere videtur eodémque spectare, quod ulteriùs docuit Mohammedes, de modo quo jam resuscitati ad locum quo omnibus tum conveniendum adducentur, scil. يحشر الناس يوم القيامة ثلاثة اصناف صنفا مشاة وصنفا ركبانا وصنفا علي وجوههم Conventuros homines die resurrectionis in tres species distinctos, primam pedibus euntium, secundam equitantium, tertiam faciebus terræ afflictis incedentium: qui primam constituunt, esse ipsos الذين قلت اعمالهم من المومنين E credentibus illos quorum pauca sunt opera; qui secundam قهم اهل الكرامة والرضوان qui majori apud Deum in honore sunt, ipsique gratos. Unde & illud ab Ali affirmatum, pios, ubi è sepulchris suis egressi fuerint, paratos sibi inventuros بنوق بيض لها اجنحة عليها رحال الذهب camelos albos alatos, sellisque aureis ornatos. In quo & veterum Arabum doctrinæ vestigia sunt manifesta, qui ne cum resurgerent pedibus ire cogerentur, cavere solebant, Camelo secum assumpto. Pag. 160. Sicut ipſe dixit, Tu es filius meus.

OBSERVATU dignum eſt, Maimonidem verba hæc é Pſalmo ſecundo, de Meſſia exponere, quamvis alio forſan, quam rei veritas poſtulat, intellectu; de quo eadem à veteribus etiam intellecta patet ex R. Davidis teſtimonio, licet & ab ipſo, & à recentiorum pleriſque alio dudum detorta fuerint. Sic enim ille, verbis iſtis quæ in libris impreſſis commentarium ipſius in Pſalmum hunc ſecundum claudunt, ויש מפרשים זה המזמור על גוג ומגוג והמשיח הוא מלך המשיח וכן פירשו רבותינו ז"ל ומבואר זה המזמור על זה הדרך אבל הקרוב הוא כי אמרו דודד על עצמו כמו שפירשנו, Sunt qui interpretantur Pſalmum iſtum de Gog & Magog, éſtque Meſſiah Rex Meſſias, atque ita expoſuerunt Doctores noſtri, f. m. éſtque Pſalmus hoc modo explicatus perſpicuus, at [vero] propius eſt dixiſſe ipſum Davidem de ſeipſo, uti à nobis expoſitum. Quid autem illum alioſque, qui in pleriſque majorum veſtigiis uſque ad ſuperſtitionem mordicùs adhærent, hîc permoverit ut in contrariam planè ſententiam ab iis diſcederent, cum fatentibus ipſis omnia ſecundùm eorum mentem optimè procederent, facilè diſcimus ex iis quæ ad eundem Pſal. commentatus eſt R. Salomo Jarchi, quem etiam confitentem habemus רבותינו דרשו את הענין על מלך המשיח ולפי משמעו ולתשובת המינים נכון לפותרו על דוד עצמו Doctores noſtri expoſuerunt [hujus Pſalmi] ſignificatum de Rege Meſſiah, at prout ſonat & ut reſpondeatur Minæis, ſeu Hæreticis, expedit interpretari ipſum de ipſo Davide. Hoc, hoc unum eſt, quod Judæos à Majoribus ſuis etiam verum dicentibus, quibuſcum aliàs errare malunt, quam cum aliis veritatem amplecti, in diverſum ſcientes ac volentes trahit, ſcil. ſi in eorum interpretationibus aliquid quo Chriſtianæ fidei dogmata ſtabiliantur, occurat. Meſſiam ab antiquis talem expectatum qui filius eſſet Dei viventis, diſcimus ex iis quibus Summus Pontifex Dominum Jeſum olim allocutus eſt, [p] Adjuro te per Deum viventem, ut dicas nobis an tu ſis Chriſtus ille filius Dei; & illâ Nathanielis προσφωνήσει, Joh. i. 50. Rabbi, tu es filius Dei, tu es Rex Iſrael: unde illis talem expectandi fiducia? Ex hoc Pſalmo de Meſſiah ab ipſis intellecto. Sic unanimi Doctorum veterum conſenſu, ac traditionis (quam alias pertinaciter tuentur) authoritate, exponi olim ſolitum confitentur, ut vidimus, Kimchius & R. Salomo, at cur non hodiè etiam eodem modo exponatur? periculum eſt à מינים Minæis, ſeu hæreticis, quos vocat; (novimus quos innuat, nec ab eo ita appellari pudet,) hâc enim ratione ſuppeditarentur ipſis argumenta, quibus Chriſtum filium Dei, ideoque & Deum patri ſuo ὁμοούσιον, probent. Cedat ergò Majorum autoritas, cedat traditio, imo obliteretur prorſus ac oblivioni tradatur, & quaſi obtorto collo ipſi Davidi (quem filium à Deo genitum appellare, durum admodum erit) tribuantur quæ hic dicta ſunt omnia, potius quam ut inde Chriſtianorum cauſæ tantum lucri accedat. At nos R. Salomoni, quamvis hæreſeos notam immeritò nobis inurenti, & novam interpretationem cudenti, ob hæc ab ipſo prolata, non uno nomine gratias agimus, tum quod majorum ſententia quænam fuerit, nobis indicat, & quam ob cauſam eadem recentioribus minùs placeat; tum quod, dum nobis tela quibus veritatem propugnemus eripere conatur, ea adverſariorum contra ipſam militantium manibus excutit. Hac enim ratione concidere prorſus videtur, ea (ſi ullius momenti fuerit) Antitrinitarii apud Nobiliſſ. Virum, Joſephum de Voiſin, objectio, nullam æternæ Chriſti exiſtentiæ, communíſque cum Deo patre eſſentiæ, in Judæorum ſcriptis reperiri mentionem. At nec unquam in eorum antiquitùs interpretationibus ullam ejus notitiam fuiſſe ne hinc colligat, en fatentem Judæorum non infimum aut indoctiſſimum, aliter olim nonnulla à Majoribus intellecta quam nunc ab eorum poſteris explicentur: ídque non cogente veritate, ſed ne Chriſtianis nimium largiantur. Quod de uno loco fatetur, quid ni & aliis factum meritò ritò ſuſpicemur, ut ubicunque occurrerent quæ divinitatis Chriſti aſſertioni faverent, in alium ab ipſis ſenſum pertracta fuerint? Quòd ſi vel hunc ſolum Pſalmum ab ipſis de Chriſto intellectum fuiſſe convincamus, ſufficiat ad ejus cavillas retundendas, dum qualis hic deſcribitur, Dei filium, non adoptione factum, ſed genitum, neceſſe eſt ut & ipſum Deum fateamur, & quæcunque illi attribuimus elogiis & epithetis celebrandum. Verborum vim, ſi de Chriſto intelligantur, facilè agnovit Kimchius, ideoque eorum teſtimonium cavillis neſcio quibus, ab ordinaria naturæ rerumque inferiorum lege, (quam ubi de Dei rebus agitur nullum habere locum ipſorum ſtatuunt doctiſſimi) petitis eludere conatus eſt, ut in iis quæ ad calcem ipſius in Pſalmos commentatiorum, edente Fagio, addita ſunt, nec non ad finem hujus ipſius Pſalmi, in MSS. quibuſdam codicibus videre eſt. Eandem agnoſcunt etiam Mohammedani, ideoque nullo modo volunt ut de Chriſto dixerit Deus Immortalis, Tu es filius meus, ego hodie genui te. Sic enim aliunde quam à Deo conſtabit profectum πολυθρύλλητον illud Alcorani capitulum, quo totam Chriſtianorum fidem uno ictu ſe confodere autumant; illud, ſcil. الاخلاص Alechlas dictum, totius voluminis antepenultimum, قل هو الله احد الله الصمد لم يلد ولم يولد ولم يكن له كفو احد Eſt ipſe Deus unus, Deus æternus, qui nec genuit, nec genitus eſt, & cui nullus eſt æqualis. Quomodo ergò nodum hunc ſolvunt? eo quo Judæi modo, ut verba de alio interpretentur, eáque ſenſu improprio intelligant? Minimè vero hoc auſi ſunt; ſed ut ea malè à Chriſtianis legi aſſerant: ita ſcil. teſtibus Ebnol Athir, & Kamuſii authore ab illis ولدتك Waladtoka genui te, pro ولدتك Walladtoka fovi vel educavi te, ſubſtitui aſſerunt, & pro نبي Nabiya Propheta meus بني Bonaiya, filius meus. التوليد Altawlid (inquit Al Firuzabadius) eſt التربية educatio, inde قوله الله عز وجل لعيسي صلي الله عليه وسلم انت نبي وانا ولدتك اي ربيتك فقالت النصاري انت بنبي وانا ولدتك تعالي الله عن ذلك علوا كبيرا, dictum Dei Omnipotentis ad Jeſum (cui propitius ſit & pacem concedat Deus) Tu es Nabiya Propheta meus, Ego Walladtoca, fovi te; at dixerunt Chriſtiani, Tu es Bonaiya filius meus, Ego Waladtoca, *te genui. At iſtam R. Salomonis, quam laudavimus, confeſſionem, quâ ideo veterum interpretationem à recentioribus rejectam fatetur, quo faciliùs Chriſtianorum argumentis occurrant, negando, ſcil. de Chriſto intelligi debere Pſalmiſtæ verba, à nobis confictam eſſe dicat quiſpiam, cùm in iis quæ vulgo hominum manibus teruntur, editionibus non occurrat: fatendum nec in editione Baſileenſi à Clariſſimo Buxtorfio adornatâ, nec in Venetis recentioribus reperiri verba לתשובת המינים in reſponſum Minæis, ſeu hæreticis, quæ tamen editiones antiquiores agnoſcunt. Ab iis quibus in Judæorum ſcripta inquirendi, eáque corrigendi authoritas delegata eſt, ideo eraſa videntur, quod probroſum τῶν Minim nomen Chriſtianis affigat: at majori, ni fallor, cauſæ Chriſtianæ incommodo. Verba interim iſta, quà caſtrata, quà in integrum reſtituta, duas nobis cauſas ſuggerunt ob quas quid de Chriſto, tam qualis ab ipſis expectatur, quam qualis à nobis colitur, dixerint Judæi, integrè ſcire vix liceat, unam à Judæis ipſis, alteram à Chriſtianis profectam. Illa quæ à Judæis, quòd ſi quas Antiqui S. Scripturæ interpretationes illis tradiderint, quæ fidei Chriſtinæ faventiores videantur, eas eam ipſam ob cauſam mutari & forſan celari, è re ſuâ crediderint recentiores, quod dum hoc loco, (ut & Pſalm. xxi. 1. iiſdem fere quibus hic uſus verbis, nec tamen ut hîc deletis) factum teſtatur R. Salomon, pluribus etiam contigiſſe vix dubitamus; adeoque ſi quis nihil quod cauſam noſtram adjuvet in Judæorum ſcriptis, qualia nunc habentur, reperiri objiciat, parum in hoc momenti ſitum eſſe judicamus, eandémque ob rationem ferè perſuaſi ſumus ut de Galatino mitiùs quam plerique ſententiam feramus. Suſpectæ apud multos fidei habetur quod authores laudet Hebraicos, qui jam in Chriſtianorum manus non perveniant. At quid ſi à Judæis, ideo ne perveniant, clam habitos? quod facile factu fuit cum libri alicujus nondum typorum beneficio propagati, pauca admodum, & ſingularia

forſan, exemplaria reperirentur. Qui majorum, quos maximè venerantur, interpretamenta rejicere non dubitant, לתשובת המינים ut hæreticis, quos vocant, occurratur, quid ni eandem ob cauſam, eorundem dicta vel ſcripta Chriſtianos celare, (maximè cùm contra ſe ab ipſis ea torqueri viderent, eumque in finem pervolvi) non inutile judicarent? Altera quæ à Chriſtianis, quod cum Judæos recentiores blaſphemias nimis frequentes evomere obſervarent, quos penes arbitrium erat, minimè id ferendum rati, eorum ſcripta iiſdem purganda curaverint, quo pacto ſimul & ea aliquando ſublata, quæ forſan Chriſtianorum ſcire intereſſet, & ſenſus planè mutilus non paucis in locis redditus. Utrique occurri non aliter poteſt quam ſi in manus inciderit vetuſta librorum ejuſmodi exemplaria, quorum qui primam ob cauſam è medio ſublati, recuperandorum neſcio an ſpes tanta ſuperſit; nec multum refert, cum ſcripturas ab iis integras atque intemeratas acceperimus; at qui ob ſecundam, faciliùs reſtitui (ſi è re videatur) poſſint, dum & in Judæorum, & Chriſtianorum forſan manibus ſint exemplaria Cenſoris obelum non experta; vel ita ſaltem ut quid ibi ſcriptum priùs fuerat à nemine Judæorum ignoretur. De priori ergò, quæ à paucis forſan animadverſa, nihil hic amplius addemus: de ſecunda frequens eſt in ore hominum querela, Inquiſitorum operâ caſtrata atque mutilata eſſe Hebræorum ſcripta, adeo ut ſenſus ſæpe haud integer fluat: neque tolli interim blaſphemias Judæorum, ſed augeri, dum eas jam liberè, nemine arguente aut refutante, apud ſuos eructent. Chriſtianos ſiquidem tantùm, hoc pacto, clam fieri, Judæis eas vel memoriâ tenentibus, vel ad marginem librorum ſuorum, ubi ſublatus fuerit Cenſoris metus, adſcribentibus [q]. Ipſe equidem, dum ea, quæ de primâ libros ipſorum expurgandi & virgulâ cenſoriâ notandi causâ, memoriæ prodita ſunt, recogito, haud auſim, aliter quam gravibus de cauſis Principes viros hoc fieri juſſiſſe, ſummáque cum prudentia ab iis quorum curæ demandatum eſt, initio factum pronuntiare, nec dubito hâc ratione factum ut libri nobis ita purgati ſervarentur, quos aliter prout tunc ſe res haberent, dumque in Chriſtianam religionem ubique virus ſuum effunderent Judæi, integros tolli efflagitâſſet Chriſtianorum zelus. At mutato jam aliquantum, ut rerum civilium, ita & literarum ſtatu, evenit ut non minori ardore jam flagrent nonnulli ea videndi quæ ſublata ſunt, quam olim alii eadem tollendi. His igitur me rem non ingratam, & nullis injuriam, facturum arbitror, ſi loca aliqua in eorum ſcriptis notem, quæ cum Cenſorum (ut videtur) manu deleta in libris impreſſis deſiderentur, nullâ interim notâ ſignata, cæteriſque inter ſe continuatis, quaſi nihil omnino deeſſet, ſenſum aliquando imperfectum reddant, & lectorem perplexum habeant. Exemplum (ni fallor) ne gratis hoc dixiſſe videamur, luculentum præbebit locus iſte, qui Jer. xxxi. ver. 22. occurrit, כי ברא יהוה חדשה בארץ נקבה תסבב גבר. Quia creavit Dominus novum in terra, fœmina circumdabit virum. Quæ verba explicans Summus Vir Johannes Calvinus, Merito rideri ait à Judæis eorum ſententiam, qui hæc de Maria Virgine, quæ in utero ſuo Chriſtum geſtaverit, interpretantur, quod tamen Chriſtianos fere uno conſenſu feciſſe dicit. Haud certe mirum eſt à Judæis explodi quamlibet, quæ ad Chriſtianorum fidem ſtabiliendam faciat, interpretationem. At merito hanc ab ipſis riſu excipi non adeo conſtat. Mihi equidem omnium quæ adducuntur optima videtur, cum reliquæ planè frigidæ ſunt, quas afferunt ſive Chriſtiani ſive Judæi, adeo ut ſi hæc vera non ſit, nondum quis rectum verborum ſenſum aſſecutus videatur. Si dicant mulierem virum ambituram ſeu amplexaturam, cum vir alias mulierem ambire ſoleat, quæ Kimchii ſententia eſt, quid adeo in hoc mirum, ut ideo novum creaſſe dicatur Dominus in terra? Annon hoc inter Judæos lege יבום ſeu Leviirationis (ut loquuntur) & fieri debuit, & ſæpius factum eſt? ſic pia mulier Ruth Boazum ambivit. Imo & ut mulier, quæ à marito ſuo alienata aliis ſe adjunxerat, ad ipſum, facti ſui pœnitentiâ ducta, redire cupiat, non adeo inter homines inauditum videtur, ut novæ creationis opus dici mereatur. His addendum, nullum parilis ejuſdem verbi סבב uſus [l] exemplum à Doctiſſimo iſto Grammatico, cauſæque ſuæ minimè negligente, proferri, quo hæc ipſius interpretatio confirmetur. In ſuis ad locum iſtum commentariis rem ſic explicat, ומה היא החדשה כי נקבה תסובב גבר שדרך עולם שהאיש מחזיר ומסובב אחר האשה וכן אמרו רבותינו זל' בעל אבדה מחזר על אבדתו ואז הנקבה תסובב אחר אישה כלומר שישובו בני ישראל אל ה' אלהיהם ויגאלם, Et quid eſt novum iſtud? quòd fœmina teſobeb gaber. *Mos enim mundi eſt ut vir revertatur & circumeat poſt mulierem, atque ita dixerunt Doctores noſtri f. m. evaſerint. Cum ergò hic expectandum ſit aliquid dignum præfatione iſta, qua ſe novum quid in terra creaturum dicit Dominus, nec tale aliquid nobis exhibeant quas vidimus ſententiæ, quid ni illam, in quam Chriſtianorum tam veterum quam recentiorum plerique eunt, de miraculoſa Chriſti in utero virginis conceptione, amplectamur. Nihil eſt præter inſolitam miraculi naturam, quod nobis objiciant Judæi; (at nihil hic ſolitum expectare jubentur) nihil quod rideant, cum maxime uſitatum, & genuinum verbi intellectum ſequamur. Ait enim Kimchius in Radicibus, de diverſis thematis סבב ſignificatibus verba faciens, ענין כולם וכל אשר הם מזה השרש ענין סובב והקפת הדבר, Iſtorum omnium atque omnium ab iſta radice oriundarum intellectus eſt circuitio & circundatio rei, ideoque R. Judam contra R. Jonam (ut Ebn Jannahium appellat) tuetur, quod hunc ſolum thematis iſtius ſignificatum ſtatuerit; cum reliqui omnes ad eum neceſſario reducendi ſint, ſcil. ad הסיבוב והקפה, circuitionem & circumdationem. Hunc ergò nobis amplecti liceat, ridentibus licet vel ringentibus adverſariis, ut ita verba hæc à fœmina circumdatum, non ordinaria naturæ, ſed novæ cujuſdam creationis lege, virum nobis deſcribentia, ad Chriſtum à Maria Virgine in utero geſtatum manu ducant. Si nomini etiam גבר, quod non maſculum ſimpliciter, ſed Virum & viribus pollentem denotat, eximiam quandam Emphaſin tribuamus, quâ Chriſti, qui & adhuc in utero incluſus divina fortitudine plenus fuit, excellentiam innuat, nec eſt cur hoc rideant Judæi, cum ipſorum majores teſte Abarbinele per גבר hic הגבור האמתי, vere potentem, Deum, ſcil. ipſum intellexerint: Quod ſi Galatino fides adhibenda, & inter ipſos olim fuerunt, qui diſertis verbis hunc Virum, non alium eſſe quam Regem Meſſiam aſſeruerint: Quorum tamen teſtimonio minime nobis opus eſt, cum res ipſa clamet, nec verba niſi ad ſenſus minus proprios, & conſtructionem duriorem coacta, alii cuipiam aptari poſſint, cum in ipſo adeo omnia ſuaviter conſpirent, ut non immerito Magnus Vir [o] Thomas Jackſonius, Collegii Corporis Chriſti apud Oxonienſes quondam Præſes, dormitare ac ſomniare ſibi videri pronuntiaverit, qui tantum myſterium, dum hæc verba explicant, intactum præterierint. Hoc interim exemplo monuiſſe ſufficiat, ut Sacræ Scripturæ oracula & myſteria non ad Judæorum arbitrium, ſed veritatis normam expendamus. Ponderentur quæ proferuntur ad veritatem Chriſti confirmandam teſtimonia, ne quid momenti levioris inter ea collocetur, quæ pondus ſuum habent, ne, quod adverſarii ea ſe contemnere ſimulent, ultro dedantur. Æquè culpandus eſt miles, qui vel gladio plumbeo hoſtem aggreditur, vel acutum nactus, eum ſibi manibus riſu alterius excuti patiatur.

Nota. Poſtquam hæc prelo ſubjecta ſunt, incidit mihi in manus Doctiſſimi Viri Antonii Hulſii Theologia Judaica, in qua idem de loco iſto Jeremiæ (verſu, ſcil. 22. capitis xxxi.) nobiſcum ſentit. CAP. IX.

Eruuntur è Judæorum traditionibus nonnulla, quæ ad ver. 3 & 4. cap. vii. Evangelii ſecundum Marcum, ubi de ipſorum lotionibus ante cibum & à foro, &c. mentio fit, intellectum faciant; nec non ad voti Corban, cujus ver. 11. meminit, explicationem.

DUM in iis, quæ ſuis in Seder Taharoth Commentariis præmiſit Maimonides, vertendis occupatus eſſem, ea mihi ſæpiſſime occurriſſe fateor, quæ & ſtomacho indignanti nauſeam moverent, & manui feſſæ calamum ferè excuterent. At cum à Celebri iſto Doctore tantopere eadem prædicari, ſuiſque tanquam omnium ſcitu maxime & neceſſaria & utilia ingeri animadverterem, quaſi in ipſis totius religionis Judaicæ medulla conſiſteret, viſum eſt mihi ea noſtris etiam quâ potui fide communicare, quibus cognoſcere quod illi ſibi tam neceſſarium putant, vel eo nomine nec ingratum forſan erit, nec, ſi quid ego ſentiam, inutile. Utilitates enim ex iis quæ de munditiæ & immunditiæ rationibus tradunt Judæi, ſi non alias, has ſaltem percepturi ſumus, quod & meritò ipſis à Chriſto vitio verti probent, quòd gravioribus legis præceptis neglectui habitis ad minutias neſcio quas diverterint, additáſque à ſe doctrinas, Dei mandatis, paleum tritico, corticem medullæ prætulerint, & ad ea quæ iſtiuſmodi ipſorum μαλαιοεργίας exempla affert Evangelium, intelligenda faciant. Quod ut aliquatenus comprobatum demus, mus, iis, quæ Marci vii. Seniorum traditiones vocantur, quarum ut plus æquo tenaces reprehenduntur, ex eorum disciplina lucem aliquam afferre conabimur. Capitis illius versibus 3 & 4, hæc legimus, Οἱ γὰρ φαρισαῖοι καὶ πάντες οἱ Ἰουδαῖοι, ἐὰν μὴ πυγμῇ νίψωνται τὰς χεῖρας, οὐκ ἐσθίουσι, κρατοῦντες τὴν παράδοσιν τῶν πρεσβυτέρων. Καὶ ἀπὸ ἀγορᾶς, ἐὰν μὴ βαπτίσωνται, οὐκ ἐσθίουσι, καὶ ἄλλα πολλά ἐστιν ἃ παρέλαβον κρατεῖν, βαπτισμοὺς ποτηρίων καὶ ξεστῶν καὶ χαλκίων καὶ κλινῶν. Non est mihi animus aliis immorari, sed ea tantum quæ ad traditionum intellectum conferant proferre. Liceat tamen de illis, qui superstitiosæ nimis hujusmodi traditionum observantiæ præcipuè arguuntur, pauca dicere ab instituto non aliena: de [p] Pharisæis nimirum, qui quod à separatione nomen sortiti sunt, vel ob frequentes istas ablutiones, quibus sibi tam à rerum quam hominum pollutione cavebant, ac se ab aliis, quos pro profanis ac pollutis habuere, distinguebant, meriti videantur. Hinc nota illa Pharisæi apud authorem libri Aruc descriptio, הוא שפירש עצמו מכל טומאה ומן מאכל טמא ועם הארץ שאינו מדקדק במאכל, esse, scil. qui se separet ab omni immunditie, à cibo polluto, & à populo terræ [vulgo] qui non adeo accuratam in cibo sumendo diligentiam adhibet, scil. quod forsan aliquando κοιναῖς χερσὶ (ut de Christi discipulis hæc queruntur) cibum sumerent, vel aliquo alio modo negligentiores se præberent. Eodem fere modo & Rambam ad Chagigah, cap. 2. §. 7. פירושים הם אוכלי חולין בטהרה ונזהרים מן הטומאות כלן תמיד וכמו בן שומרין מאכליהן ומשתיהן כדי שיהיו טהורין, Pharisæi sunt qui cum munditie comedunt profana [cibum communem] & continue cavent ab omnibus immunditiei generibus, eodemque modo cibo & potui suo cavent, ut mundi sint. Idem l. Yad. tr. Tumath ocelim, cap. ult. §. ult. אף על פי שמותר לאכול אוכלין טמאין ולשתות משקין טמאים חסידים הראשונים היו אוכלין חוליהן בטהרה ונזהרין מן הטומאות כולן כל ימיהם והן הנקראים פרושים ודבר זה קדושה יתירה היא ודרך חסידות שיהיה נבדל אדם ופורש משאר העם ולא יגע בהם ולא יאכל וישתה עמהם, Quamvis vesci liceat cibis immundis, & liquores immundos bibere, sancti tamen priores solebant edere profana sua [cibum suum communem] cum munditie, & ab omnibus immunditiei generibus cavebant per totam vitam suam, sintque illi qui appellantur Pharisæi. Estque res hæc sanctimonia superabundans, ut separet se homo, atque segregeat à vulgo, neque ipsos contingat, unáve cum illis vescatur aut bibat. Hinc illud à Pharisæis, qui eximium hunc sanctimoniæ gradum obtendebant, Christo objectum, *Quid est quod cum Publicanis & peccatoribus edit ac bibit? Finis certe optatissimus, & quem ad consequendum nulla omittenda sunt media, nulla non adhibenda cura. Cujus turpissimæ fraudis ne se à Christo solo, idque injuriâ insimulatos querantur, pauca afferre liceat quibus à suis etiam larvati isti Doctores depinguntur; ac celebre inprimis est illud R. Josuæ, qui ante Christum floruisse perhibetur, dictum, חסיד שוטה רשע ערום אישה פרושה מכות פרושין הרי אלו מכלי עולם, religiosus fatuus, scelestus, vafer, mulier sancta, & plagæ Pharisæorum mundo exitium ferunt: Laudatur in ipso textu Talmudico, tr. Sotah. cap. 3. §. 4. Ita aliis visum. Inter illos fatetur Maimonides fuisse non paucos qui nomen illud בעצהא כבעז, Declaratum eſt in Toſiphta oportere lavantem manus ſuas Leſhaphſheph, i. alteram alteri affricare, quæ primo obtuitu favere forſan videantur illi verborum πυγμῇ νίπτεσθαι interpretationi, quæ ſonare ea vult pugno in cavum manus alterius immiſſo defricari, (quod ſanè fieri ſolitum putat Scaliger, licet aliud hîc innui dicat) at penitius inſpecta, & ex Rabbinorum mente explicata, nihil minùs quam eo tendere reperientur, nam nec defricatio, quam requirunt, ſordium tenaciùs adhærentium abſtergendarum gratiâ, nec tam manibus in pugnum flexis quam expanſis, fieri ſolita videtur. Huc ſpectant quæ dicunt, הנוטל ידיו צריך לשפשף שפשפה בחבירתה טמאה בראשו או בכותל טהורה, Qui manus ſuas laverit, neceſſe eſt, ut eas affricet, ſi alteram alteri affricuerit, immunda fit, ſi capiti ſuo vel parieti, munda eſt: è quibus hoc elici docet Joſephus Karo, neceſſariam eſſe quidem manuum defricationem, at, contra ac ſonant Maimonidis verba, non שצריך לשפשף שתי ידו זו בזו neceſſe eſſe, ut manuum ſuarum alteram alteri affricet, cum vel capiti, vel parieti eas affricare liceat, ideoque nihil aliud ex nonnullorum mente requiri ait [d] quam לקנח מים שעל ידיו במפה או בשאר דברים, ut abſtergatur aqua quæ manibus adhæſerit, ſive mappâ, ſive re quapiam aliâ ob illud quod in Talmude dictum eſt, כל האוכל פת בלא ניגוב ידים כאילו אוכל לחם טמא [e] ſi quis comederit panem non exiccatis manibus, perinde eſt, ac ſi immundum comediſſet. Ex iiſdem non minus perſpicuè quæ diximus elici videntur. Affricationem iſtam manibus expanſis, non in pugnum contractis, fieri ſolitam, inde patet, quod earundem ad caput vel parietem defricandarum meminit: ad quod neutiquam idonea erit, quæ ita flexa fuerit manus. Deinde nec ad ſordes ſollicitiùs purgandas confricanda manus, cum à manu ad manum tranſferri aliquando confricatione immunditiem, non tolli, doceant. Ideoque cavendum ne niſi utræque prius aquâ perfuſæ confricentur, quod ut his verbis obſcuriùs innuitur, ita [f] à R. Mordechai (ut alios omittamus) in Lebuſh, perſpicue traditur, qui manum unam aquâ madidam, alteri eâdem non ſimul perfuſæ affricare, lotioni rectè peragendæ contrarium eſſe docet; at ſi ſimul eâ perfuſæ fuerint manus etiam poſt affuſionem primam licere ipſas confricare, cum pro una jam habeantur. Quòd ſi integrâ Rebiith ſimul affusâ ambas proluerit, aut eâ in tres, ut in ſuperioribus explicatum, partes totidem vicibus affundendas diſtributâ, tum, צריך לשפשף ידיו זו בזו כדי לקנח יפה כל המים קודם ניגובם במטפחת שבזה נטהרו יפה, oportere ut manuum alteram alteri affricet, quo totam aquam diligenter abſtergat, antequam ipſas mantili exiccet; ita futurum ut optimè mundentur. Hoc interim cavendum monens, ne inter confricandum partem aliquam contingat ad quam non pertigerit aqua; ſecus enim refluente humore illas ſe invicem polluturas. Ex his facile ſtatuere eſt cujuſmodi ſit de qua loquuntur [g] Magiſtri, manuum affricatio, quæ ab ea, quæ pugno alterius manus palmæ inſerto fiat, ſatis diverſa, & vix eam admittere videatur.

Quæ hactenus dicta ſunt ad eam præcipuè lotionem ſpectant, quam מים ראשונים, aquam primam vocant, quâ ſcil. antequam cibum capere liceat purgandæ ſint manus; quam rurſum in primam, ſecundam & tertiam diſtinguunt, prout vel tota ſimul, vel binis, vel ternis (ut vidimus) vicibus, affuſa fuerit, quas tres lotiones pro una habitas fuiſſe veriſſimum eſt. [h] Præter hanc, מים אחרנים aquæ poſterioris, ſeu quâ poſt cibum ἀπονίπτεσθαι ſolebant, mentionem etiam injecimus, de qua adhibenda non minus quam de priori ſolliciti erant; imo vel magis. Nam cum permiſſum aliquibus aliquando fuerit priorem omittere, poſteriorem iſtam ſemper obſervare tenebantur. [i] Ideoque quod in textu Talmudico dicitur, milites in caſtris, פטורין מרחיצת ידים, ad lavandas manus non teneri, explicat Gemara, לא שנו אלא מים ראשנים אבל אחרונים חובה, Non intelligendum hoc niſi de aqua prima, poſteriorem autem debitum eſſe. Utriuſque rationem reddit [k] Maimonides. Ad priorem lotionem non tenentur, מפני שהן טרודין במלחמה, quod belli negotiis anxiè occupati ſunt, poſteriorem negligere vetantur, מפני הסכנה, [l] ob periculum. Hujus e. lotionis neceſſitatem non tam à præcepto aliquo quam à periculi metu eſſe volunt; hoc eſt quod in Talm. c. *Col. curandâ purgatione opus haberet, non video quomodo inter eos, de quibus hîc ſermo eſt, collocandus ſit, cum qui ita ſe habeat, poſt corporis ablutionem non ſecus ſe habeat ad ea quæ cum munditiæ curâ comedi debeant, ac qui illotis adhuc manibus eſt, ſcil. כשני לטומאה, ut ſecundus ad immunditiem propagandam, [c] uſque ad occaſum ſolis, adeo ut ante illud tempus Terumâ ipſi veſci minime liceret. Jam verò de manibus pollutis nihil gravius pronuntiarunt, quam ut eſſent כשני לטומאה, inſtar ſecundi ad polluendum, adeo ut nihil immerſio iſta ad cibum communem capiendum promoviſſe videatur, quo nullibi interdicunt immundis, & ad quem nullibi requiritur à magiſtris totius corporis ablutio. Hîc autem, ut dictum eſt, de eo quod ordinariè ante cibum fiebat, ídque tam ab aliis quam à Phariſæis, loquitur, ad quem ex more nihil gravius poſtulari videtur, quam manuum aquâ affusâ lotio, imò nec ex vi vocis βαπλιζεσθαι, ſi quam maxime urgeatur, & de ipſo Joanne f. Gudgedæ cibum capturo ſermo eſſet, plus quam earum in aquam immerſione purgatio. Quid eſt igitur quod cum prius verbo νίπτεσθαι uſus eſſet, hic de venientibus à foro [d] βαπτίζεσθαι uſurpet? Dicam quod ſentio; cibum ordinarium capturis liberum erat ſive manus in aquarum juſtæ menſuræ conceptaculum, vel fontem immergere, ſive eaſdem eo quem deſcripſimus modo, aquâ affusâ lavare: docentibus paſſim Miſnâ & Gemarâ, & ex ipſis, Maimonide, his verbis, כל הצריך נ' והטביל ידיו במי מקוה אינו צריך דבר אחר, [e] Quiſquis opus habet ablutione manuum, ſi ipſas in aquam conceptaculi intinxerit, non eſt ipſi opus ut aliquid aliud faciat. Imo immerſionem iſtam pro gradu quodam eminentiori purgationis habitam patet ex iis quæ diximus, cum etiam ſacris contrectandis eas idoneas redderet, ad quæ aquæ affuſio ſufficere non cenſebatur. Atque inde eſt quod ait author Lebuſh, כיון שנטילה מועיל לידים כש' טבילה, [f] Cum aquæ affuſio proſit [manibus purgandis] multò magis immerſio [ad idem valet.] Cum ergò utram mallent harum lotionum adhibere poſſent, & ſatis probabile ſit ex iis qui majorem ſanctimoniæ ſpeciem præ ſe ferrent, fuiſſe qui (quod de Joanne iſto, cujus meminimus, aſſerunt) eam quæ graviſſima putabatur obſervarent, non ſine magna ratione uſurpatum videatur verbum quod utramque comprehenderet. Nam quamvis βαπτίζεσθαι ei revera quæ immerſione fit, præcipuè competat, non tamen de ea ſolùm, vel neceſſariò, dici, patere arbitror ex illo quod occurrit Lucæ xi. 38. Phariſæus autem videns admiratus eſt, ὅτι ὐ πρῶτον ἐβαπτίσθη πρὸ τοῦ ἀρίστου, eum non priùs ablutum fuiſſe ante prandium. Ad quæ verba annotat Grotius ἐβαπτίσθη idem eſſe ac ἐνίψατο τὰς χεῖρας. Optimè, licet rei quam reddit, rationem haud ſatis Judæorum diſciplinæ congruam eſſe ex iis quæ ſuperius in medium adduximus liquet. Mallem ergò Rev. Bezæ verbis dicere, τὸ βαπτίζεσθαι idem hic declarat atque τὸ λούεσθαι ϗ χερνίπτειν; modo ita interpretari liceat, ut eo innuatur manus vel merſatione, vel aquæ affuſione purgare. Cum utrovis modo id præſtare liceret, quod tam hunc quam illum comprehenderet, adhibitum videtur vocabulum. Neque enim ſi vel ſolùm aquâ affusâ lavâſſet Chriſtus, fuiſſet quod admiraretur Phariſæus, ne ipſi quidem Phariſæi plus præſtabant. Nec ſi totum corpus merſaſſet, magis idoneum hoc ad prandium commune ſumendum reddidiſſet. Neque tamen hoc conceſſo, ſupervacaneum videtur quod ab Evangeliſta ponitur, qui prius, quid ante cibum ſumendum ordinariè facere ſolerent, narraverat; hîc quid à foro venientes facerent, edicit. Emphaſis enim in verbis ἀπ' ἀγορᾶς, magis quam in verbi νίψωνται in βαπτίσωνται mutatione latere videtur. Cujus vim ut percipiamus, obſervanda eſt & alia adhuc Magiſtrorum regula, quam his verbis nobis ob oculos ponit Maimonides, tractat. Beracoth, cap. vi. Evangeliſta facta fuerit. Niſi πυγμῇ lotis edere nequaquam illis licebat: at hoc ut quis vel ſemel, ídque manè, faceret, ſi domi ſe contineret, & ab immunditia manibus ſuis caveret ad totum diem ſufficeret. Quod ſi in forum prodiret, aliiſque ſe negotiis immiſceret, opus erat ut eas denuo ablueret, quò cibo capiendo idoneus eſſet. Ratio manifeſta eſt. מקדמה שרח מסכת מנחות להרמבם

VISUM eſt mihi huic etiam tractatui quædam præmittere, ſicut in illo de ſacrificiis feci. Dico ergo, Menacoth, oblationes, vel munera, partitione primariâ bifariam diſtribui, viz. in oblationem, quæ unà cum ſacrificio igne conſumitur, eſtque ipſi conſequens (eam ſcil. quæ appellatur oblatio libaminum, quæ ſacrificio iſti neceſſario adjungenda eſt) & oblationem quæ ſeorſim offertur; nec eſt oblatio libaminum. Oblatio autem libaminum comprehendit tam eam quæ totius cœtus, quam eam quæ privati cujuſpiam eſt. Siquidem jam oſtendimus in præfatione ad tractatum de ſacrificiis, genera ſacrificiorum omnia, tam cœtus quam privatorum, quatuor eſſe, Holocauſtum, Sacrificium pro peccato, Sacrificium ob delictum, & Pacificorum. Atque hæc quatuor genera, è quinque animalium generibus deſumuntur, viz. ovibus, bobus, capris, turturibus, columbis, iis quas ibi deſcripſimus conditionibus. Jam ergo dico ad ſacrificium quod è volucribus fuerit, haud requiri oblationem libaminum ullo prorſus modo. Textus Sifri eſt, Poteſtne fieri ut holocauſtum è volucribus requirat libamina? dicere vult, è bobus aut ex ovibus: qui textus eſt in ſectione Neſacim. Eodem modo, cum ſacrificio pro peccato, aut ob delictum, non neceſſe eſt ut adducatur oblatio libaminum, eò quod dicit in ſectione de libaminibus, [b] Ut ſolvatis votum, aut ſponte veſtra, aut in ſolennitatibus veſtris. Et cum dicunt, quicquid adducitur ex voto aut oblatione ſpontanea, requirit libamina, excipiunt ſacrificia pro peccato, & delicto, quæ non offeruntur vi voti aut oblationis ſpontaneæ. Eandemque prorſus ob rationem neque cum primogenito, neque decimis beſtiarum, neque paſchate requiruntur libamina, quoniam horum nihil vel ob votum vel ut ſpontaneum affertur. Ex his omnibus quæ præmiſſa ſunt patet, ad quodlibet è pecoribus holocauſtum aut ſacrificium pacificum requiri libamina, ſive privati alicujus ſive totius cœtus oblationes fuerint, at ad ſacrificium pro peccato aut delicto, non requiri, excepto tantum ſacrificio pro peccato aut delicto leproſi, quemadmodum jam oſtenſuri ſumus. Illud autem quod appellatur Oblatio libaminum, eſt ſimila oleo perfuſa, libamina autem vinum quod unà cum holocauſto aut etiam pacificis offertur; hoc eſt quod dicit, [c] Et vinum in libamen. Hæc omnia, viz. ſimilam [cum oleo] commiſtam, & vinum, appellant libamina, per ſynecdochen, cum nec vinum ſine ſimila requiratur, nec ſimila ſine vino, at ſimul adhibita ſint ex appendicibus oblationum, viz. holocauſti & pacificorum, corum, quemadmodum oſtendimus. Quantitas autem ſimilæ & vini, quæ afferri debet cum holocauſto, eadem eſt quæ & cum pacificis affertur. Diſcrepat autem ſecundum diſcrepantiam ſpeciei ex qua affertur oblatio, & diſcrepantiam ætatis ejus quod offertur; adeo ut ſit triplex quantitatis [differentia;] primò cum fuerit oblatio è genere caprino (perinde autem eſt ſive major ſive minor fuerit [pecus]) aut è parvis generis ovini, viz. agnus anniculus, tum oblatio libaminum, quæ ad harum unamquamque requiritur, ſive plures ſive pauciores fuerint, decima ſimilæ, perfuſa quartâ parte Hin olei, cum vini ad libamen quarta parte Hin, ſive fuerit oblatio holocauſtum, ſive pacificorum; quod ſi holocauſtum illud vel ſacrificium pacificorum, fuerit ovis grandior, quæ Ail ſive aries audit, tum oblatio ad ipſum requiſita conſtat duabus decimis [ſimilæ] perfuſæ tertiâ parte Hin olei, vinique ad libamen tertiâ parte Hin: atque hæc eſt ſecunda quantitas oblationum libaminum. Tertia eſt, ut cum fuerint holocauſtum aut pacifica è genere bubulo (ſive grandior ſive minor fuerit bos, perinde eſt) ſit [Minchah] oblatio ad quodlibet eorum requiſita tres decimæ (partes Ephæ) perfuſæ dimidio Hin olei, cum vini ad libamen dimidio Hin, quæ quantitates duplicantur ſecundum numerum oblationum particularium, ſive privati alicujus fuerint, ſive totius cœtus. Dixit Dominus [d], Secundum numerum quem facietis, ita facietis ſingulis ſecundum numerum eorum. Neque eſt quod ab hâc [regula] excipatur, neque ei addunt vel detrahunt, excepto agno illo qui offertur die feſto Azymorum ſecundo, die quo elevatur manipulus qui eſt Holocauſtum, uti diximus, de quo expreſſè dicit ſcriptura, fore [Minchah] oblationem ipſius duas decimas perfuſas tertia parte Hin olei, & libamina ad ipſum requiſita, quartam Hin vini, ſicut & agni cujuſlibet. Exceptâ etiam leproſi oblatione pro peccato, & delicto, quorum cum utroque [offertur] decima pars Ephæ. Eſt enim oblatio leproſi quemadmodum explicabimus, duo agni maſculi, cum fœmellâ unâ, quæ ſunt oblatio pro peccato, holocauſtum, & oblatio pro delicto, de quorum Minchah dixit, & tres decimæ, &c. Atque hæc eſt Minchah libaminum, quæ comburitur una cum oblatione, viz. vel cum integro holocauſto aut cum partibus pacificorum. Atque hæc ſunt libamina quæ requiruntur ad omnes oblationes, quorum mentionem fecimus, cap. v. Shekalim. Hîc autem ad eadem plenius deſcribenda reverſi ſumus. Atque hæc una eſt Mincharum [oblationum] diſtinctio: Diviſio ſecunda eſt, earum quæ non ſunt ſacrificii alicujus appendices, ſuntque duarum ſpecierum, vel Oblatio privati, vel Oblatio cœtus. Oblationes cœtus tres ſunt; quarum una eſt [e] Omer [Manipulus] elevationis; qui offerebatur feriâ ſecundâ Paſchatis, cujus ritus omnes hoc tractatu deſcrienim totum adoletur. Porro ſequentur in tractatu iſto deſcriptio rationis conficiendi munera iſta omnia, ipſorumque quantitates, quæque vitia illis contingant, ac ritus ipſorum univerſi, atque de his in eo quæritur. Jam autem tibi oſtenſum eſt, munera omnia è ſimila eſſe, exceptis munere Manipuli, & munere Mulieris declinantis, quæ ſunt ex hordeo; munus autem mulieris declinantis privatim, ex farina hordeacea. Neque eſt ex iis quod adoleatur, exceptis munere initiationis & munere ſacerdotis, quodcunque tandem fuerit; nec non munere libaminum, cujuſcunque fuerit. E reliquis enim muneribus offertur pugillus; reliquias comedunt ſacerdotes. Porro his omnibus communes ſunt res iſtæ, quas ſacrificiis communes eſſe, initio ſermonis noſtri de ſacrificiis, diximus. Neque jam ſupereſt nobis quicquam ex iis, quæ præmittere volumus, niſi ut quantitatem decimæ [partis Ephæ] & Hin, quibus duabus menſuris omnia libaminum munera metimur, deſcribamus. Dico igitur nos jam [h] cap. ultimo tract. Peah dixiſſe menſuram cujus capacitas fuerit quatuor digitos tam longa, quam lata, profunda autem duos digitos cum ſeptem decimis digiti, cum ſit digitus quo menſuratur pollex manus ſtaturæ mediæ, appellari nomine Log; ejuſdemque quartam partem vocitari Rebiith. Hin autem, cujus in lege fit mentio, cujus parte quartâ, tertiâ, & dimidio ſcriptura metitur libamina, & oleum munerum, continere duodecim Log. Ac jam liquet libamina agni eſſe trium Log, arietis quatuor, juvenci ſex. Atque his olei menſuris perfunditur ſimila, uti dictum eſt; quin & initio tractatus Edaioth narravi confeciſſe me menſuram Rebiit, idque ſummâ, quâ potui, accuratione, ac comperiſſe ipſam capere vini prope viginti ſex drachmas Ægyptiacas; nec non olei olivi pariter viginti ſex drachmas, cum granis, quorum ob paucitatem nullam habui rationem; adeoque eſſe pondus ejus quod capit Log; è vino aut oleo, ſecundum id quod comperimus, centum & quatuor drachmas Ægyptiacas; Eſhron autem [ſeu, decima] eſt decima pars Ephah, idemque Omer; atque eſt menſura placentæ [ſeu è qua tolli debet ſacerdotibus placenta.] Jam autem hujus etiam menſuræ quantitatem, cap. ii. Challah [de placenta] & cap. i. Edaioth [de teſtificationibus] accurate deſcripſimus, ubi etiam (ſc. in Edaioth) oſtendi comperiſſe me menſuram placentæ, eâ quam confeci menſurâ, continere pondus drachmarum quingentarum & viginti farinæ tritici Ægyptiaci, eandemque prorſus quantitatem ſimilæ Ægyptiacæ, erantque drachmæ etiam omnes Ægyptiacæ. Atque hoc eſt quod viſum eſt præmittere; ſupereſt ut explicationem [Miſnæ] aggrediamur.

[h] Ubi ſe menſuras capacitate potius quam pondere definire ait; quod rebus materiâ diſcrepantibus aliis tenuiori, aliis craſſiori, commune aliquod pondus aſſignari nequeat.

Soli Deo Servatori Gloria.

Lord Biſhop of SARUM.

My LORD,

THE concurrence of ſeveral reaſons, (each of which were ſufficient) have moved me to offer to your gracious acceptance this eſſay. First, My duty to your Lordſhip as my Dioceſan, who may juſtly challenge from me ſome account of my employments. Secondly, That gratitude which obligeth me to acknowledge your Lordſhip's many favours extended to me and mine. And, thirdly, the need of patronage and protection that this Work hath, in regard that there is in it much ſtreſs laid on ſuch part of Learning, (the Oriental I mean,) which of late, if not all along, hath had that unhappineſs, as to be ſcarce able to keep itſelf, not only from neglect, but contempt, as needleſs; at leaſt of no great uſe or neceſſity. In ſome places abroad where it formerly found great encouragement, (if we may believe general complaints,) it hath now little regard, although I doubt not but that it will in good time recover its honour. That it may not be ſo among us at home, it muſt owe to the favour and countenance of men excelling as in authority and dignity, ſo in learning and judgment; in which rank none being more eminent, ſo none will be more ready to afford it then your Lordſhip, who have your ſelf always been a lover of thoſe Studies, and by long experience know and have made known the uſefulneſs of them. I ſhall not here trouble your Lordſhip with giving an account of what is in theſe Annotations done, that being the proper work of the Preface. I ſhall only add, that beſides the former motives, I have a ſtrong encouragement to make this addreſs to your Lordſhip from an aſſured confidence, that whatſover it be that I bring, being the beſt that I have at preſent, and proceeding from thoſe intentions with which it is offered, it ſhall by your Lordſhip be favouredly accepted from the hands of him who is,

My LORD,

Your LORDSHIP's Moſt Humble Servant,

EDWARD POCOCK.

THE PREFACE.

THE main thing in theſe Annotations endeavoured, is to ſettle the genuine and literal meaning of the Text. Seeing it is often very differently rendred by Interpreters, according to their different judgments, from what we read in our Engliſh Bibles; and that in them alſo we have various readings in the Margin, I have laboured, as far as I could, to find out the truth among them, by examining ſuch as I have occaſion to take notice of, by the Original Hebrew, which is the ſtanding rule which was at firſt by the goodneſs of God for ſuch delivered to us by the prophets and holy men divinely inſpired, and hath ever ſince, by his wonderful providence, been preſerved uncorrupt and ſincere.

Of any that ſhall queſtion it, we may aſk when it was corrupted, whether before Chriſt's time or ſince? If it be ſaid before, and as an argument alledged for it, that there is a tranſlation of greater antiquity than his time, viz. in Greek, which ſo much differs from the Hebrew copies which we now have, as to ſhew that in the copy which the authors thereof had, many things were read otherwiſe than in theſe, we are not to be moved by it, except three things be firſt made evident, 1. That the copy which they had was a truer copy than any reſerved among the Jews which might be derived to us from them. 2. That thoſe Interpreters ſtrictly and preciſely followed the letter of their copy, and did not give themſelves liberty of expreſſing what they conceived to be the ſenſe and meaning, either more largely or in different words, or had not ſome notions of the words which are not now ſo uſually known. 3. That the copies which we have of their verſion be genuine and uncorrupted, as they proceeded from them, without mixture or alteration. Which things have not yet been ſufficiently proved, and I ſuppoſe cannot be.

Again, If it had been before Chriſt's time corrupted, it can ſcarce be doubted but we ſhould have heard of it from him, who ſo often reprehending the Jews for their perverſe interpretations of it by the gloſſes of their traditions, we cannot think but he would much more have reproved them if they had corrupted the text it ſelf.

And after his time it is no way probable that it could be altered or corrupted by any concurring malice of the Jews, (as it muſt have been done by a general conſpiration for corrupting all the copies, or elſe would have been a vain attempt) ſeeing it cannot be doubted but that among ſo many thouſands of them, of whom many were converted to Chriſt, and among them divers others (we may well ſuppoſe) like Apollos, mighty in the ſcriptures (Acts xviii. 24.) many had in their hands true copies of it, by which they would have diſcovered any forgery. And from them, that there were copies imparted to other Chriſtians alſo we have reaſon to think, when we find that among them for many years after Chriſt the ſcriptures of the Old Teſtament were read in their churches in the Hebrew language: for that it was ſo among the Syrians we have from a learned [a] man of that nation, who in a book that he wrote in Arabick, concerning divers heads of the chriſtian religion, ſpeaking of their manner of reading the ſcriptures in the church, ſaith, كان في القديم تقرا الكتب العتيقة بالعبرية ومنع عن ذلك مار افريم, i. e. In ancient time the books of the Old Teſtament were read in the Hebrew tongue, till St. Ephraim forbad it: which we cannot think was for any other reaſon, but becauſe they looked on the Hebrew as more genuine and authentick than any tranſlation, not that they had not then tranſlations of the ſcripture in their own language, as we ſhall by and by ſhew to be more than probable.

For theſe and other reaſons, even the care that the Jews themſelves (as is by all known and confeſſed) always took of writing it exactly true, as that whereon their own preſervation depended, we cannot on any probable grounds queſtion the integrity thereof. Yea a learned [b] man, who is looked on to have laboured as much as any to queſtion the integrity of the Hebrew text, doth confeſs that in Chriſt's time, and Jonathan's the paraphraſt, the Hebrew books that they then had were the ſame that we now have. And what then have we farther to be ſolicitous about in this matter? for of thoſe was then the book that our Saviour ſtood up to read in the ſynagogue, and expounded by the ſame Spirit which firſt dictated what was therein written, Luc. iv. 16, 17, &c. and the reading of which he juſtified by aſking the lawyer, who would know what he might do to inherit eternal life, What is written in the law? how readeſt thou? Luc. x. 26. Thoſe the ſcriptures, which he bad the Jews to ſearch, as in which they thought to have eternal life, and as which teſtified of him, Jo. v. 39. and the ſame thoſe of which he ſaith, that He came not to deſtroy but to fulfil them: and that till heaven and earth paſs, one jot or tittle ſhould not paſs from them, till all were fulfilled, Mat. v. 17, 18. and which he ſo often cites and refers the Jews to, and the fulfilling of which he made the rule of what he did and ſuffered. Which his divine approbation of them, without queſtioning the copies they then had of them, may juſtly ſeem to us a teſtimony of the integrity of them at that time, of greater validity than any human teſtimony from any different reading reading in any tranſlation, to make us queſtion it. However theſe arguments may be eluded by ſuch as will be contentious, yet they are ſuch as may well ſway with a ſober mind, that neither before nor after Chriſt's time the Hebrew copies were corrupted, and ſo ought to be our undoubted rule.

The forecited [c] author ſaith, that tranſlations are to be examined by the original text, if any copy of it be uncorrupted, and not that by tranſlations: and that is that therefore, which not doubting thoſe copies that we have to be ſo, I have endeavoured in part to do, ſo far at leaſt as may ſerve to juſtify, or to give account of, that tranſlation of our own which we follow; (and deſervedly, it being ſuch and ſo agreeable to the original, as that we might well chooſe among others to follow it, were it not our own, and eſtabliſhed by authority among us:) which could not well be done without comparing it with others alſo, and bringing all to the original Hebrew, as the teſt, as hitherto it hath had the honour to be eſteemed, and will ſo ſtill have, having on it that divine impreſs which will maintain its right and dignity againſt all that can be oppoſed.

For the end propoſed it was oft neceſſary to look into the ſignification of the words in that tongue, and what ſeveral ſenſes they are capable of, that it may accordingly appear which of ſuch as by ſeveral interpreters are faſtened on them, will be beſt agreeable to the place in which they occur, and according to the conſtruction they are uſed in. For by the different underſtanding of them is that great variety which is amongſt interpreters, of which account cannot be given, much leſs they be thought oftentimes reconcileable, or that all their different verſions proceeded from one fountain, or at leaſt one reading: but looking thereinto it will be made apparent that the variety proceeded not from any variety in their reading, but from the variety of ſignifications of one word: among which ſome have, according to their different judgment, preferred one, ſome another, yet ſo as that all have thought themſelves to follow the ſame original, and ought not preſently to be condemned, as diſagreeable to it. According to this reſpect, ſeveral places in the New Teſtament cited out of the Old, which according to the uſual tranſlations ſeem to differ from them, as there now read in the Old, will be found not to differ at all from them, according to another ſignification which the word, in which the difference is placed, is as capable of as that by modern tranſlators uſually given it, and by them that follow thoſe tranſlators looked on as having no other. As for example's ſake. Where we find, Heb. viii. 9. And I regarded them not, ſaith the Lord, cited out of Jeremy xxxi. 32. where is in ours and other tranſlations read, Although I was an huſband unto them, ſaith the Lord: a man would think that theſe proceeded not from the ſame reading of the Hebrew text, till enquiring into the word בעלתי Baalti in that language, he find that that hath both theſe ſignifications to be an huſband, and to deſpiſe, loath, or not have regard to; and ſo (to omit other examples) in that ſignal place in this prophecy of Micah, chap. v. 2. which being cited, Matt. xi. 6. Thou Bethlehem Ephrata art not the leaſt among the princes of Judah, will ſeem to flow from another reading then what now is read in the prophet, Though thou be little among the thouſands of Judah; till upon enquiry it be found that the word צעיר Tſair, uſed by the prophet doth ſignify as well great or illuſtrious, as little. Then will the difference appear to be from the interpreters taking, ſome the one ſignification, others the other: and that therefore theſe places might be rendred in the Old Teſtament to the ſame purpoſe, that they are in the New. One tranſlation therefore is not preſently to be condemned, becauſe it differs from another, but both are to be tried by the original; and when they may both be found to agree to that, neither is raſhly to be condemned, but with due deliberation and diſcretion, that to be followed which may give the moſt convenient meaning to the place; which may oft be ſo doubtful a caſe, as that a man, though of good judgment and a diſcerning ſpirit, may be put to a ſtand, and will not dare raſhly to determine on either ſide.

This having been obſerved by our tranſlators, they have with great modeſty and ingenuity, we ſee, put various readings or rendrings in the margin of our bibles, as doubting which to prefer, and leaving it to the prudent reader which to chooſe; as if the one and the other were (as the Jews in ſuch caſes uſe to ſpeak) both the words of the living God; both true and agreeable as well to the original words as to the analogy of faith. And ſuch modeſty is by all in interpreting the ſcriptures very imitable, and being obſerved would prevent many quarrels, in which the truth, by raſhly contending for it, is loſt, and ſuch uncharitably cenſured, as forſaking the truth, which did heartily ſeek it, and perhaps did not err from it.

Now for theſe ends, viz. both of finding the one or ſeveral ſignifications of ſome words, where there was any dubiouſneſs or difficulty, and the convenienteſt meaning of them in the place, agreeable to the ſcope or context, I have made uſe of (according to my ſkill) the beſt helps as I could meet with, and thoſe of ſeveral kinds. 1. Such are, the comparing of ſuch places, as the word or expreſſion that is to be explained, occurs in, elſewhere in the ſcripture. 2. The inſpection of ſeveral of the moſt approved tranſlations. 3. The uſe, either of ſuch books as give the ſignification of ſingle words, as, Dictionaries, &c. or elſe labour to give the meaning of them as joined with others, as, commentators and expoſitors. The tranſlations that have been looked into are both ancient and modern; the more ancient, the Greek, (commonly called the Septuagint) and the Latin, (known by the name of the vulgar Latin) and the Syriack and the Arabick verſions. The Greek and Latin have been ſo long known in all places in this weſtern part of the world, and ſo much by many hath been ſaid of them, that it will be needleſs to give any account of them: but the other, viz. the Syriack and Arabick, though well, and only, known in the eaſtern parts, ſo unknown among us, till the late noble editions of the Polyglot Bibles at Paris and London, that it may ſeem requiſite to give ſome. That the Syriac had anciently a tranſlation of the ſcripture into their language, is manifeſt, and ſuch as may challenge priority of the Greek it ſelf, if we may believe them. But for making the matter more clear, we may obſerve that they have two tranſlations, the one done out of the Hebrew, the other out of the Greek. Gregorius Abul Pharajius in his Hiſtory, (which was printed at Oxford in Arabick and Latin) thus tells us, that the Greek verſion made by the LXXII Elders in Ptolemeus Philadelphus's time, which was received not only by the Greeks, but by moſt ſects of the Chriſtians, yet was not followed by the Syrians, eſpecially the more eaſterly ones: for that they had a tranſlation which was called the Simple or plain verſion, becauſe the tranſlators did not in it ſo much labour for elegance of words, which was conformable to the copy of the Jews: but (ſaith he) the more weſtern have two tranſlations, that Simple one which was tranſlated out of Hebrew into Syriack, after the coming of Chriſt, in the time of Addæus (or Thaddæus) the apoſtle; or as others affirm, in the time of Solomon the ſon of David, and Hiram: and another more florid made according to that of the LXXII out of Greek into Syriack, a long time after the incarnation of our Saviour. For better underſtanding what he ſaith, and the opinion of thoſe of that nation, we may farther take notice of what an ancient biſhop (Soaded, Biſhop of Hadetha, cited by the learned Sionita in his preface to the edition of the Pſalms in Syriack and Latin) ſays, that as to the tranſlation of the ſacred books it was thus, the Law, Joſhua, Judges, Ruth, Samuel, David, (or the Pſalms) the Proverbs, Eccleſiaſtes, Canticles, and Job, were done in the time of Solomon, at the requeſt of Hiram King of Tyrus his friend. The other books of the Old and New Teſtament in the time of Abagar king of Syria, by the care of Thaddæus and other apoſtles. Their later verſion I ſuppoſe to have been made by Thomas Heracleenſis: for ſo I find in a Syriack MS. (of which account is given in the preface to the ſecond Epiſtle of St. Peter in Syriack, Greek and Latin, printed at Leiden, An. 1630.) a diſtinction made betwixt the tranſlation which was made in ancient days, and the tranſlation of Thomas Heracleenſis. And ſo in the Old Teſtament in the MS. Syriack copy, is there prefixed to one verſion of the ſtory of Suſanna, that it was according to ܬܫܥܝܬܐ ܕܗܪܩܠܝ the tranſlation of Heracleenſis, (for there are two verſions of that ſtory in the copy, but neither of them may be ſuppoſed to belong to the ancient Simple verſion, as neither probably any of the Apocryphal books; before ſome of which (as the firſt book of Eſdras) is put, That they were conformed to the tradition of the LXXII, and at the end of it, that it was not found in the Simple verſion, and ſo likewiſe before Tobit.) When this Tho. Heracleenſis lived I have not yet met with any certain narration, only I find him ſignalized in a Syrian calendar among their ſaints or holy men, by having his name among thoſe, to whoſe memory the 26th day of Haziran, or June, is conſecrated, which makes it probable that he is not of late ſtanding; which will farther be confirmed, if he be the ſame (as I ſuppoſe he was) of whom Schultingius makes mention in his Bibliotheca Eccleſiaſtica, tom. 3. pag. 106. by the name of Thamas Harchalanus, giving an account of him out of a catalogue of miſſals made by Ignatius patriarch of Antioch, that he tranſlated out of Greek into Chaldee (as he calls the Syriack) the miſſals of John the Evangeliſt and of Clement, about four hundred and ſeven years after Chriſt. But when the Syrians contend for the antiquity of their verſion, we ſee it is for that other more ancient. But beſides what they ſay for themſelves, wherein perhaps they may ſeem to go too high, we have not only from the Greek fathers, but from all our copies of the LXXII it ſelf undoubted proofs of the very great antiquity of ſome Syriack verſion. In all the editions that we have of the LXXII, (except the Complutenſian) as well that out of the very ancient copy in the King's library, as the reſt from other copies expreſſed, we have at the end of Job theſe words, Οὗτος ἑρμηνεύεται ἐκ τῆς Συριακῆς Βίβλου, &c. he is interpreted out of a (or the) Syriack book, i. e. the Bible, (for out of no other book would they have taken words for authentick text.) Which ſhews that there was a Syriack book (or tranſlation) ancienter than any of them: and that it was ſo written in thoſe ancienter copies, out of which any of them were tranſcribed; they all of them, though in other things differing between themſelves, agreeing in it. And this plainly gives us to look on the Syriack verſion as very ancient, which is that which at preſent we ſay, and withal ſeems a ſufficient proof, that (as we above intimated) there was before St. Ephraim's time ſuch a tranſlation among the Syrians in their own tongue, which they might have uſed, if they had not thought the Hebrew more authentick, and as ſo, given that honour to it, as to uſe only it in their churches. If they had not then had any, his forbidding them to uſe the Hebrew had been a depriving them of any uſe of the ſcriptures of the Old Teſtament, which we ſuppoſe was not his mind to do, but only to cauſe them to be read in a more intelligible language, in which he is ſaid to have written comments on it.

But although this be as much as may ſuffice to our preſent purpoſe, yet having fallen on the mention of this matter, it may perhaps not be amiſs by the way, to endeavour to give farther ſome little account of it, which if any think not to be of much concernment, he may paſs it over.

Whereas the laſt chapter of Job in the Hebrew text, and ſuch tranſlations as follow it, ends with the 17th verſe, and theſe words, So Job died being old and full of days, in the Greek called the Septuagint, are added to the quantity of ſeveral verſes more, and that ſo anciently that ſome ſome of the Greek fathers have commented on them as authentick text. [d] Olympiodorus ſaith, that they were delivered as ſo from the apoſtles themſelves; and Polychronius, that they were ſo accounted by the fathers. There is firſt added, It is written that he ſhould riſe again with thoſe whom the Lord ſhould raiſe. Then follows what we mentioned, He (or this man) is interpreted out of the Syriack book, dwelling (or that he dwelt) in the land of Auſitis (or Uz) in the borders of Idumea and Arabia: and his name was Jobab, with other things concerning his wife and a ſon, and his genealogy, as that he was of the poſterity of Eſau, and the fifth from Abraham, and reigned in Edom after Balac, &c. as likewiſe concerning his friends that came to viſit him; after which, in the copy printed according to that very ancient MS. in the King's library, is repeated again a briefer account of Job himſelf, having prefixed to it as before, He is interpreted out of the Syriack book, but in other copies, this is not found. What uſe to make of this we ſhall after ſee. And it is by diverſe ancient and modern taken notice that Aquila and Symmachus, who tranſlated the Old Teſtament out of Hebrew into Greek, concluded that Book as the Hebrew doth, but that Theodotion, who likewiſe ſo tranſlated them, and lived about 180 years after Chriſt, concluded it as the Septuagint doth, with additions out of the Syriack verſion.

But here may be objected againſt what we would thence infer concerning the antiquity of that Syriack verſion, what is by ſome of the Greeks ſaid, that by the Syriack, named in thoſe additions to Job, is meant the Hebrew tongue; to that purpoſe makes what in an anonymous Greek author, (whoſe words were imparted to me by my reverend and moſt learned friend Dr. Thomas Marſhall) prefixed in a MS. copy to Joannes Melala, is ſaid, viz. that it was Origen's opinion that it is ſo. Of what credit that author is I know not, for it is not likely that Origen thought or ſhould ſay ſo. In that commentary on Job, which goes under his name, it is ſaid that that book was written firſt in Syriack, and then done into Hebrew, being poliſhed and completed by Moſes. If ſo, then the Syriack and Hebrew in his opinion were looked on as different. But that book is looked on as ſpurious, and the opinion a groundleſs conjecture. What Origen thought may eaſily be collected out of his epiſtle to Africanus, part of which is ſet forth before the text of Job, by the learned Patricius Junius, printed according to the MS. copy in the King's library, where he ſaith, that thoſe words which follow in the Greek after the 17th verſe of the laſt chapter are not found among the Hebrews, and therefore neither in Aquila, but in the LXXII and Theodotion. Had he thought that by Syriack, out of which it is expreſly ſaid they were taken, had been meant Hebrew, he could not have ſaid they had been wanting in the Hebrew books. However, by others it is ſo ſaid. For ſo Nobilius in his various readings to the Greek tells us, that the Greek ſcholiaſt ſaith that he calls the Hebrew dialect, Syriack, becauſe of the affinity betwixt them, and endeavours to prove it. Of that Greek ſcholiaſt, I can give no account but from him. But in Olympiodorus in the Catena on Job, we have the ſame expreſly affirmed, who having obſerved that Aquila and Symmachus end where the Hebrew doth, but Theodotion hath the ſame additions that the LXXII, then gives his opinion thus, The Hebrew dialect he calls in this place Syriack; then confirms it with thoſe very looſe and unconcluding arguments; becauſe the Syriack language is of very nigh affinity with the Hebrew, having the ſame number of letters (viz. 22.) and then becauſe Judea is comprehended under the name of Syria.

But though this be by him and others, who perhaps looked not much into thoſe tongues, affirmed, we cannot be much moved by it. For beſides that no ſuch words are found in any Hebrew copy, which he himſelf confeſſeth, and ſo deſtroys what he would affirm, if Hebrew and Syriack be one, we cannot think it an opinion generally received by the fathers. Some of them certainly knew, that to ſay Syriack and Hebrew are different things, and would not confound them by calling one the other. Beſides, what we have already ſaid from Origen, St. Chryſoſtome (who living long at Antioch in Syria, could not but know what was meant by the Syriack language,) on the 48th Pſalm, according to the Greek diviſion, in one verſe, cites both the Syriack and the Hebrew, and as diſtinct readings; and ſo Theodoret on Pſalm cxv. and on Jonah iii. 4. to omit many other teſtimonies, ſeveral of which are found in the Greek ſcholiaſt, and Nobilius's notes thereon.

And whereas, as the ſame Nobilius obſerves, ſome ſay that by Syriack is meant Chaldee, that ſignifies nothing, for it will be no more than to ſay, by Syriack is meant Syriack: for theſe are at moſt but two dialects of one tongue, however it hath obtained that that which the Jews retained after their return from Babylon, where they learned it, and loſt much of their own, and framed much to the rules of the Hebrew, be peculiarly called Chaldee, as any that would know more of it may ſee in the learned preface of Ludovicus de Dieu, to his Grammar of the oriental tongues. To this day divers of the Syrians call themſelves Chaldeans, and their tongue Chaldee, and that which we call Chaldee the Jews call ארמי Arami, Syriack. And what then would, if this were granted, be thence concluded, but that either the book of Job was written in the Chaldee dialect, or elſe that there was in it a tranſlation of that book in which thoſe additions were read as authentick text when the Seventy tranſlated it into Greek, and they followed its authority. Neither of which, I ſuppoſe, will be granted; for beſides that, in the Chaldee paraphraſt that we now have, no ſuch additions are found, it is manifeſt that that is of much later date then Ptolemæus Philadelphus his time, and that there was any other in his time in that dialect, which is now loſt, none none can prove, nor will any Chriſtians eaſily grant, although [e] ſome Jews contend for it, and would have the Greek of the Seventy to have been tranſlated out of that, and not out of any genuine Hebrew copy, which is too great a ſlur to be caſt upon it. There is therefore nothing ſaid except they mean it is the Hebrew which is called Syriack, and who ſhould mean ſo? ſurely not the Seventy, who by all are ſaid to have been Jews; they would not ſo far have profaned their holy tongue (as they all call it, by way of excellency to diſtinguiſh it from all others and [f] peculiarly Syriack) as to call it ſo, nor taken for authentick text any thing that they had not found in it; no, nor Theodotion himſelf, ſo long after them, having that ſkill in Hebrew which he had, have confounded thoſe names, nor any ancient Greek who knew ſo much of it as to able to tranſlate it.

There was a time (as we have intimated) after the Jews return from Babylon, when their language had ſo much of Chaldee, or Syriack, mingled with it, as that it might have been as well called Syriack as Hebrew; yet even then was it rather called Hebrew than Syriack, as appears in the New Teſtament. But ſure the ancient proper Hebrew, ſuch as we now ſpeak of, none could ſo call who had any inſight in thoſe tongues, except for ſome deſign; ſo that to ſay that by Syriack is meant Hebrew, muſt be the aſſertion of ſome Greeks, who were either ignorant of thoſe languages, or elſe were unwilling to attribute too much to the Syriack, or give preference to it, above the Greek verſion, as ancienter than it. They might as well tell us that Jacob ſpake Syriack, when he called the heap Galeed as well as Laban, who called it [g] Jegar Sahadutha. But if it be granted them, that by Syriack in thoſe words in the Greek was meant Hebrew, how then will they unriddle how that which, according to them, was anciently a part of the text in the Hebrew, and thence as ſo, taken into the Greek, is now wanting in all the copies in that language, and was likewiſe omitted by Aquila and Symmachus, who undertook the tranſlation of the whole that was looked on as authentick? they will not be able to give any rational account of this. But to us, who look on as meant by Syriack that language properly ſo called, it will be no difficulty. For if it be aſked how it ſhould come to paſs that thoſe additions ſhould ſo anciently come into the Greek verſion, being not in the Hebrew, but ſaid to be taken out of the Syriack book, the anſwer, I ſuppoſe, will be eaſy. Some anciently among the Syrians, (whoſe cuſtom of inſerting notes or Scholias in their copies may be perceived out of ſuch as are taken notice of, in the various readings of the Syriack in the Polyglot Bibles, gathered by the learned Mr. Thorndike) had ſomewhere in his copy of the Syriack tranſlation to the book of Job added for explication ſake, according to what he had either by tradition, or out of ſome hiſtory then extant, received concerning the perſon of Job that brief account of him, not unlike to which, though not quite the ſame, there are found prefixed to it in two copies in that language, which were made uſe of in the edition of thoſe Polyglot Bibles, two in ſomething different terms, and one ſhorter than the other; as he that pleaſeth, may ſee in the various readings of the Syriack in that book. This, thoſe that copied out anciently, thoſe verſions of the Septuagint and Theodotion, (for it will be too much to ſay the authors of them themſelves, eſpecially of the firſt, if they were truly the Seventy, who commonly bear that name) finding in ſome ſuch old Syriack copy, thought worth while to tranſlate into Greek, and add in their own at the end. (Yea ſo, as in differing copies they found ſuch account given in differing terms, to take notice thereof alſo, as appears by what is done in the ancient MS. of the King's library, as we have mentioned.) Which other tranſcribers after continued, till what was ſo added was in time taken in as part of the genuine text; with inanimadvertency enough, ſeeing the appendix, as is well noted in the various lections to the Francfort Greek edition, doth not redolere ſtilum Canonis, ſavour of, or any way agree with, the ſtile of the canonical text. And this being obſerved, the meaning of thoſe words, He (i. e. Job, his perſon, not the book, as the author of the comment, called Origen's, ſeems to think) is interpreted, will be, account is given of him in the following words out of the Syriack book (or verſion.) That expreſſion is agreeable, as to the uſe of the word ἑρμηνεύεται and μεθερμηνεύεται, &c. (to be interpreted,) in the New Teſtament and other authors, ſo to what is uſual among the eaſtern people, and peculiarly in the Arabick writers to call the account given of the genealogy, name and hiſtory of any, ترجمته Tarjamatoho, his interpretation (as often in that famous writer of lives Ebn Chalican, and Others) and perhaps in the Syriack book might be written הוא מתרגם זכר Hu Methtargam, He is thus interpreted, i. e. account is thus given of him.

This conjecture is abundantly confirmed by what we read in Polychronius forecited, who witneſſes that thoſe additions to Job, however by many received into the text, whoſe opinion himſelf followed becauſe of the authority of the Fathers, yet were by others rejected; "They "(ſaith he) reject the genealogy which is in the end, becauſe it is not in the Hebrew, and "the book is concluded with thoſe words, And Job died being old and full of days, and ſay, "that the likeneſs of the name in the genealogy of Eſau, which is in the book of Geneſis, "where mention is made of Jobab, gave occaſion of error to ſome, and of making that "ſcholion, or note, and that in tract of time afterwards, that which was written in the margin (or elſewhere) was by others taken into the text."

However it were, yet theſe things which have been ſaid, taken at the leaſt advantage, give teſtimony to the antiquity of the Syriack verſion. That which was mentioned in the ancienteſt copies of

of the Septuagint and Theodotion, which were ſeen and uſed by the Greek Fathers, and had ſuch credit when they were written as to be taken notice of as of great authoriry, and little leſs authentick than the text itſelf, muſt needs be ancient. I hope none will think this to be eluded by ſaying that Job alone was then tranſlated into Syriack, and not other books of the ſcripture; this would be a ſuppoſition contrary not only to the teſtimony of Syriack writers and others, which ought not raſhly to be contemned, but to all reaſon.

Something to this purpoſe may be collected alſo out of the concluſion of the book of Job in the printed Arabick verſion, in which that which makes the 18th verſe in the Greek, viz. It is written that he ſhould riſe, &c. is not found, nor that which follows, He is interpreted out of the Syriack book, but moſt of the reſt, (after a breach made) is, though ſomewhat different from what is in Greek: for whereas in it is ſaid, that he was the fifth from Abraham, the Arabick ſaith he was the ſixth, with ſome other differences in the Arabick it ſelf, but made more by the miſtake of the Latin tranſlator, as he that ſhall look into it ſhall eaſily perceive, as where inſtead of Aſom, a proper name, he puts nomen, becauſe the word, ſo ſignifying, hath the ſame letters with the other. And then he concludes, ſaying that the author of the copy, out of which he wrote it, ſaith, that this book was tranſlated out of Syriack into Arabick. Whether that author meant it of the whole book, or only of the additions, may be doubted, as alſo ſome other things which cannot be farther determined without ſight of his MS. copy. However, it appears that the Syriack verſion was then in great authority and veneration. I have been long in this digreſſion, not ſeeking to attribute more to the Syriack verſion than may in reaſon be due to it, but to vindicate to it that which it may juſtly challenge, as to its antiquity. To return and proceed,

We reckon likewiſe among the ancient tranſlations, the Arabick, though all of much later date than the former. In that language there are ſeveral verſions, ſome done out of the Hebrew, ſome out of Greek, ſome out of Syriack, and perhaps one of late years done and printed at Rome out of the vulgar Latin, as I was told by one of that church, was intended, and I have ſeen ſome ſheets of it, but I know not whether it were completed. However, that is none of thoſe we ſpeak of. Thoſe that I had to deal with are two, the one, that which is found in the Polyglot Bibles, which when, or by whom, done is uncertain; it is conformed moſtly to the Greek; in this part, I mean, of the Minor Prophets; for the whole Bible is apparently not of one texture, but in ſome parts ſeems more conformed to the Hebrew, (as in the Pentateuch) in others to the Syriack, in others to the Greek, as he that peruſeth it will find. The other is a Manuſcript, the uſe of which I had out of the ſtore of my learned and very good friend Mr. Robert Huntington. There is no name of the author expreſſed (that I find) in the copy. Whether it be the work of R. Saadiah Haggaon (a Jew famous as for his other works, ſo for his tranſlation of the books of the Old Teſtament, out of Hebrew into Arabick) I have reaſon to doubt, ſeeing the prophecy of Iſaiah, which is in the ſame volume, differs from what I find in another copy of that prophecy, which bears his name. And it is certain that others of the Jews, beſides him, did tranſlate the ſcriptures (or part of them) into that language, and therefore if it be any where by me cited as his, it is not poſitively affirm'd, and I almoſt think it is not his. Whoſe ever it be, it ſeems to be of ſome antiquity, for it is not of late years that the Jews have uſed to write in Arabick, as formerly they did, as is ſhewed in the preface to Porta Moſis. Whether we ſhould reckon Jonathan, who made a paraphraſe of the prophets, among tranſlators or expoſitors, I ſomething doubt, becauſe taking liberty of a paraphraſt, he rather makes his buſineſs to give the meaning than the particular ſignification of the words, which is more the buſineſs of a ſtrict tranſlator; although every ſuch tranſlator too may not amiſs be looked on as an expoſitor or commentator. This paraphraſe is of great authority with the Jews, and is conſtantly affirmed to have been made much about Chriſt's time; and I know not why we ſhould queſtion it. For thoſe allegations againſt it, which are brought out of that paraphraſe of the law, which goes under the name of Jonathan, and hath beſides the difference of the ſtile, many things in it ſavouring of greater novelty, ſignify nothing, that being confeſſedly none of this Jonathan's work, and therefore is as the other paraphraſes, on the other books, of much leſs authority (if any at all) than that of Onkelos on the law, or the true Jonathan on the prophets.

Beſides theſe ancient verſions, it was convenient to look on others more modern; ſuch are thoſe of Pagnin, the Tigurin, Munſter, Caſtalio, Junius and Tremellius in Latin, and Diodati in Italian, &c. which will be found ſometimes cited. Theſe often differing among themſelves, and from the ancienter, and from ours, give us occaſion to examine the words in the Hebrew, and to enquire more narrowly into the grounds of the difference, and to ſee what the original will bear, that ſo we might be able to judge between them, which not ſeldom will be an hard matter to do, and force us to leave the reader to prefer that which ſeems to him beſt in his own judgment, ſeeing that will bear more, by reaſon of the different uſe and ſignification of the words that occur in it, and all making a good ſenſe. When I have occaſion to cite the vulgar Latin, I have moſtly choſen to give it in the words of the Doway tranſlation into Engliſh out of it, as that which perhaps would be judged more authentick than any rendring of mine own. In the uſe of our Engliſh tranſlation I would deſire the reader to have an eye to the marginal reading, together with what is in the text.
